290.615. 1. Employers shall retain records documenting hours worked by employees and earned paid sick time taken by employees, for a period of not less than three years, and shall allow the Department access to such records, with appropriate notice and at a mutually

agreeable time, to monitor compliance with the requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. To the extent permitted by law, the Director may inspect such records, and the records shall be open for inspection by the Director by appointment. Where the records required under this section are kept outside the state, the records shall be made available to the Director upon demand. Every such employer shall furnish to the Director on demand a sworn statement of time records and information upon forms prescribed or approved by the Director. All the records and information obtained by the Department are confidential and shall be disclosed only on order of a court of competent jurisdiction.

3. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department or Director to access or inspect records or to create forms relating to the inspection of records if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.618. 1. The Department may, in accordance with chapter 536, promulgate rules for the implementation, enforcement, and administration of sections 290.600 through 290.642. Any rule or portion of a rule, as that term is defined in section 536.010, that is created under the authority delegated in this section shall become effective only if it complies with and is subject to all of the provisions of chapter 536 and, if applicable, section 536.028. This section and chapter 536 are nonseverable and if any of the powers vested with the general assembly pursuant to chapter 536 to review, to delay the effective date, or to disapprove and annul a rule are subsequently held unconstitutional, then the grant of rulemaking authority and any rule proposed or adopted after November 5, 2024, shall be invalid and void.

290.621. 1. The Department may investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to $500 per day of each day of a continuing violation. A final decision of the department is subject to review in accordance with the provisions of chapter 536.

2. The Department may develop and implement an outreach program to inform employees, parents, and persons who are under the care of a health care provider about the availability of earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642. This program may include the distribution of notices and other written materials to child care and elder care providers, domestic violence shelters, schools, hospitals, community health centers and other health care providers in Missouri.

3. A municipality, county, city, town, or village may adopt ordinances, rules, and regulations to investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, with respect to employers within, or employees performing work while physically present in, the geographic boundaries of the municipality, county, city, town, or village. Any such ordinance, rule, or regulation shall be consistent with this law and any Department rules or regulations and system for compliance and enforcement. The municipality, county, city, town, or village may exercise such powers as allowed by any applicable charter or ordinance, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to the maximum allowed for an ordinance violation. Before investigating or seeking to resolve any complaint between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall give notice to the Department with a copy of the complaint and, within 14 days of such notice, the Department may intervene as of right and participate in the matter to ensure that the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642 or, alternatively, the Department may institute its own proceedings in which case the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall refrain from acting on the matter so long as the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642. If the Department does not, within 14 days, intervene or instigate its own proceedings, the municipality, county, city, town, or village may, without the Department, investigate and attempt to resolve the complaint and take other additional means within its power to enforce sections 290.600 through 290.642 against the subject of the complaint. In no event shall an employer be subject to compliance proceedings arising out of a single set of facts after having already been subjected to a final compliance order by another governmental entity.

4. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department, a municipality, county, city, town, or village to conduct investigations and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, to establish and implement a system to receive or resolve complaints, to establish additional means of enforcement, or to conduct outreach and education, including the creation of notices and other written materials, concerning sections 290.600 through 290.642, if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.624. 1. Any employer who willfully violates or fails to comply with any of the provisions and requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be guilty of a class C misdemeanor; provided, however, that an employer who willfully violates the notice and posting requirements of section 290.612 shall be guilty of an infraction.

2. For purposes of this section, each day of violation or failure to comply and each employee affected shall constitute a separate offense.

290.627. 1. Any individual who claims to have been aggrieved by a failure of an employer to comply with any portion of sections 290.600 through 290.642, including but not limited to the failure to provide earned paid sick time or to allow employees to use such time consistent with sections 290.600 through 290.642, or who claims to have suffered a retaliatory personnel action, shall have a right of action and may commence a civil action in the appropriate court of jurisdiction within three years of the accrual of the cause of action, to obtain appropriate relief with respect to such unlawful violation. Such action may be brought without first filing an administrative complaint.

2. In a civil action under this section, if the court finds a violation has occurred, the court may grant as relief, as it deems appropriate and to the extent permitted by law, any permanent or temporary injunction, the full amount of any unpaid earned sick time plus any actual damages suffered as the result of the employer's violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642, an additional amount equal to twice any unpaid earned sick time as liquidated damages, costs, and reasonable attorney's fees as may be allowed by the court, and other legal or equitable relief as may be appropriate to remedy the violation, including, without limitation, reinstatement to employment and back pay.

290.630. 1. Except as otherwise required by law, an employer may not require disclosure of details relating to an employee's or an employee's family member's health information, domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking as a condition of providing earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. Unless as otherwise required by law, any health or safety information possessed by an employer regarding an employee or employee's family member must:

(A) be maintained on a separate form and in a separate file from other personnel information;

(B) be treated as confidential medical records; and

(C) not be disclosed except to the affected employee or with the express written permission of the affected employee.

290.633. 1. With respect to employees covered by a valid collective bargaining agreement in effect on November 5, 2024, no provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply until the stated expiration date in the collective bargaining agreement; however, further the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply upon any such agreement's renewal, extension, amendment, or modification in any respect after November 5, 2024.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed to interfere, impede, or otherwise diminish the right of employees to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing in order to establish earned paid sick time or other conditions of work in excess of the applicable minimum standards under the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. All or any portion of the earned paid sick time requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall not apply to employees covered by a bona fide collective bargaining agreement to the extent that such requirements are expressly waived in the collective bargaining agreement in clear and unambiguous terms.

4. With the exception noted in subsection 3, any waiver by an employee of rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed contrary to public policy and shall be void.

290.636. 1. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed to discourage or prohibit an employer from the adoption or retention of an earned paid sick time policy more generous than the one required herein.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed as diminishing the obligation of an employer to comply with any contract, collective bargaining agreement, employment benefit plan, or other agreement providing more generous paid sick time to an employee than required herein. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed as diminishing the rights of public employees regarding paid sick time or use of paid sick time as provided in the laws of Missouri and ordinances of political subdivisions pertaining to public employees.

290.639. 1. Sections 290.600 through 290.642 provide minimum requirements pertaining to earned paid sick time and shall not be construed to preempt, limit, or otherwise affect the applicability of any other law, regulation, requirement, policy, or standard that provides for greater accrual or use by employees of earned paid sick time or that extends other protections to employees.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be interpreted or applied to create a power or obligation contrary to any federal law, rule, or regulation.

290.642. Except as detailed in section 290.618, all of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are severable, and if any provision, including any section, subsection, subdivision, paragraph, sentence, or clause, or the application thereof to any person or circumstance, is found by a court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted, such decision shall not affect other provisions or applications of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that can be given effect without the invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted provision or application, and to this end the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are declared severable.

Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, their office could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. However, if the enactment of this proposal were to result in substantial additional litigation, their office may be required to request additional appropriations.

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated their department has no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated no fiscal impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated this initiative petition has no impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated this petition, if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated they assume no direct fiscal impact from the proposed statutory amendment to Chapter 290 as government employees are exempt from its provisions. However, employees of providers that receive DMH funding would be impacted, which would include all contracted DMH providers.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated this proposal might impact their department however, they defer to the Office of Administration to respond.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated:

This petition would amend provisions relating to the accumulation of sick time required for employees depending on how many employees are employed by the employer. It also has various requirements regarding how sick time can be used and procedures employers must use. Violations are deemed misdemeanors, and damages are allowed to be awarded in civil suits. It states that the DOLIR "may" create new notices, promulgate rules, and initiate outreach programs but that the DOLIR is not required to create notices if it requires the appropriation of funds. It also states that the DOLIR may inspect employment records and investigate complaints of noncompliance. Still, such inspection is not required if it requires the appropriation of funds, and the cost estimate would be zero.

The funding source will be from General Revenue if the DOLIR receives complaints to enforce it. Therefore the DOLIR estimates it would need two Regulatory Auditors and one Administrative Support Assistant person at an annual ongoing cost of $255,975 by 2027, plus an initial information technology (IT) component of $28,318 and office equipment of $25,011.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety indicated no impact for their department, Director's office.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated no impact anticipated by their department.

Officials from the Governor's Office indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage law does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact. The state seems excluded from section 3 and we are not included in the definition of an employer in the new sections.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their agency because it specifically exempts the state from the definition of employer.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated this initiative petition excludes the state from the requirements of the proposed new law. Therefore there is no anticipated fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage law does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated beginning January 1, 2025, the minimum wage rate would be not less than $13.75 per hour. This rate would increase by $1.25 per hour by January 1, 2026 to $15.00 per hour.

The increase to wages would approximately have the fiscal impact below for each year:

Calendar Year	Annual Increase from the Current Wage
2025	$ 3,495.00
2026	$ 9,215.00

This is an estimated impact if not exempt.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In fiscal year (FY) 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. Their office estimates $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no fiscal impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated this petition does not apply to county governments under 290.502.4 for minimum wage and the contemplated new Section 6 for sick leave regarding the definition of an employer. Clay County provides more generous sick leave than this measure as well.

They do estimate additional costs from this petition of $2,000 a year between the Circuit Court and Prosecutor to enforce the misdemeanor and civil action provisions.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county for this initiative petition proposing to amend Chapter 290, RSMo.

Officials from St. Louis County indicated this initiative petition has no apparent fiscal impact on their county.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this amendment would have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact to their college.

Officials from St. Louis Community College indicated the petition request is generally lower than their current compensation structure and therefore its passage appears to have minimal effect on their college. That being said, increases calculated by Consumer Price Index or other indexed methods may affect them in the future and that cannot be determined at this time.

Officials from the Missouri Lottery indicated no fiscal impact to their agency. Current hourly wages are $15 or higher.

Officials from the State Tax Commission indicated this initiative petition will not have a fiscal impact on their agency.

Officials from the Missouri Veterans Commission indicated this initiative petition creates no fiscal impact to the Missouri Veterans Commission. However, given the proposed changes to section 290.502 RSMo, they would note that those changes would make it more difficult for state agencies to recruit new employees. As to the remainder of the petition, the definition for the term "employer" found in the proposed section 290.600(6) specifically excludes the state and its agencies, so the requirements of the petition would not apply to the Commission.

Officials from the Missouri Ethics Commission indicated this initiative petition does not have fiscal impact on their Commission.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Police Commissioners indicated per Section 290.600, the Kansas City, Missouri Police Department is exempt as a political subdivision of the state.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated they predict no fiscal impact from this petition.

Officials from the Board of Election Commissioners City of St. Louis indicated no impact.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners indicated this petition has no material fiscal impact on their operations.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated this petition has no fiscal impact to their Board.

Officials from the Children's Trust Fund indicated no impact.

Officials from the State Auditor's office indicated since this proposed initiative petition does not apply to government entities, this would have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the Missouri Gaming Commission indicated this initiative petition will not have any fiscal impact on their agency.

Lindsey Baker, Research Director, Missouri Budget Project indicated in summary, they estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state and local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue and decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy. She also provided the following information:

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Earned Sick Leave Petitions 24-025-042

We estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state & local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy.

In addition to helping employees by allowing them to address their health needs without losing their jobs or ability to pay their bills, paid sick leave has many benefits for employers, including a healthier workforce, reduced turnover, and increased productivity. The benefits of paid sick leave have been highlighted by the COVID-19 pandemic, illustrating the importance of workers being able to recover at home without lost wages and without risking spread of contagious disease in the workplace.

Several ballot measures have been filed (24-025-042) that would require employers to provide earned sick leave in Missouri. Though the measures vary slightly, each would require employers to provide a minimum of 3-7 days of paid leave to employees, depending on hours worked and size of business. If implemented, Missouri would join the seventeen states, plus the District of Columbia, who ensure employees can earn paid sick leave to care for themselves or family members.ⁱ

An estimated 211,000 Missourians and their families would benefit from the earned sick time provided through these initiatives, with low-wage workers disproportionately likely to benefit from this policy.ⁱⁱ Expanding earned sick leave in Missouri is estimated to provide a net savings to society of between $612.4-$774.1 million annually depending on the number of days provided.ⁱⁱⁱ

Societal Cost-Benefit of Earned Sick Leave in Missouri: Adapted from Dicke, Ohler, & Thorpe (2022)

	3-5 Scenario*	5-7 Scenario*
Estimated Cost Savings	$1.26B	$1.29B
- Employment Related Savings	$436.73M	$466.6M
- Health Related Savings	$825.61M	$825.61M
Estimated Costs (Employer & State Admin)	$488.22M	$679.77M
Estimated Net Societal Benefit*	$774.11M	$612.44M

In the 3/5 scenario, small employers are required to offer at least three days of leave and large employers at least five days. The 5/7 scenario requires small employers to offer at least five days of paid sick leave and large employers to offer at least seven days of paid leave. A small employer defined as less than 15 employees.*

Societal Cost Savings from Earned Sick Leave in Missouri

Employment Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri's workforce would become stronger, more stable, and more productive leading to economic growth.

- Reduced Absenteeism. Access to earned sick leave allows workers to stay home, reducing the overall spread of illness in the workplace; this leads to fewer illnesses among workers and fewer overall days off work.^{iv}
- Reduced Turnover. Access to earned sick leave gives workers the ability to address their health needs and those of their families, without having to quit a job or risk being fired. Access to paid sick leave is associated with reduced job turnover, which in turn creates significant savings for businesses.^v
- Reduced Presenteeism. Employers who do not offer paid sick leave have higher rates of "presenteeism" or lost productivity due to employees working while injured or sick.^{vi} Offering paid sick leave reduces the likelihood of working at reduced capacity and allows workers to recover from illness or injury more quickly.

Health Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri would become a healthier state as workers would have the ability to care for themselves and their families, while simultaneously benefiting their communities.

- Reduced Flu Contagion in Society. Workers without paid sick leave are more likely to come to work sick, increasing the likelihood of spreading the illness.^{vii} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to stay home when ill, thus reducing the overall spread of influenza throughout the community.
- Reduced Workers Compensation Costs. Workers with access to paid leave are less likely to be injured on the job,^{viii} reducing overall workers comp claims and cost to employers.
- Reduced ER Visits. Paid sick leave is associated with fewer trips to the emergency room.^{ix} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to properly care for themselves and family members during an illness, preventing an escalation of the illness.
- Improved Nursing Home Care. Unpaid sick leave is especially problematic in nursing homes as the residents are especially vulnerable to the consequences of high turnover, absenteeism and presenteeism.^x Access to paid sick leave allows nursing home workers to take care of themselves so that they can better care for residents.

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Petitions 24-025-042

While previous estimates show a cost associated with state level administration and enforcement for earned sick leave of approximately $1 million, we also expect that earned sick leave will be associated with a significant potential for increased revenue collections & decreased spending on services associated with the cost savings outlined above.

- Increased revenue collections. A stronger and more productive workforce is associated with economic growth. Economic growth is in turn associated with growth in both state and local revenue as both sales & income tax collections rise due to increased spending and wages.
- Reductions in spending on services. When workers are able to care for themselves and their families (and others in their community) they are less likely to have minor illnesses escalate into costly health problems. This reduces the overall cost of health care, particularly among low-wage workers who are disproportionately likely to lack access to paid leave. This in turn reduces state and local spending on health other related public services.

As a result, we estimate the fiscal impact on state & local revenue of earned sick leave will be minimal as the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will offset the modest expenses associated with state level administration. While we are confident that a net savings will be realized, the size of the savings is too speculative to estimate exact fiscal impact.

Re: Proposal Related to Chapter 290, RSMo, Petition 2024-025-042

Dear Auditor Fitzpatrick:

A Better Balance is writing to submit our fact sheet titled "Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business" to accompany petition 24-025-042 and to inform the fiscal note process. We thank you for considering our submission.

A Better Balance, a national nonprofit advocacy organization with four regional offices, uses the power of the law to ensure that working individuals can care for themselves and their loved ones without jeopardizing their economic security. Through legislative advocacy, policy, direct legal services, strategic litigation, and public education, our organization works around the country to advance policies like paid sick leave, paid family and medical leave, quality childcare and eldercare, and anti-discrimination protections for pregnant workers and caregivers. From Arizona and Colorado to Duluth (MN) and beyond, our organization has worked on the growing number of paid sick leave laws now in effect.

The enclosed fact sheet summarizes research and data on the resoundingly positive effect that paid sick leave has on business. When paid sick leave policies are in place, businesses financially benefit from increased worker productivity, reduced spread of contagious illness in the workplace, and lower employee turnover. Research has also underscored that workers and the larger community also have better health outcomes overall when there is access to paid sick leave. As documented in the attached fact sheet, paid sick leave has been shown to work well for businesses and workers throughout the country.

Thank you for giving us the opportunity to submit this information. Please do not hesitate to contact A Better Balance at cgomez@abetterbalance.org if we can provide any additional assistance.

Sincerely,
A Better Balance

Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business

The research is clear: paid sick leave isn't just good for workers, it's good for business as well. Healthy workers are essential to a successful business and a strong economy. When workers have access to paid sick leave, they demonstrate increased job satisfaction, commitment, and morale, while employers—and their bottom lines—reap the benefits of increased worker performance and productivity and reduced worker turnover. And access to guaranteed paid sick leave is a vital component to keeping businesses open and safe through the COVID-19 pandemic and beyond.

Access to paid sick leave increases worker productivity and reduces the spread of contagious illness in the workplace, leading to direct savings for businesses.

- Workers with minor illnesses are less productive than their healthy co-workers.¹ Paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (when employees show up to work while sick), which costs businesses approximately $207.6 billion annually in reduced productivity.² After Washington State implemented its paid sick leave law, for example, the percentage of workers that went to work while sick decreased significantly.³
- Paid sick leave also reduces the spread of contagion between co-workers—further increasing productivity and labor in the workplace.⁴ Absenteeism caused by the introduction of flu-like illness in the workplace is estimated to cost employers up to 111 million workdays per year.⁵ Even before the pandemic, states with paid sick leave requirements saw a 40% decrease in influenza rates.⁶

Paid sick leave has proven to be particularly crucial to keeping businesses open during the COVID-19 pandemic.

- As the country with the highest cumulative number of COVID-19 cases,⁷ and the only one of the thirteen G12 countries with no paid sick leave,⁸ it is undeniable that the U.S. will need paid sick leave to end this crisis, to save lives, and to minimize disruption to businesses struggling to avoid the spread of COVID-19 in the workplace.
- Paid sick leave has been critical to keeping businesses open throughout the pandemic. One study found that states in which workers gained temporary access to paid sick leave through the federal Families First Coronavirus Response Act⁹ had around 400 fewer confirmed COVID-19 cases per day as a result.¹⁰

Employers with paid sick leave benefit from reduced worker turnover and better relationships with their employees, saving employers the cost of recruiting, interviewing, and training new hires.

- In general, worker turnover is estimated to cost employers the equivalent of 21% of a worker's annual compensation.¹¹ However, providing paid sick leave only increases labor costs by an average of 2.7 cents per hour worked¹² and workers with paid sick leave are less likely to leave their jobs,¹³ saving businesses money on turnover costs such as interviewing and training.¹⁴

- Paid sick leave also increases worker loyalty and job satisfaction—factors known to increase productivity and job retention.¹⁵ After Connecticut’s paid sick law went into effect, nearly 30% of surveyed employers reported improved employee morale, and over 20% reported increased employee motivation or loyalty.¹⁶
- Two years after paid sick leave went into effect in New York City, one employer reported that “the impact that I saw in my business was a much stronger bond between ourselves and our employees, higher productivity, and a more successful business, not a less successful business.”¹⁷

Paid sick leave also saves employers money by reducing the likelihood of workplace accidents.

- Throughout the country, direct and indirect costs associated with on-the-job injuries cost employers billions of dollars.¹⁸ Workers with paid sick leave are 28% less likely than workers without access to paid sick leave to be injured on the job.¹⁹

Lack of paid sick leave makes workers more likely to go to work while sick and puts co-workers and our communities at risk. With paid sick leave, our workplaces and communities are healthier, which improves the bottom line for employers.

- Access to sick leave will be essential to overcoming the COVID-19 pandemic, as evidenced by previous pandemics. For example, it is estimated that the lack of paid sick leave was responsible for 5 million incidents of flu-like illness during the H1N1 pandemic.²⁰
- In a simulated influenza epidemic, 72% of employees who caught the flu at work did so because of exposure to other employees attending work while sick; paid sick days would reduce flu incidences among workers by approximately 6% across all workplaces, and by over 7% in workplaces with 49 or fewer employees.²¹
- As explained above, access to paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (employees showing up to work while sick) and reduces overall contagion.²² Presenteeism is linked to the spread of harmful contagions to co-workers and customers.²³
- A study of data from the 2009 flu outbreak found that workers with paid sick leave were 30 percent more likely to be vaccinated and were more likely to seek treatment when they were sick with flu-like symptoms compared to those without paid sick leave.²⁴ This has proven true for COVID-19 as well—in June 2021, workers whose employers provided paid time off to get the vaccine or recover from any side effects were 24% more likely to have received at least one dose of the vaccine than workers whose employers provided no paid vaccine leave.²⁵
- A lack of access to paid sick days is particularly harmful for service industry workers. Nearly two-thirds of restaurant workers have cooked or served food while sick,²⁶ and in 2011, nearly one in five food service workers went to work vomiting or with diarrhea, creating dangerous health conditions.²⁷

- People without access to paid sick leave are 1.5x more likely to go to work while they have a contagious illness and are nearly twice as likely to send a sick child to school or daycare than those with access to it.²⁸
- States that have implemented paid sick leave laws had an 11% decrease of cases of flu-like illnesses in their first year after enactment.²⁹

Workers with paid sick leave are more likely to seek preventative care than workers without paid sick leave, leading to better health outcomes and less time away from work.

- People without paid sick days tend to be unable to make time for preventative health care, such as cancer screenings and flu shots, which makes it more likely that such workers will have more significant healthcare needs at later stages of an illness.³⁰
- Workers with access to paid sick days report better general health than workers without paid sick days and are less likely to delay preventive medical care for themselves or for their family.³¹

Paid sick leave has proven to work well for businesses all over the U.S., and experience shows that workers don't abuse paid sick leave.

- Business practices don't have to change to keep up with paid sick leave laws. In a survey of New York City employers after the city's paid sick law was implemented, 91% of employers reported no reduction in hiring, 97% indicated they did not reduce hours, about 94% did not raise prices, and nearly 85% of employers reported no change in their overall business costs.³²
 - In a similar survey of employers in Connecticut a year and a half after the state's paid sick law went into effect, nearly 90% of employers reported no reduction in hours, and about 85% did not raise prices.³³
- Paid sick leave laws stimulate economic growth. When San Francisco's paid sick law went into effect in 2007, the city's job growth actually exceeded that of nearby counties, despite unfounded fears that the law would cause an economic slowdown.³⁴
 - In comparison to other surrounding cities, Seattle saw greater increases in the number of employers in the city when its paid sick leave law was implemented,³⁵ and in general, job growth continued on an upward trend.³⁶
 - After New York City's paid sick days were implemented, the average wage for hourly workers increased and the average number of weekly absences declined.³⁷ On the law's first anniversary, the New York City government released a report touting its successful implementation and noting that since the law went into effect, "the city has had steady job growth and the lowest unemployment in six years."³⁸
- Workers don't abuse paid sick leave. After New York implemented its paid sick leave law, 98% of employers reported no cases of employee abuse of sick days.³⁹

- Employers know that paid sick leave laws work. Two years after New York City’s paid sick law was implemented, a staggering 86% of New York City employers polled supported the law.⁴⁰
- Studies in Washington, D.C. and Seattle also saw no negative economic effects following implementation of their paid sick leave laws in either job loss or movement of businesses out of the city. A report from the Washington D.C. Auditor, issued five years after passage of the District’s sick leave law, found that the law “did not have the economic impact of encouraging business owners to move a business from the District nor did the [law] have the economic impact of discouraging business owners to locate a business in the District of Columbia.”⁴¹ Likewise, a study of the economic impact of Seattle’s sick leave law found that a “preliminary look at available data shows no widespread negative economic impact as some opponents of the ordinance feared.”⁴²
- Recognizing the benefits of paid sick leave, San Francisco, Washington, D.C., and New York City—all among the earliest adopters of paid sick leave laws—later expanded their paid sick leave laws, underscoring how well these laws are working for workers, employers, and communities.

Richard von Glahn, Policy Director, Missouri Jobs with Justice indicated he was resubmitting the information previously submitted for initiative petitions 24-016 through 24-023 for initiative petitions 24-031 through 24-042. Petitions 24-031 through petition 24-042 all contain the language from petitions 24-016 through 24-019 in regards to the minimum wage. They do not believe the fiscal impact of petitions 24-031 through 24-042 will be different from 24-016 through 24-019, so their submission is the same. They also provided the following information:

Our analysis estimates the impact of the proposed petitions on state sales and personal income tax revenue in Missouri. Our analysis follows a process that has been used in the past to estimate the impact of minimum wage increases, with some updates. We are unable to provide calculations on local sales and income tax revenue, although it should be noted that impacted workers in Kansas City and St. Louis City are subject to a 1% earnings tax on income, so those municipalities will experience revenue gains from their constituents seeing wage increases. Local sales tax revenue will also increase, although the different taxing rates per jurisdiction made estimates overly cumbersome to predict. We also reference some economic literature on the impact of minimum wage laws on employment , social benefit spending and downstream impacts of wage increase in order to address some common claims made by opponents of similar initiatives in the past as well as provide a broader context of impact of wage increases.

As each of these petitions explicitly exclude public employers¹ from proposed increases, we do not include an analysis of payroll expenses to these employers.

I. Economic literature on the employment impact of increases in the minimum wage

With 30 states and numerous other municipalities having increased the minimum wage above the federal minimum, there is ample evidence of the impact of these increases. While opponents will undoubtedly cite individual studies that predict catastrophic job loss and resulting decline in state revenue, the most credible comprehensive review of empirical evidence comes from Hristos Doucouliagos and T.D. Stanley and shows no discernible impact on employment. Their study, “Publication Selection Bias in Minimum- Wage Research? A Meta-Regression Analysis²” combines over 1,500 estimates from 64 different studies. This peer reviewed article has the advantage of any single study in that it used a set of predetermined, objective criteria for weighing the validity of statistical findings across different studies that produced different results.

In addition to this comprehensive review, a recent publication “Are $15 Minimum Wages too High” provides an analysis of California which has gradually increased the minimum wage from $8 in 2014 to $15 in 2022. Their analysis focuses on impacts of two groups of workers most exposed to minimum wage increases- teenagers and restaurant workers and finds that “substantial and ongoing pay increases throughout the treatment period and find no significant disemployment effects, even in relatively low-wage counties.³” This is the most recent study and is analyzing a similar level of increases and time period as the proposed initiatives.

There is ample empirical and theoretical evidence that corroborates these studies. First, relative to total wage and labor costs, minimum-wage increases are small. Second, employers and workers respond to minimum wage increases in many ways that reduce the actual costs to employers.

Probably the most important economic response to a higher minimum wage is a reduction in turnover. At higher wages, employers fill vacancies faster and retain employees longer, boosting total employment and average productivity per worker while reducing direct and indirect training costs. A 2017 study by employee benefits news found that turnover costs as high as 33% of a workers annual salary⁴. Avoiding these costs provides an obvious benefit to employers and research from Dube, Lester and Reich in 2012⁵ finds “striking evidence that separations, new hires, and turnover rates for teens and restaurant workers fall substantially following a minimum wage increase.”

Based on these empirical studies we feel confident in concluding that there is no evidence that increasing the minimum wage will reduce employment. Accordingly, we do not include any projections for impact on employment and the resulting effects on revenue in our analysis.

II. Impact on state and federal spending on social safety net programs

One area where the state is likely to experience significant direct savings from an increase in the minimum wage is on state spending on social safety net programs. Research suggests that at least 44% of Missouri recipients of Medicaid, SNAP or the Federal EITC are members of working families who would be directly impacted by the proposed initiatives⁶. State and Federal spending for this share of the workers on these programs totals $2,400,000.00 dollars. While programs such as SNAP are paid entirely by the federal government, medicaid has a percentage paid by state revenue and the state EITC going into effect this year will cost the state revenue. While individual circumstances often dictate the cost of these or similar programs to the state, it holds that as workers earn higher wages at work access to these benefits will decrease, saving the state potentially tens of millions of dollars.

III. Estimate of number of workers impacted statewide and impact on wages

Number of impacted workers				Total Wage Growth
	Direct impact	Indirectly impacted	Total
Proposal 1	293,000	198,000	491,000	$576,819,000
Proposal 2	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,076,047,000
Proposal 3	331,000	194,000	525,000	$733,133,000
Proposal 4	394,000	241,000	635,000	$1,222,991,000
Proposal 5	293,000	198,000	491,000	$688,721,000
Proposal 6	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,213,236,000
Proposal 7	331,000	194,000	525,000	$852,823,000
Proposal 8	394,000	241,000	635,000	$1,346,386,000

Across all eight version of the petitions estimates show a low of $576 million and a high of over $1.3 billion in wage growth for Missouri workers. These estimates include direct impacts to workers making under the minimum wage as well as secondary impacts to workers whose wages are predicted to rise as a result of the minimum wage increases.

IV. Estimate of state income and sales tax revenue

⁶ <https://laborcenter.berkeley.edu/the-public-cost-of-a-low-federal-minimum-wage/>

Based on the wage increase numbers above and the conclusion that minimum wage increases have no discernible impact on employment, we next calculate the impact of projected increases on state sales tax revenue and individual state income tax revenue for Missouri. As previously mentioned, we do not include estimates for local impacts, although we do project increased revenue there as local jurisdictions do capture sales tax revenue and in the case of the Kansas City and the City of St. Louis, increases in income are subject to the individual 1% earnings tax. We do not include any speculation of increased prices as a way to offset higher wages, although any such increase would result in higher sales tax revenue.

	Estimated sales tax revenue*	Estimated individual income tax revenue	Total revenue
Proposal 1	$8,738,808	$24,367,615	$33,106,423
Proposal 2	$16,302,112	$45,457,412	$61,759,524
Proposal 3	$11,712,965	$32,660,864	$44,373,829
Proposal 4	$18,528,314	$51,665,035	$70,193,348
Proposal 5	$10,434,123	$29,094,895	$39,529,018
Proposal 6	$18,380,525	$51,252,936	$69,633,462
Proposal 7	$12,920,268	$36,027,354	$48,947,623
Proposal 8	$20,397,748	$56,877,834	$77,275,582

State sales tax revenue is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average annual Missouri General Revenue sales tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 1.515%)*

Income tax is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average Missouri net individual income tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 4.523%) less an expected 6.6% reduction in collections due to the recent reduction of Missouri's top income tax bracket to 4.95%.*

V. Other downstream impacts of higher wages

Countless studies have also demonstrated the negative health impacts on adults and children of low wages as well as the negative impacts on child development, including academic achievement, of low wages. These situations often contain confounding variables that can make ascertaining cause and effect difficult, recent research using natural experiments to measure the direction of causation of the impact of public policies offers guidance for consideration. The research makes clear that “increases in parental income are found to lead to higher test scores and better educational outcomes for children, greater likelihood of employment in young

adulthood, and improved earnings⁷.” While the exact impact on state or local revenue is difficult to predict, research shows that the impact of higher wages on student academic achievement were four times higher per dollar increase as the effects found in a study of class size reductions that cost around $12,000 per student⁸.” Direct impacts on state and local revenue, especially in the short term, are difficult to predict, but the growing body of research shows definite positive long term impacts on human development resulting from wage increases.

VI. Conclusion

Overall we conclude that these petitions would generate a minimum net benefit to state general revenue of between thirty three and seventy seven million dollars with an undetermined net benefit for local revenue based on local considerations. This benefit is the direct result of the wage increases. Other savings are likely to accrue from a decrease in spending on safety net programs and a downstream benefit to the families of recipients of the wage increases. We submit this information in hopes that it can be useful in your determination of the fiscal impact of the proposed initiatives. Should you need any other information please do not hesitate to contact our office.

Chapter 290, RSMo, is amended by amending section 290.502 and enacting fifteen new sections to be known as sections 290.600, 290.603, 290.606, 290.609, 290.612, 290.615, 290.618, 290.621, 290.624, 290.627, 290.630, 290.633, 290.636, 290.639, and 290.642, to read as follows:

2. The minimum wage shall be increased or decreased on January 1, 2008, and on January 1 of successive years, by the increase or decrease in the cost of living. On September 30, 2007, and on each September 30 of each successive year, the director shall measure the increase or decrease in the cost of living by the percentage increase or decrease as of the preceding July over the level as of July of the immediately preceding year of the Consumer Price Index for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers (CPI-W) or successor index as published by the U.S. Department of Labor or its successor agency, with the amount of the minimum wage increase or decrease rounded to the nearest five cents.

3. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, and notwithstanding subsection 1 of this section, effective January 1, [2019] 2025, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of not less than [$8.60] $13.50 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased each year by [$.85] $.75 per hour, effective January 1 of each of the next [four] two years, until it reaches [$12.00] $15.00 per hour, effective January 1, [2023] 2027. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased or decreased on January 1, [2024] 2028, and on January 1 of successive years, per the method set forth in subsection 2 of this section. If at any time the federal minimum wage rate is above or is thereafter increased above the minimum wage then in effect under this subsection, the minimum wage required by this subsection shall continue to be increased pursuant to this subsection 3, but the higher federal rate shall immediately become the minimum wage required by this subsection and shall be increased or decreased per the method set forth in subsection 2 for so long as it remains higher than the state minimum wage required and increased pursuant to this subsection.

4. For purposes of this section, the term "public employer" means an employer that is the state or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, or other political subdivision of the state. Subsection 3 of this section shall not apply to a public employer with respect to its employees. Any public employer that is subject to subsections 1 and 2 of this section shall continue to be subject to those subsections.

(I) Any individual who is employed in any government position defined in 29 U.S.C. §§ 203(e)(2)(C)(i)-(ii);

(L) Any individual described by the provisions of section 29 U.S.C. 213(a)(8).

(6) "Employer", any person acting directly or indirectly in the interest of an employer in relation to an employee; provided, however, that for the purposes of sections 290.600 through 290.642 "employer" does not include the United States Government, the state, or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, public higher education institution, or other political subdivision of the state.

(7) "Family member", any of the following individuals:

(A) Regardless of age, a biological, adopted or foster child, stepchild or legal ward, a child of a domestic partner, a child to whom the employee stands in loco parentis, or an individual to whom the employee stood in loco parentis when the individual was a minor;

(B) A biological, foster, stepparent or adoptive parent or legal guardian of an employee or an employee's spouse or domestic partner or an individual who stood in loco parentis when the employee or employee's spouse or domestic partner was a minor child;

(D) A grandparent, grandchild, or sibling (whether of a biological, foster, adoptive or step relationship) of the employee or the employee's spouse or domestic partner; or

(E) A person for whom the employee is responsible for providing or arranging health or safety-related care, including but not limited to helping that individual obtain diagnostic, preventative, routine, or therapeutic health treatment or ensuring the person is safe following domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking.

(8) "Health care professional," any individual licensed under federal or any state law to provide medical or emergency services, including but not limited to doctors, nurses, certified nurse midwives, mental health professionals, and emergency room personnel.

(10) "Retaliatory personnel action", denial of any right guaranteed under sections 290.600 through 290.642, or any threat, discharge, suspension, demotion, reduction of hours, or any other adverse action against an employee for the exercise of any right guaranteed herein. "Retaliatory personnel action" shall also include interference with or punishment for in any manner participating in or assisting an investigation, proceeding, or hearing under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

(11) "Same hourly rate", means the following:

(A) For employees paid on the basis of a single hourly rate, the same hourly rate shall be the employee's regular hourly rate.

(B) For employees who are paid multiple hourly rates of pay from the same employer, the same hourly rate shall be either:

(i) the wages the employee would have been paid for the hours absent during use of earned paid sick time if the employee had worked; or,

(ii) the weighted average of all hourly rates of pay during the previous pay period.

Whatever method the employer uses, the employer must use a consistent method for each employee throughout a year.

(C) For employees who are paid a salary, the same hourly rate shall be determined by dividing the wages the employee earns in the previous pay period by the total number of hours worked during the previous pay period. For determining total number of hours worked during the previous pay period, employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1), the Fair Labor Standards Act, shall be assumed to work 40 hours in each work week unless their normal work week is less than 40 hours, in which case earned paid sick time shall accrue and the same hourly rate shall be calculated based on the employee's normal work week. Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(D) For employees paid on a piece rate or a fee-for-service basis, the same hourly rate shall be a reasonable calculation of the wages or fees the employee would have received for the piece work, service, or part thereof, if the employee had worked. Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(E) For employees who are paid on a commission basis (whether base wage plus commission or commission only), the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the base wage or the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(F) For employees who receive and retain compensation in the form of gratuities in addition to wages, the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the employee's regular hourly rate or 100% of the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502 without deduction of any tips as a credit.

(12) "Sexual assault", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(13) "Stalking", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(14) "Year", a regular and consecutive twelve-month period as determined by the employer; except that for the purposes of section 290.615 and section 290.627, "year" shall mean a calendar year.

290.603. 1. Employees of an employer with fifteen or more employees shall accrue a minimum of one hour of earned paid sick time for every thirty hours worked, but such employees shall not be entitled to use more than fifty-six hours of earned paid sick time per year, unless the employer selects a higher limit.

2. Employees of an employer with fewer than fifteen employees shall accrue a minimum of one hour of earned paid sick time for every thirty hours worked, but such employees shall not be entitled to use more than forty hours of earned paid sick time per year, unless the employer selects a higher limit.

3. In determining the number of employees of an employer, all employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation on a full-time, part-time, or temporary basis shall be counted. In situations in which the number of employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation per week fluctuates above and below 15 employees per week over the course of a year, an employer is required to provide earned paid sick time pursuant to subsection (1) of this section if it maintained fifteen or more employees in the state on the payroll for some portion of a working day in each of twenty or more different calendar weeks, including any periods of leave, and whether or not the weeks were consecutive, in either the current or the preceding year (irrespective of whether the same individuals were in employment in each working day).

4. All employees shall accrue earned paid sick time as follows:

(A) Earned paid sick time as provided in this section shall begin to accrue at the commencement of employment or May 1, 2025, whichever is later. An employee shall be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued. An employer may provide all earned paid sick time that an employee is expected to accrue in a year at the beginning of the year.

(B) Employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1) of the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act will be assumed to work forty hours in each work week for purposes of earned paid sick time accrual unless their normal work week is less than forty hours, in which case earned paid sick time accrues based upon that normal work week.

(C) Up to 80 hours of earned paid sick time shall be carried over to the following year if the employee has any unused accrued earned paid sick time at the end of the year, but this law does not require an employer to permit an employee to use more than the applicable number of hours of earned paid sick time per year as set forth in subsection (1) and (2) of this section. Alternatively, in lieu of carryover of unused earned paid sick time from one year to the next, an employer may pay an employee for unused earned paid sick time at the end of a year which could be carried over and provide the employee with an amount of paid sick time that meets or exceeds the requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that is available for the employee's immediate use at the beginning of the subsequent year.

(D) If an employee is transferred to a separate division, entity, or location, but remains employed by the same employer, the employee is entitled to all earned paid sick time accrued at the prior division, entity, or location and is entitled to use all earned paid sick time as provided in this section. When there is a separation from employment and the employee is rehired within nine months of separation by the same employer, previously accrued earned paid sick time that had not been used shall be reinstated. Further, the employee shall be entitled to use accrued earned paid sick time and accrue additional earned paid sick time at the re-commencement of employment.

(E) When a different employer succeeds or takes the place of an existing employer, all employees of the original employer who remain employed by the successor employer are entitled to all earned paid sick time they accrued when employed by the original employer, and are entitled to use earned paid sick time previously accrued.

(F) At its discretion, an employer may loan earned paid sick time to an employee in advance of accrual by such employee.

5. Any employer with a paid leave policy, such as a paid time off policy, who makes available an amount of paid leave sufficient to meet the accrual requirements of this section that may be used for the same purposes and under the same conditions as earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642 is not required to provide additional paid sick time under this section.

6. Except as specifically provided in this section, nothing in this section shall be construed as requiring financial or other reimbursement to an employee from an employer upon the employee's termination, resignation, retirement, or other separation from employment for accrued earned paid sick time that has not been used.

7. Employees shall not accrue earned paid sick time before May 1, 2025. Employees who are employed or who commence employment on or after May 1, 2025 shall accrue earned paid sick time and be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued in accordance with sections 290.600 through 290.642. The Department may develop model posters and notices, engage in rule-making, initiate outreach programs, and engage in other activities for implementation of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 as authorized by those sections before May 1, 2025.

290.606. 1. Earned paid sick time shall be provided to an employee by an employer for:

(A) An employee's mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for preventative medical care;

(B) Care of a family member with a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs preventative medical care;

(C) Closure of the employee's place of business by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or an employee's need to care for a child whose school or place of care has been closed by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or care for oneself or a family member when it has been determined by the health authorities having jurisdiction or by a health care provider that the employee's or family member's presence in the community may jeopardize the health of others because of his or her exposure to a communicable disease, whether or not the employee or family member has actually contracted the communicable disease; or

(D) Absence necessary due to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, provided the leave is to allow the employee to obtain for the employee or the employee's family member:

(i) Medical attention needed to recover from physical or psychological injury or disability caused by domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking;

(ii) Services from a victim services organization;

(iii) Psychological or other counseling;

(iv) Relocation or taking steps to secure an existing home due to the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or

(v) Legal services, including preparing for or participating in any civil or criminal legal proceeding related to or resulting from the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking.

2. Earned paid sick time shall be provided upon the request of an employee. Such request may be made orally, in writing, by electronic means, or by any other means acceptable to the employer. When possible, the request shall include the expected duration of the absence.

3. When the use of earned paid sick time is foreseeable, the employee shall make a good faith effort to provide notice of the need for such time to the employer in advance of the use of the earned paid sick time and shall make a reasonable effort to schedule the use of earned paid sick time in a manner that does not unduly disrupt the operations of the employer. Where such need is not foreseeable, an employer may require an employee to provide notice of the need for the use of earned paid sick time as soon as practicable.

4. An employer that requires notice of the need to use earned paid sick time where the need is not foreseeable shall provide a written policy that contains procedures for the employee to provide notice. An employer that has not provided to the employee a copy of its written policy for providing such notice shall not deny earned paid sick time to the employee based on non-compliance with such a policy.

5. An employer may not require, as a condition of an employee's taking earned paid sick time, that the employee search for or find a replacement worker to cover the hours during which the employee is using earned paid sick time.

6. Earned paid sick time may be used in the smaller of hourly increments or the smallest increment that the employer's payroll system uses to account for absences or use of other time.

7. For earned paid sick time of three or more consecutive work days, an employer may require reasonable documentation that the earned paid sick time has been used for a purpose covered by subsection (1) of this section.

(A) Documentation signed by a health care professional indicating that earned paid sick time is necessary shall be considered reasonable documentation for purposes of this section.

(B) In cases of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, if the employer requests, one of the following types of documentation selected by the employee shall be considered reasonable documentation: (i) a police report indicating that the employee or the employee's family member was a victim of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, (ii) a written statement from an employee or agent of a victim service provider affirming that the employee or employee's family member is or was receiving services from a victim service provider; (iii) documentation signed by a health care professional from whom the employee or employee's family member sought assistance relating to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking or the effects thereof; (vi) a court document indicating that an employee or employee's family member is or was involved in a legal action related to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or (v) a written statement from the employee affirming that the employee or employee's family member is taking or took earned paid sick time for a qualifying purpose of subsection (1) of this section.

(C) An employer may not require that the documentation explain the nature of the illness, details of the underlying health needs, or the details of the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, unless otherwise required by law.

290.609. 1. It shall be unlawful for an employer or any other person to interfere with, restrain, or deny the exercise of, or the attempt to exercise, any right protected under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. An employer shall not take retaliatory personnel action or discriminate against an employee or former employee because the individual has exercised rights protected under sections 290.600 through 290.642. Such rights include, but are not limited to, the right to request or use earned paid sick time pursuant to sections 290.600 through 290.642; the right to file a complaint or inform any person about any employer's alleged violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642; the right to participate in any investigation, hearing, or proceeding or cooperate with or assist the Department in any investigations of alleged violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642; and the right to inform any person of his or her potential rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. It shall be unlawful for an employer's absence control policy to count earned paid sick time taken under sections 290.600 through 290.642 as an absence that may lead to or result in discipline, discharge, demotion, suspension, or any other adverse action.

4. Protections of this section shall apply to any individual who mistakenly but in good faith alleges violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

290.612. 1. Employers shall give employees a written notice about earned paid sick time within fourteen calendar days of the commencement of employment or on April 15, 2025, whichever is later, which must include the following information: (1) beginning May 1, 2025, employees accrue and are entitled to earned paid sick time at the rate one hour of earned paid sick time for every 30 hours of work, and may use earned paid sick time, subject to the limits and terms under sections 290.600 through 290.642 of Missouri law, (2) it is prohibited for an employer to take retaliatory personnel action against employees who request or use earned paid sick time as allowed by law, (3) each employee has the right to bring a civil action if earned paid sick time as required by sections 290.600 through 290.642 is denied by the employer or the employee is subjected to retaliatory personnel action by the employer for exercising the employee's rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642; and, (4) the contact information for the Department. Notice shall be provided by the Employer to the employee on a single piece of paper, at least 8.5 x 11, in no less than 14-point font.

2. Beginning April 15, 2025, employers shall display a poster that contains the information required in subsection (1) of this section in a conspicuous and accessible place in each establishment where such employees are employed, provided that such poster has been made available by the Department.

3. The Department may create and make available to employers, model notices and posters that contain the information required under subsection (1) of this section for employers' use in complying with subsections (1) and (2) of this section. Nothing in this subsection shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department to create or make available notices or posters if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.615. 1. Employers shall retain records documenting hours worked by employees and earned paid sick time taken by employees, for a period of not less than three years, and shall allow the Department access to such records, with appropriate notice and at a mutually agreeable time, to monitor compliance with the requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. To the extent permitted by law, the Director may inspect such records, and the records shall be open for inspection by the Director by appointment. Where the records required under this section are kept outside the state, the records shall be made available to the Director upon demand. Every such employer shall furnish to the Director on demand a sworn statement of time records and information upon forms prescribed or approved by the Director. All the records and information obtained by the Department are confidential and shall be disclosed only on order of a court of competent jurisdiction.

290.618. 1. The Department may, in accordance with chapter 536, promulgate rules for the implementation, enforcement, and administration of sections 290.600 through 290.642. Any rule or portion of a rule, as that term is defined in section 536.010, that is created under the authority delegated in this section shall become effective only if it complies with and is subject to all of the provisions of chapter 536 and, if applicable, section 536.028. This section and chapter 536 are nonseverable and if any of the powers vested with the general assembly pursuant to chapter 536 to review, to delay the effective date, or to disapprove and annul a rule are subsequently held unconstitutional, then the grant of rulemaking authority and any rule proposed or adopted after November 5, 2024, shall be invalid and void.

290.621. 1. The Department may investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to $500 per day of each day of a continuing violation. A final decision of the department is subject to review in accordance with the provisions of chapter 536.

2. The Department may develop and implement an outreach program to inform employees, parents, and persons who are under the care of a health care provider about the availability of earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642. This program may include the distribution of notices and other written materials to child care and elder care providers, domestic violence shelters, schools, hospitals, community health centers and other health care providers in Missouri.

3. A municipality, county, city, town, or village may adopt ordinances, rules, and regulations to investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, with respect to employers within, or employees performing work while physically present in, the geographic boundaries of the municipality, county, city, town, or village. Any such ordinance, rule, or regulation shall be consistent with this law and any Department rules or regulations and system for compliance and enforcement. The municipality, county, city, town, or village may exercise such powers as allowed by any applicable charter or ordinance, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to the maximum allowed for an ordinance violation. Before investigating or seeking to resolve any complaint between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall give notice to the Department with a copy of the complaint and, within 14 days of such notice, the Department may intervene as of right and participate in the matter to ensure that the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642 or, alternatively, the Department may institute its own proceedings in which case the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall refrain from acting on the matter so long as the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642. If the Department does not, within 14 days, intervene or instigate its own proceedings, the municipality, county, city, town, or village may, without the Department, investigate and attempt to resolve the complaint and take other additional means within its power to enforce sections 290.600 through 290.642 against the subject of the complaint. In no event shall an employer be subject to compliance proceedings arising out of a single set of facts after having already been subjected to a final compliance order by another governmental entity.

4. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department, a municipality, county, city, town, or village to conduct investigations and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, to establish and implement a system to receive or resolve complaints, to establish additional means of enforcement, or to conduct outreach and education, including the creation of notices and other written materials, concerning sections 290.600 through 290.642, if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.624. 1. Any employer who willfully violates or fails to comply with any of the provisions and requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be guilty of a class C misdemeanor; provided, however, that an employer who willfully violates the notice and posting requirements of section 290.612 shall be guilty of an infraction.

2. For purposes of this section, each day of violation or failure to comply and each employee affected shall constitute a separate offense.

290.627. 1. Any individual who claims to have been aggrieved by a failure of an employer to comply with any portion of sections 290.600 through 290.642, including but not limited to the failure to provide earned paid sick time or to allow employees to use such time consistent with sections 290.600 through 290.642, or who claims to have suffered a retaliatory personnel action, shall have a right of action and may commence a civil action in the appropriate court of jurisdiction within three years of the accrual of the cause of action, to obtain appropriate relief with respect to such unlawful violation. Such action may be brought without first filing an administrative complaint.

2. In a civil action under this section, if the court finds a violation has occurred, the court may grant as relief, as it deems appropriate and to the extent permitted by law, any permanent or temporary injunction, the full amount of any unpaid earned sick time plus any actual damages suffered as the result of the employer's violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642, an additional amount equal to twice any unpaid earned sick time as liquidated damages, costs, and reasonable attorney's fees as may be allowed by the court, and other legal or equitable relief as may be appropriate to remedy the violation, including, without limitation, reinstatement to employment and back pay.

290.630. 1. Except as otherwise required by law, an employer may not require disclosure of details relating to an employee's or an employee's family member's health information, domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking as a condition of providing earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. Unless as otherwise required by law, any health or safety information possessed by an employer regarding an employee or employee's family member must:

(A) be maintained on a separate form and in a separate file from other personnel information;

(B) be treated as confidential medical records; and

(C) not be disclosed except to the affected employee or with the express written permission of the affected employee.

290.633. 1. With respect to employees covered by a valid collective bargaining agreement in effect on November 5, 2024, no provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply until the stated expiration date in the collective bargaining agreement; however, further the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply upon any such agreement's renewal, extension, amendment, or modification in any respect after November 5, 2024.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed to interfere, impede, or otherwise diminish the right of employees to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing in order to establish earned paid sick time or other conditions of work in excess of the applicable minimum standards under the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. All or any portion of the earned paid sick time requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall not apply to employees covered by a bona fide collective bargaining agreement to the extent that such requirements are expressly waived in the collective bargaining agreement in clear and unambiguous terms.

4. With the exception noted in subsection 3, any waiver by an employee of rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed contrary to public policy and shall be void.

290.636. 1. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed to discourage or prohibit an employer from the adoption or retention of an earned paid sick time policy more generous than the one required herein.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed as diminishing the obligation of an employer to comply with any contract, collective bargaining agreement, employment benefit plan, or other agreement providing more generous paid sick time to an employee than required herein. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed as diminishing the rights of public employees regarding paid sick time or use of paid sick time as provided in the laws of Missouri and ordinances of political subdivisions pertaining to public employees.

290.639. 1. Sections 290.600 through 290.642 provide minimum requirements pertaining to earned paid sick time and shall not be construed to preempt, limit, or otherwise affect the applicability of any other law, regulation, requirement, policy, or standard that provides for greater accrual or use by employees of earned paid sick time or that extends other protections to employees.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be interpreted or applied to create a power or obligation contrary to any federal law, rule, or regulation.

290.642. Except as detailed in section 290.618, all of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are severable, and if any provision, including any section, subsection, subdivision, paragraph, sentence, or clause, or the application thereof to any person or circumstance, is found by a court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted, such decision shall not affect other provisions or applications of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that can be given effect without the invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted provision or application, and to this end the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are declared severable.

Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, their office could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. However, if the enactment of this proposal were to result in substantial additional litigation, their office may be required to request additional appropriations.

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated their department has no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated no fiscal impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated this initiative petition has no impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated this petition, if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated they assume no direct fiscal impact from the proposed statutory amendment to Chapter 290 as government employees are exempt from its provisions. However, employees of providers that receive DMH funding would be impacted, which would include all contracted DMH providers.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated this proposal might impact their department however, they defer to the Office of Administration to respond.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated:

This petition would amend provisions relating to the accumulation of sick time required for employees depending on how many employees are employed by the employer. It also has various requirements regarding how sick time can be used and procedures employers must use. Violations are deemed misdemeanors, and damages are allowed to be awarded in civil suits. It states that the DOLIR "may" create new notices, promulgate rules, and initiate outreach programs but that the DOLIR is not required to create notices if it requires the appropriation of funds. It also states that the DOLIR may inspect employment records and investigate complaints of noncompliance. Still, such inspection is not required if it requires the appropriation of funds, and the cost estimate would be zero.

The funding source will be from General Revenue if the DOLIR receives complaints to enforce it. Therefore the DOLIR estimates it would need two Regulatory Auditors and one Administrative Support Assistant person at an annual ongoing cost of $255,975 by 2027, plus an initial information technology (IT) component of $28,318 and office equipment of $25,011.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety indicated no impact for their department, Director's office.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated no impact anticipated by their department.

Officials from the Governor's Office indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage law does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact. The state seems excluded from section 3 and we are not included in the definition of an employer in the new sections.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their agency because it specifically exempts the state from the definition of employer.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated this initiative petition excludes the state from the requirements of the proposed new law. Therefore there is no anticipated fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage law does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated beginning January 1, 2025, the minimum wage rate would be not less than $13.50 per hour. This rate would increase by $0.75 per hour each year of the next two years until reaching $15.00 per hour by January 1, 2027.

The increase to wages would approximately have the fiscal impact below for each year:

Calendar Year	Annual Increase from the Current Wage
2025	$ 2,351.00
2026	$ 5,783.00
2027	$ 9,215.00

This is an estimated impact if not exempt.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In fiscal year (FY) 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. Their office estimates $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no fiscal impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated this petition does not apply to county governments under 290.502.4 for minimum wage and the contemplated new Section 6 for sick leave regarding the definition of an employer. Clay County provides more generous sick leave than this measure as well.

They do estimate additional costs from this petition of $2,000 a year between the Circuit Court and Prosecutor to enforce the misdemeanor and civil action provisions.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county for this initiative petition proposing to amend Chapter 290, RSMo.

Officials from St. Louis County indicated this initiative petition has no apparent fiscal impact on their county.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this amendment would have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact to their college.

Officials from St. Louis Community College indicated the petition request is generally lower than their current compensation structure and therefore its passage appears to have minimal effect on their college. That being said, increases calculated by Consumer Price Index or other indexed methods may affect them in the future and that cannot be determined at this time.

Officials from the Missouri Lottery indicated no fiscal impact to their agency. Current hourly wages are $15 or higher.

Officials from the State Tax Commission indicated this initiative petition will not have a fiscal impact on their agency.

Officials from the Missouri Veterans Commission indicated this initiative petition creates no fiscal impact to the Missouri Veterans Commission. However, given the proposed changes to section 290.502 RSMo, they would note that those changes would make it more difficult for state agencies to recruit new employees. As to the remainder of the petition, the definition for the term "employer" found in the proposed section 290.600(6) specifically excludes the state and its agencies, so the requirements of the petition would not apply to the Commission.

Officials from the Missouri Ethics Commission indicated this initiative petition does not have fiscal impact on their Commission.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Police Commissioners indicated per Section 290.600, the Kansas City, Missouri Police Department is exempt as a political subdivision of the state.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated they predict no fiscal impact from this petition.

Officials from the Board of Election Commissioners City of St. Louis indicated no impact.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners indicated this petition has no material fiscal impact on their operations.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated this petition has no fiscal impact to their Board.

Officials from the Children's Trust Fund indicated no impact.

Officials from the State Auditor's office indicated since this proposed initiative petition does not apply to government entities, this would have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the Missouri Gaming Commission indicated this initiative petition will not have any fiscal impact on their agency.

Lindsey Baker, Research Director, Missouri Budget Project indicated in summary, they estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state and local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue and decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy. She also provided the following information:

We estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state & local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy.

In addition to helping employees by allowing them to address their health needs without losing their jobs or ability to pay their bills, paid sick leave has many benefits for employers, including a healthier workforce, reduced turnover, and increased productivity. The benefits of paid sick leave have been highlighted by the COVID-19 pandemic, illustrating the importance of workers being able to recover at home without lost wages and without risking spread of contagious disease in the workplace.

Several ballot measures have been filed (24-025-042) that would require employers to provide earned sick leave in Missouri. Though the measures vary slightly, each would require employers to provide a minimum of 3-7 days of paid leave to employees, depending on hours worked and size of business. If implemented, Missouri would join the seventeen states, plus the District of Columbia, who ensure employees can earn paid sick leave to care for themselves or family members.ⁱ

An estimated 211,000 Missourians and their families would benefit from the earned sick time provided through these initiatives, with low-wage workers disproportionately likely to benefit from this policy.ⁱⁱ Expanding earned sick leave in Missouri is estimated to provide a net savings to society of between $612.4-$774.1 million annually depending on the number of days provided.ⁱⁱⁱ

	3-5 Scenario*	5-7 Scenario*
Estimated Cost Savings	$1.26B	$1.29B
- Employment Related Savings	$436.73M	$466.6M
- Health Related Savings	$825.61M	$825.61M
Estimated Costs (Employer & State Admin)	$488.22M	$679.77M
Estimated Net Societal Benefit*	$774.11M	$612.44M

In the 3/5 scenario, small employers are required to offer at least three days of leave and large employers at least five days. The 5/7 scenario requires small employers to offer at least five days of paid sick leave and large employers to offer at least seven days of paid leave. A small employer defined as less than 15 employees.*

Societal Cost Savings from Earned Sick Leave in Missouri

Employment Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri's workforce would become stronger, more stable, and more productive leading to economic growth.

- Reduced Absenteeism. Access to earned sick leave allows workers to stay home, reducing the overall spread of illness in the workplace; this leads to fewer illnesses among workers and fewer overall days off work.^{iv}
- Reduced Turnover. Access to earned sick leave gives workers the ability to address their health needs and those of their families, without having to quit a job or risk being fired. Access to paid sick leave is associated with reduced job turnover, which in turn creates significant savings for businesses.^v
- Reduced Presenteeism. Employers who do not offer paid sick leave have higher rates of "presenteeism" or lost productivity due to employees working while injured or sick.^{vi} Offering paid sick leave reduces the likelihood of working at reduced capacity and allows workers to recover from illness or injury more quickly.

Health Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri would become a healthier state as workers would have the ability to care for themselves and their families, while simultaneously benefiting their communities.

- Reduced Flu Contagion in Society. Workers without paid sick leave are more likely to come to work sick, increasing the likelihood of spreading the illness.^{vii} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to stay home when ill, thus reducing the overall spread of influenza throughout the community.
- Reduced Workers Compensation Costs. Workers with access to paid leave are less likely to be injured on the job,^{viii} reducing overall workers comp claims and cost to employers.
- Reduced ER Visits. Paid sick leave is associated with fewer trips to the emergency room.^{ix} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to properly care for themselves and family members during an illness, preventing an escalation of the illness.
- Improved Nursing Home Care. Unpaid sick leave is especially problematic in nursing homes as the residents are especially vulnerable to the consequences of high turnover, absenteeism and presenteeism.^x Access to paid sick leave allows nursing home workers to take care of themselves so that they can better care for residents.

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Petitions 24-025-042

While previous estimates show a cost associated with state level administration and enforcement for earned sick leave of approximately $1 million, we also expect that earned sick leave will be associated with a significant potential for increased revenue collections & decreased spending on services associated with the cost savings outlined above.

- Increased revenue collections. A stronger and more productive workforce is associated with economic growth. Economic growth is in turn associated with growth in both state and local revenue as both sales & income tax collections rise due to increased spending and wages.
- Reductions in spending on services. When workers are able to care for themselves and their families (and others in their community) they are less likely to have minor illnesses escalate into costly health problems. This reduces the overall cost of health care, particularly among low-wage workers who are disproportionately likely to lack access to paid leave. This in turn reduces state and local spending on health other related public services.

As a result, we estimate the fiscal impact on state & local revenue of earned sick leave will be minimal as the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will offset the modest expenses associated with state level administration. While we are confident that a net savings will be realized, the size of the savings is too speculative to estimate exact fiscal impact.

Re: Proposal Related to Chapter 290, RSMo, Petition 2024-025-042

Dear Auditor Fitzpatrick:

A Better Balance is writing to submit our fact sheet titled "Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business" to accompany petition 24-025-042 and to inform the fiscal note process. We thank you for considering our submission.

A Better Balance, a national nonprofit advocacy organization with four regional offices, uses the power of the law to ensure that working individuals can care for themselves and their loved ones without jeopardizing their economic security. Through legislative advocacy, policy, direct legal services, strategic litigation, and public education, our organization works around the country to advance policies like paid sick leave, paid family and medical leave, quality childcare and eldercare, and anti-discrimination protections for pregnant workers and caregivers. From Arizona and Colorado to Duluth (MN) and beyond, our organization has worked on the growing number of paid sick leave laws now in effect.

The enclosed fact sheet summarizes research and data on the resoundingly positive effect that paid sick leave has on business. When paid sick leave policies are in place, businesses financially benefit from increased worker productivity, reduced spread of contagious illness in the workplace, and lower employee turnover. Research has also underscored that workers and the larger community also have better health outcomes overall when there is access to paid sick leave. As documented in the attached fact sheet, paid sick leave has been shown to work well for businesses and workers throughout the country.

Thank you for giving us the opportunity to submit this information. Please do not hesitate to contact A Better Balance at cgomez@abetterbalance.org if we can provide any additional assistance.

Sincerely,
A Better Balance

Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business

The research is clear: paid sick leave isn't just good for workers, it's good for business as well. Healthy workers are essential to a successful business and a strong economy. When workers have access to paid sick leave, they demonstrate increased job satisfaction, commitment, and morale, while employers—and their bottom lines—reap the benefits of increased worker performance and productivity and reduced worker turnover. And access to guaranteed paid sick leave is a vital component to keeping businesses open and safe through the COVID-19 pandemic and beyond.

Access to paid sick leave increases worker productivity and reduces the spread of contagious illness in the workplace, leading to direct savings for businesses.

- Workers with minor illnesses are less productive than their healthy co-workers.¹ Paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (when employees show up to work while sick), which costs businesses approximately $207.6 billion annually in reduced productivity.² After Washington State implemented its paid sick leave law, for example, the percentage of workers that went to work while sick decreased significantly.³
- Paid sick leave also reduces the spread of contagion between co-workers—further increasing productivity and labor in the workplace.⁴ Absenteeism caused by the introduction of flu-like illness in the workplace is estimated to cost employers up to 111 million workdays per year.⁵ Even before the pandemic, states with paid sick leave requirements saw a 40% decrease in influenza rates.⁶

Paid sick leave has proven to be particularly crucial to keeping businesses open during the COVID-19 pandemic.

- As the country with the highest cumulative number of COVID-19 cases,⁷ and the only one of the thirteen G12 countries with no paid sick leave,⁸ it is undeniable that the U.S. will need paid sick leave to end this crisis, to save lives, and to minimize disruption to businesses struggling to avoid the spread of COVID-19 in the workplace.
- Paid sick leave has been critical to keeping businesses open throughout the pandemic. One study found that states in which workers gained temporary access to paid sick leave through the federal Families First Coronavirus Response Act⁹ had around 400 fewer confirmed COVID-19 cases per day as a result.¹⁰

Employers with paid sick leave benefit from reduced worker turnover and better relationships with their employees, saving employers the cost of recruiting, interviewing, and training new hires.

- In general, worker turnover is estimated to cost employers the equivalent of 21% of a worker's annual compensation.¹¹ However, providing paid sick leave only increases labor costs by an average of 2.7 cents per hour worked¹² and workers with paid sick leave are less likely to leave their jobs,¹³ saving businesses money on turnover costs such as interviewing and training.¹⁴

- Paid sick leave also increases worker loyalty and job satisfaction—factors known to increase productivity and job retention.¹⁵ After Connecticut’s paid sick law went into effect, nearly 30% of surveyed employers reported improved employee morale, and over 20% reported increased employee motivation or loyalty.¹⁶
- Two years after paid sick leave went into effect in New York City, one employer reported that “the impact that I saw in my business was a much stronger bond between ourselves and our employees, higher productivity, and a more successful business, not a less successful business.”¹⁷

Paid sick leave also saves employers money by reducing the likelihood of workplace accidents.

- Throughout the country, direct and indirect costs associated with on-the-job injuries cost employers billions of dollars.¹⁸ Workers with paid sick leave are 28% less likely than workers without access to paid sick leave to be injured on the job.¹⁹

Lack of paid sick leave makes workers more likely to go to work while sick and puts co-workers and our communities at risk. With paid sick leave, our workplaces and communities are healthier, which improves the bottom line for employers.

- Access to sick leave will be essential to overcoming the COVID-19 pandemic, as evidenced by previous pandemics. For example, it is estimated that the lack of paid sick leave was responsible for 5 million incidents of flu-like illness during the H1N1 pandemic.²⁰
- In a simulated influenza epidemic, 72% of employees who caught the flu at work did so because of exposure to other employees attending work while sick; paid sick days would reduce flu incidences among workers by approximately 6% across all workplaces, and by over 7% in workplaces with 49 or fewer employees.²¹
- As explained above, access to paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (employees showing up to work while sick) and reduces overall contagion.²² Presenteeism is linked to the spread of harmful contagions to co-workers and customers.²³
- A study of data from the 2009 flu outbreak found that workers with paid sick leave were 30 percent more likely to be vaccinated and were more likely to seek treatment when they were sick with flu-like symptoms compared to those without paid sick leave.²⁴ This has proven true for COVID-19 as well—in June 2021, workers whose employers provided paid time off to get the vaccine or recover from any side effects were 24% more likely to have received at least one dose of the vaccine than workers whose employers provided no paid vaccine leave.²⁵
- A lack of access to paid sick days is particularly harmful for service industry workers. Nearly two-thirds of restaurant workers have cooked or served food while sick,²⁶ and in 2011, nearly one in five food service workers went to work vomiting or with diarrhea, creating dangerous health conditions.²⁷

- People without access to paid sick leave are 1.5x more likely to go to work while they have a contagious illness and are nearly twice as likely to send a sick child to school or daycare than those with access to it.²⁸
- States that have implemented paid sick leave laws had an 11% decrease of cases of flu-like illnesses in their first year after enactment.²⁹

Workers with paid sick leave are more likely to seek preventative care than workers without paid sick leave, leading to better health outcomes and less time away from work.

- People without paid sick days tend to be unable to make time for preventative health care, such as cancer screenings and flu shots, which makes it more likely that such workers will have more significant healthcare needs at later stages of an illness.³⁰
- Workers with access to paid sick days report better general health than workers without paid sick days and are less likely to delay preventive medical care for themselves or for their family.³¹

Paid sick leave has proven to work well for businesses all over the U.S., and experience shows that workers don't abuse paid sick leave.

- Business practices don't have to change to keep up with paid sick leave laws. In a survey of New York City employers after the city's paid sick law was implemented, 91% of employers reported no reduction in hiring, 97% indicated they did not reduce hours, about 94% did not raise prices, and nearly 85% of employers reported no change in their overall business costs.³²
 - In a similar survey of employers in Connecticut a year and a half after the state's paid sick law went into effect, nearly 90% of employers reported no reduction in hours, and about 85% did not raise prices.³³
- Paid sick leave laws stimulate economic growth. When San Francisco's paid sick law went into effect in 2007, the city's job growth actually exceeded that of nearby counties, despite unfounded fears that the law would cause an economic slowdown.³⁴
 - In comparison to other surrounding cities, Seattle saw greater increases in the number of employers in the city when its paid sick leave law was implemented,³⁵ and in general, job growth continued on an upward trend.³⁶
 - After New York City's paid sick days were implemented, the average wage for hourly workers increased and the average number of weekly absences declined.³⁷ On the law's first anniversary, the New York City government released a report touting its successful implementation and noting that since the law went into effect, "the city has had steady job growth and the lowest unemployment in six years."³⁸
- Workers don't abuse paid sick leave. After New York implemented its paid sick leave law, 98% of employers reported no cases of employee abuse of sick days.³⁹

- Employers know that paid sick leave laws work. Two years after New York City’s paid sick law was implemented, a staggering 86% of New York City employers polled supported the law.⁴⁰
- Studies in Washington, D.C. and Seattle also saw no negative economic effects following implementation of their paid sick leave laws in either job loss or movement of businesses out of the city. A report from the Washington D.C. Auditor, issued five years after passage of the District’s sick leave law, found that the law “did not have the economic impact of encouraging business owners to move a business from the District nor did the [law] have the economic impact of discouraging business owners to locate a business in the District of Columbia.”⁴¹ Likewise, a study of the economic impact of Seattle’s sick leave law found that a “preliminary look at available data shows no widespread negative economic impact as some opponents of the ordinance feared.”⁴²
- Recognizing the benefits of paid sick leave, San Francisco, Washington, D.C., and New York City—all among the earliest adopters of paid sick leave laws—later expanded their paid sick leave laws, underscoring how well these laws are working for workers, employers, and communities.

Richard von Glahn, Policy Director, Missouri Jobs with Justice indicated he was resubmitting the information previously submitted for initiative petitions 24-016 through 24-023 for initiative petitions 24-031 through 24-042. Petitions 24-031 through petition 24-042 all contain the language from petitions 24-016 through 24-019 in regards to the minimum wage. They do not believe the fiscal impact of petitions 24-031 through 24-042 will be different from 24-016 through 24-019, so their submission is the same. They also provided the following information:

Our analysis estimates the impact of the proposed petitions on state sales and personal income tax revenue in Missouri. Our analysis follows a process that has been used in the past to estimate the impact of minimum wage increases, with some updates. We are unable to provide calculations on local sales and income tax revenue, although it should be noted that impacted workers in Kansas City and St. Louis City are subject to a 1% earnings tax on income, so those municipalities will experience revenue gains from their constituents seeing wage increases. Local sales tax revenue will also increase, although the different taxing rates per jurisdiction made estimates overly cumbersome to predict. We also reference some economic literature on the impact of minimum wage laws on employment , social benefit spending and downstream impacts of wage increase in order to address some common claims made by opponents of similar initiatives in the past as well as provide a broader context of impact of wage increases.

As each of these petitions explicitly exclude public employers¹ from proposed increases, we do not include an analysis of payroll expenses to these employers.

I. Economic literature on the employment impact of increases in the minimum wage

With 30 states and numerous other municipalities having increased the minimum wage above the federal minimum, there is ample evidence of the impact of these increases. While opponents will undoubtedly cite individual studies that predict catastrophic job loss and resulting decline in state revenue, the most credible comprehensive review of empirical evidence comes from Hristos Doucouliagos and T.D. Stanley and shows no discernible impact on employment. Their study, “Publication Selection Bias in Minimum- Wage Research? A Meta-Regression Analysis²” combines over 1,500 estimates from 64 different studies. This peer reviewed article has the advantage of any single study in that it used a set of predetermined, objective criteria for weighing the validity of statistical findings across different studies that produced different results.

In addition to this comprehensive review, a recent publication “Are $15 Minimum Wages too High” provides an analysis of California which has gradually increased the minimum wage from $8 in 2014 to $15 in 2022. Their analysis focuses on impacts of two groups of workers most exposed to minimum wage increases- teenagers and restaurant workers and finds that “substantial and ongoing pay increases throughout the treatment period and find no significant disemployment effects, even in relatively low-wage counties.³” This is the most recent study and is analyzing a similar level of increases and time period as the proposed initiatives.

There is ample empirical and theoretical evidence that corroborates these studies. First, relative to total wage and labor costs, minimum-wage increases are small. Second, employers and workers respond to minimum wage increases in many ways that reduce the actual costs to employers.

Probably the most important economic response to a higher minimum wage is a reduction in turnover. At higher wages, employers fill vacancies faster and retain employees longer, boosting total employment and average productivity per worker while reducing direct and indirect training costs. A 2017 study by employee benefits news found that turnover costs as high as 33% of a workers annual salary⁴. Avoiding these costs provides an obvious benefit to employers and research from Dube, Lester and Reich in 2012⁵ finds “striking evidence that separations, new hires, and turnover rates for teens and restaurant workers fall substantially following a minimum wage increase.”

Based on these empirical studies we feel confident in concluding that there is no evidence that increasing the minimum wage will reduce employment. Accordingly, we do not include any projections for impact on employment and the resulting effects on revenue in our analysis.

II. Impact on state and federal spending on social safety net programs

One area where the state is likely to experience significant direct savings from an increase in the minimum wage is on state spending on social safety net programs. Research suggests that at least 44% of Missouri recipients of Medicaid, SNAP or the Federal EITC are members of working families who would be directly impacted by the proposed initiatives⁶. State and Federal spending for this share of the workers on these programs totals $2,400,000.00 dollars. While programs such as SNAP are paid entirely by the federal government, medicaid has a percentage paid by state revenue and the state EITC going into effect this year will cost the state revenue. While individual circumstances often dictate the cost of these or similar programs to the state, it holds that as workers earn higher wages at work access to these benefits will decrease, saving the state potentially tens of millions of dollars.

III. Estimate of number of workers impacted statewide and impact on wages

Number of impacted workers				Total Wage Growth
	Direct impact	Indirectly impacted	Total
Proposal 1	293,000	198,000	491,000	$576,819,000
Proposal 2	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,076,047,000
Proposal 3	331,000	194,000	525,000	$733,133,000

Across all eight version of the petitions estimates show a low of $576 million and a high of over $1.3 billion in wage growth for Missouri workers. These estimates include direct impacts to workers making under the minimum wage as well as secondary impacts to workers whose wages are predicted to rise as a result of the minimum wage increases.

IV. Estimate of state income and sales tax revenue

⁶ <https://laborcenter.berkeley.edu/the-public-cost-of-a-low-federal-minimum-wage/>

Based on the wage increase numbers above and the conclusion that minimum wage increases have no discernible impact on employment, we next calculate the impact of projected increases on state sales tax revenue and individual state income tax revenue for Missouri. As previously mentioned, we do not include estimates for local impacts, although we do project increased revenue there as local jurisdictions do capture sales tax revenue and in the case of the Kansas City and the City of St. Louis, increases in income are subject to the individual 1% earnings tax. We do not include any speculation of increased prices as a way to offset higher wages, although any such increase would result in higher sales tax revenue.

	Estimated sales tax revenue*	Estimated individual income tax revenue	Total revenue
Proposal 1	$8,738,808	$24,367,615	$33,106,423
Proposal 2	$16,302,112	$45,457,412	$61,759,524
Proposal 3	$11,712,965	$32,660,864	$44,373,829
Proposal 4	$18,528,314	$51,665,035	$70,193,348
Proposal 5	$10,434,123	$29,094,895	$39,529,018
Proposal 6	$18,380,525	$51,252,936	$69,633,462
Proposal 7	$12,920,268	$36,027,354	$48,947,623
Proposal 8	$20,397,748	$56,877,834	$77,275,582

State sales tax revenue is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average annual Missouri General Revenue sales tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 1.515%)*

Income tax is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average Missouri net individual income tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 4.523%) less an expected 6.6% reduction in collections due to the recent reduction of Missouri's top income tax bracket to 4.95%.*

V. Other downstream impacts of higher wages

Countless studies have also demonstrated the negative health impacts on adults and children of low wages as well as the negative impacts on child development, including academic achievement, of low wages. These situations often contain confounding variables that can make ascertaining cause and effect difficult, recent research using natural experiments to measure the direction of causation of the impact of public policies offers guidance for consideration. The research makes clear that “increases in parental income are found to lead to higher test scores and better educational outcomes for children, greater likelihood of employment in young

adulthood, and improved earnings⁷.” While the exact impact on state or local revenue is difficult to predict, research shows that the impact of higher wages on student academic achievement were four times higher per dollar increase as the effects found in a study of class size reductions that cost around $12,000 per student⁸.” Direct impacts on state and local revenue, especially in the short term, are difficult to predict, but the growing body of research shows definite positive long term impacts on human development resulting from wage increases.

VI. Conclusion

Overall we conclude that these petitions would generate a minimum net benefit to state general revenue of between thirty three and seventy seven million dollars with an undetermined net benefit for local revenue based on local considerations. This benefit is the direct result of the wage increases. Other savings are likely to accrue from a decrease in spending on safety net programs and a downstream benefit to the families of recipients of the wage increases. We submit this information in hopes that it can be useful in your determination of the fiscal impact of the proposed initiatives. Should you need any other information please do not hesitate to contact our office.

Be it enacted by the people of the state of Missouri:

Chapter 290, RSMo, is amended by amending section 290.502 and enacting fifteen new sections to be known as sections 290.600, 290.603, 290.606, 290.609, 290.612, 290.615, 290.618, 290.621, 290.624, 290.627, 290.630, 290.633, 290.636, 290.639, and 290.642, to read as follows:

3. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, and notwithstanding subsection 1 of this section, effective January 1, [2019] 2025, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of not less than [$8.60] $13.75 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased each year by [$.85] $1.25 per hour, effective January 1 of each of the next [four] two years, until it reaches [$12.00] $16.25 per hour, effective January 1, [2023] 2027. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased or decreased on January 1, [2024] 2028, and on January 1 of successive years, per the method set forth in subsection 2 of this section. If at any time the federal minimum wage rate is above or is thereafter increased above the minimum wage then in effect under this subsection, the minimum wage required by this subsection shall continue to be increased pursuant to this subsection 3, but the higher federal rate shall immediately become the minimum wage required by this subsection and shall be increased or decreased per the method set forth in subsection 2 for so long as it remains higher than the state minimum wage required and increased pursuant to this subsection.

4. For purposes of this section, the term "public employer" means an employer that is the state or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, or other political subdivision of the state. Subsection 3 of this section shall not apply to a public employer with respect to its employees. Any public employer that is subject to subsections 1 and 2 of this section shall continue to be subject to those subsections.

(L) Any individual described by the provisions of section 29 U.S.C. 213(a)(8).

(6) "Employer", any person acting directly or indirectly in the interest of an employer in relation to an employee; provided, however, that for the purposes of sections 290.600 through 290.642 "employer" does not include the United States Government, the state, or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, public higher education institution, or other political subdivision of the state.

(7) "Family member", any of the following individuals:

(A) Regardless of age, a biological, adopted or foster child, stepchild or legal ward, a child of a domestic partner, a child to whom the employee stands in loco parentis, or an individual to whom the employee stood in loco parentis when the individual was a minor;

(B) A biological, foster, stepparent or adoptive parent or legal guardian of an employee or an employee's spouse or domestic partner or an individual who stood in loco parentis when the employee or employee's spouse or domestic partner was a minor child;

(D) A grandparent, grandchild, or sibling (whether of a biological, foster, adoptive or step relationship) of the employee or the employee's spouse or domestic partner; or

(E) A person for whom the employee is responsible for providing or arranging health or safety-related care, including but not limited to helping that individual obtain diagnostic, preventative, routine, or therapeutic health treatment or ensuring the person is safe following domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking.

(8) "Health care professional," any individual licensed under federal or any state law to provide medical or emergency services, including but not limited to doctors, nurses, certified nurse midwives, mental health professionals, and emergency room personnel.

(10) "Retaliatory personnel action", denial of any right guaranteed under sections 290.600 through 290.642, or any threat, discharge, suspension, demotion, reduction of hours, or any other adverse action against an employee for the exercise of any right guaranteed herein. "Retaliatory personnel action" shall also include interference with or punishment for in any manner participating in or assisting an investigation, proceeding, or hearing under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

(11) "Same hourly rate", means the following:

(A) For employees paid on the basis of a single hourly rate, the same hourly rate shall be the employee's regular hourly rate.

(B) For employees who are paid multiple hourly rates of pay from the same employer, the same hourly rate shall be either:

(i) the wages the employee would have been paid for the hours absent during use of earned paid sick time if the employee had worked; or,

(ii) the weighted average of all hourly rates of pay during the previous pay period.

Whatever method the employer uses, the employer must use a consistent method for each employee throughout a year.

(C) For employees who are paid a salary, the same hourly rate shall be determined by dividing the wages the employee earns in the previous pay period by the total number of hours worked during the previous pay period. For determining total number of hours worked during the previous pay period, employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1), the Fair Labor Standards Act, shall be assumed to work 40 hours in each work week unless their normal work week is less than 40 hours, in which case earned paid sick time shall accrue and the same hourly rate shall be calculated based on the employee's normal work week. Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(D) For employees paid on a piece rate or a fee-for-service basis, the same hourly rate shall be a reasonable calculation of the wages or fees the employee would have received for the piece work, service, or part thereof, if the employee had worked. Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(E) For employees who are paid on a commission basis (whether base wage plus commission or commission only), the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the base wage or the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(F) For employees who receive and retain compensation in the form of gratuities in addition to wages, the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the employee's regular hourly rate or 100% of the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502 without deduction of any tips as a credit.

(12) "Sexual assault", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(13) "Stalking", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(14) "Year", a regular and consecutive twelve-month period as determined by the employer; except that for the purposes of section 290.615 and section 290.627, "year" shall mean a calendar year.

290.603. 1. Employees of an employer with fifteen or more employees shall accrue a minimum of one hour of earned paid sick time for every thirty hours worked, but such employees shall not be entitled to use more than fifty-six hours of earned paid sick time per year, unless the employer selects a higher limit.

2. Employees of an employer with fewer than fifteen employees shall accrue a minimum of one hour of earned paid sick time for every thirty hours worked, but such employees shall not be entitled to use more than forty hours of earned paid sick time per year, unless the employer selects a higher limit.

3. In determining the number of employees of an employer, all employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation on a full-time, part-time, or temporary basis shall be counted. In situations in which the number of employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation per week fluctuates above and below 15 employees per week over the course of a year, an employer is required to provide earned paid sick time pursuant to subsection (1) of this section if it maintained fifteen or more employees in the state on the payroll for some portion of a working day in each of twenty or more different calendar weeks, including any periods of leave, and whether or not the weeks were consecutive, in either the current or the preceding year (irrespective of whether the same individuals were in employment in each working day).

4. All employees shall accrue earned paid sick time as follows:

(A) Earned paid sick time as provided in this section shall begin to accrue at the commencement of employment or May 1, 2025, whichever is later. An employee shall be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued. An employer may provide all earned paid sick time that an employee is expected to accrue in a year at the beginning of the year.

(B) Employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1) of the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act will be assumed to work forty hours in each work week for purposes of earned paid sick time accrual unless their normal work week is less than forty hours, in which case earned paid sick time accrues based upon that normal work week.

(C) Up to 80 hours of earned paid sick time shall be carried over to the following year if the employee has any unused accrued earned paid sick time at the end of the year, but this law does not require an employer to permit an employee to use more than the applicable number of hours of earned paid sick time per year as set forth in subsection (1) and (2) of this section. Alternatively, in lieu of carryover of unused earned paid sick time from one year to the next, an employer may pay an employee for unused earned paid sick time at the end of a year which could be carried over and provide the employee with an amount of paid sick time that meets or exceeds the requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that is available for the employee's immediate use at the beginning of the subsequent year.

(D) If an employee is transferred to a separate division, entity, or location, but remains employed by the same employer, the employee is entitled to all earned paid sick time accrued at the prior division, entity, or location and is entitled to use all earned paid sick time as provided in this section. When there is a separation from employment and the employee is rehired within nine months of separation by the same employer, previously accrued earned paid sick time that had not been used shall be reinstated. Further, the employee shall be entitled to use accrued earned paid sick time and accrue additional earned paid sick time at the re-commencement of employment.

(E) When a different employer succeeds or takes the place of an existing employer, all employees of the original employer who remain employed by the successor employer are entitled to all earned paid sick time they accrued when employed by the original employer, and are entitled to use earned paid sick time previously accrued.

(F) At its discretion, an employer may loan earned paid sick time to an employee in advance of accrual by such employee.

5. Any employer with a paid leave policy, such as a paid time off policy, who makes available an amount of paid leave sufficient to meet the accrual requirements of this section that may be used for the same purposes and under the same conditions as earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642 is not required to provide additional paid sick time under this section.

6. Except as specifically provided in this section, nothing in this section shall be construed as requiring financial or other reimbursement to an employee from an employer upon the employee's termination, resignation, retirement, or other separation from employment for accrued earned paid sick time that has not been used.

7. Employees shall not accrue earned paid sick time before May 1, 2025. Employees who are employed or who commence employment on or after May 1, 2025 shall accrue earned paid sick time and be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued in accordance with sections 290.600 through 290.642. The Department may develop model posters and notices, engage in rule-making, initiate outreach programs, and engage in other activities for implementation of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 as authorized by those sections before May 1, 2025.

290.606. 1. Earned paid sick time shall be provided to an employee by an employer for:

(A) An employee's mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for preventative medical care;

(B) Care of a family member with a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs preventative medical care;

(C) Closure of the employee's place of business by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or an employee's need to care for a child whose school or place of care has been closed by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or care for oneself or a family member when it has been determined by the health authorities having jurisdiction or by a health care provider that the employee's or family member's presence in the community may jeopardize the health of others because of his or her exposure to a communicable disease, whether or not the employee or family member has actually contracted the communicable disease; or

(D) Absence necessary due to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, provided the leave is to allow the employee to obtain for the employee or the employee's family member:

(i) Medical attention needed to recover from physical or psychological injury or disability caused by domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking;

(ii) Services from a victim services organization;

(iii) Psychological or other counseling;

(iv) Relocation or taking steps to secure an existing home due to the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or

(v) Legal services, including preparing for or participating in any civil or criminal legal proceeding related to or resulting from the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking.

2. Earned paid sick time shall be provided upon the request of an employee. Such request may be made orally, in writing, by electronic means, or by any other means acceptable to the employer. When possible, the request shall include the expected duration of the absence.

3. When the use of earned paid sick time is foreseeable, the employee shall make a good faith effort to provide notice of the need for such time to the employer in advance of the use of the earned paid sick time and shall make a reasonable effort to schedule the use of earned paid sick time in a manner that does not unduly disrupt the operations of the employer. Where such need is not foreseeable, an employer may require an employee to provide notice of the need for the use of earned paid sick time as soon as practicable.

4. An employer that requires notice of the need to use earned paid sick time where the need is not foreseeable shall provide a written policy that contains procedures for the employee to provide notice. An employer that has not provided to the employee a copy of its written policy for providing such notice shall not deny earned paid sick time to the employee based on non-compliance with such a policy.

5. An employer may not require, as a condition of an employee's taking earned paid sick time, that the employee search for or find a replacement worker to cover the hours during which the employee is using earned paid sick time.

6. Earned paid sick time may be used in the smaller of hourly increments or the smallest increment that the employer's payroll system uses to account for absences or use of other time.

7. For earned paid sick time of three or more consecutive work days, an employer may require reasonable documentation that the earned paid sick time has been used for a purpose covered by subsection (1) of this section.

(A) Documentation signed by a health care professional indicating that earned paid sick time is necessary shall be considered reasonable documentation for purposes of this section.

(B) In cases of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, if the employer requests, one of the following types of documentation selected by the employee shall be considered reasonable documentation: (i) a police report indicating that the employee or the employee's family member was a victim of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, (ii) a written statement from an employee or agent of a victim service provider affirming that the employee or employee's family member is or was receiving services from a victim service provider; (iii) documentation signed by a health care professional from whom the employee or employee's family member sought assistance relating to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking or the effects thereof; (vi) a court document indicating that an employee or employee's family member is or was involved in a legal action related to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or (v) a written statement from the employee affirming that the employee or employee's family member is taking or took earned paid sick time for a qualifying purpose of subsection (1) of this section.

(C) An employer may not require that the documentation explain the nature of the illness, details of the underlying health needs, or the details of the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, unless otherwise required by law.

290.609. 1. It shall be unlawful for an employer or any other person to interfere with, restrain, or deny the exercise of, or the attempt to exercise, any right protected under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. An employer shall not take retaliatory personnel action or discriminate against an employee or former employee because the individual has exercised rights protected under sections 290.600 through 290.642. Such rights include, but are not limited to, the right to request or use earned paid sick time pursuant to sections 290.600 through 290.642; the right to file a complaint or inform any person about any employer's alleged violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642; the right to participate in any investigation, hearing, or proceeding or cooperate with or assist the Department in any investigations of alleged violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642; and the right to inform any person of his or her potential rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. It shall be unlawful for an employer's absence control policy to count earned paid sick time taken under sections 290.600 through 290.642 as an absence that may lead to or result in discipline, discharge, demotion, suspension, or any other adverse action.

4. Protections of this section shall apply to any individual who mistakenly but in good faith alleges violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

290.612. 1. Employers shall give employees a written notice about earned paid sick time within fourteen calendar days of the commencement of employment or on April 15, 2025, whichever is later, which must include the following information: (1) beginning May 1, 2025, employees accrue and are entitled to earned paid sick time at the rate one hour of earned paid sick time for every 30 hours of work, and may use earned paid sick time, subject to the limits and terms under sections 290.600 through 290.642 of Missouri law, (2) it is prohibited for an employer to take retaliatory personnel action against employees who request or use earned paid sick time as allowed by law, (3) each employee has the right to bring a civil action if earned paid sick time as required by sections 290.600 through 290.642 is denied by the employer or the employee is subjected to retaliatory personnel action by the employer for exercising the employee's rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642; and, (4) the contact information for the Department. Notice shall be provided by the Employer to the employee on a single piece of paper, at least 8.5 x 11, in no less than 14-point font.

2. Beginning April 15, 2025, employers shall display a poster that contains the information required in subsection (1) of this section in a conspicuous and accessible place in each establishment where such employees are employed, provided that such poster has been made available by the Department.

3. The Department may create and make available to employers, model notices and posters that contain the information required under subsection (1) of this section for employers' use in complying with subsections (1) and (2) of this section. Nothing in this subsection shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department to create or make available notices or posters if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.615. 1. Employers shall retain records documenting hours worked by employees and earned paid sick time taken by employees, for a period of not less than three years, and shall allow the Department access to such records, with appropriate notice and at a mutually agreeable time, to monitor compliance with the requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. To the extent permitted by law, the Director may inspect such records, and the records shall be open for inspection by the Director by appointment. Where the records required under this section are kept outside the state, the records shall be made available to the Director upon demand. Every such employer shall furnish to the Director on demand a sworn statement of time records and information upon forms prescribed or approved by the Director. All the records and information obtained by the Department are confidential and shall be disclosed only on order of a court of competent jurisdiction.

3. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department or Director to access or inspect records or to create forms relating to the inspection of records if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.618. 1. The Department may, in accordance with chapter 536, promulgate rules for the implementation, enforcement, and administration of sections 290.600 through 290.642. Any rule or portion of a rule, as that term is defined in section 536.010, that is created under the authority delegated in this section shall become effective only if it complies with and is subject to all of the provisions of chapter 536 and, if applicable, section 536.028. This section and chapter 536 are nonseverable and if any of the powers vested with the general assembly pursuant to chapter 536 to review, to delay the effective date, or to disapprove and annul a rule are subsequently held unconstitutional, then the grant of rulemaking authority and any rule proposed or adopted after November 5, 2024, shall be invalid and void.

290.621. 1. The Department may investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to $500 per day of each day of a continuing violation. A final decision of the department is subject to review in accordance with the provisions of chapter 536.

2. The Department may develop and implement an outreach program to inform employees, parents, and persons who are under the care of a health care provider about the availability of earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642. This program may include the distribution of notices and other written materials to child care and elder care providers, domestic violence shelters, schools, hospitals, community health centers and other health care providers in Missouri.

3. A municipality, county, city, town, or village may adopt ordinances, rules, and regulations to investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, with respect to employers within, or employees performing work while physically present in, the geographic boundaries of the municipality, county, city, town, or village. Any such ordinance, rule, or regulation shall be consistent with this law and any Department rules or regulations and system for compliance and enforcement. The municipality, county, city, town, or village may exercise such powers as allowed by any applicable charter or ordinance, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to the maximum allowed for an ordinance violation. Before investigating or seeking to resolve any complaint between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall give notice to the Department with a copy of the complaint and, within 14 days of such notice, the Department may intervene as of right and participate in the matter to ensure that the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642 or, alternatively, the Department may institute its own proceedings in which case the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall refrain from acting on the matter so long as the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642. If the Department does not, within 14 days, intervene or instigate its own proceedings, the municipality, county, city, town, or village may, without the Department, investigate and attempt to resolve the complaint and take other additional means within its power to enforce sections 290.600 through 290.642 against the subject of the complaint. In no event shall an employer be subject to compliance proceedings arising out of a single set of facts after having already been subjected to a final compliance order by another governmental entity.

4. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department, a municipality, county, city, town, or village to conduct investigations and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, to establish and implement a system to receive or resolve complaints, to establish additional means of enforcement, or to conduct outreach and education, including the creation of notices and other written materials, concerning sections 290.600 through 290.642, if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.624. 1. Any employer who willfully violates or fails to comply with any of the provisions and requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be guilty of a class C misdemeanor; provided, however, that an employer who willfully violates the notice and posting requirements of section 290.612 shall be guilty of an infraction.

2. For purposes of this section, each day of violation or failure to comply and each employee affected shall constitute a separate offense.

290.627. 1. Any individual who claims to have been aggrieved by a failure of an employer to comply with any portion of sections 290.600 through 290.642, including but not limited to the failure to provide earned paid sick time or to allow employees to use such time consistent with sections 290.600 through 290.642, or who claims to have suffered a retaliatory personnel action, shall have a right of action and may commence a civil action in the appropriate court of jurisdiction within three years of the accrual of the cause of action, to obtain appropriate relief with respect to such unlawful violation. Such action may be brought without first filing an administrative complaint.

2. In a civil action under this section, if the court finds a violation has occurred, the court may grant as relief, as it deems appropriate and to the extent permitted by law, any permanent or temporary injunction, the full amount of any unpaid earned sick time plus any actual damages suffered as the result of the employer's violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642, an additional amount equal to twice any unpaid earned sick time as liquidated damages, costs, and reasonable attorney's fees as may be allowed by the court, and other legal or equitable relief as may be appropriate to remedy the violation, including, without limitation, reinstatement to employment and back pay.

290.630. 1. Except as otherwise required by law, an employer may not require disclosure of details relating to an employee's or an employee's family member's health information, domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking as a condition of providing earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. Unless as otherwise required by law, any health or safety information possessed by an employer regarding an employee or employee's family member must:

(A) be maintained on a separate form and in a separate file from other personnel information;

(B) be treated as confidential medical records; and

(C) not be disclosed except to the affected employee or with the express written permission of the affected employee.

290.633. 1. With respect to employees covered by a valid collective bargaining agreement in effect on November 5, 2024, no provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply until the stated expiration date in the collective bargaining agreement; however, further the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply upon any such agreement's renewal, extension, amendment, or modification in any respect after November 5, 2024.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed to interfere, impede, or otherwise diminish the right of employees to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing in order to establish earned paid sick time or other conditions of work in excess of the applicable minimum standards under the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. Any waiver by an employee of rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed contrary to public policy and shall be void.

290.636. 1. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed to discourage or prohibit an employer from the adoption or retention of an earned paid sick time policy more generous than the one required herein.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed as diminishing the obligation of an employer to comply with any contract, collective bargaining agreement, employment benefit plan, or other agreement providing more generous paid sick time to an employee than required herein. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed as diminishing the rights of public employees regarding paid sick time or use of paid sick time as provided in the laws of Missouri and ordinances of political subdivisions pertaining to public employees.

290.639. 1. Sections 290.600 through 290.642 provide minimum requirements pertaining to earned paid sick time and shall not be construed to preempt, limit, or otherwise affect the applicability of any other law, regulation, requirement, policy, or standard that provides for greater accrual or use by employees of earned paid sick time or that extends other protections to employees.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be interpreted or applied to create a power or obligation contrary to any federal law, rule, or regulation.

290.642. Except as detailed in section 290.618, all of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are severable, and if any provision, including any section, subsection, subdivision, paragraph, sentence, or clause, or the application thereof to any person or circumstance, is found by a court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted, such decision shall not affect other provisions or applications of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that can be given effect without the invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted provision or application, and to this end the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are declared severable.

Description

This proposal would amend Chapter 290 of the Revised Statutes of Missouri.

The amendment is to be voted on in November 2024.

Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, their office could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. However, if the enactment of this proposal were to result in substantial additional litigation, their office may be required to request additional appropriations.

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated their department has no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated no fiscal impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated this initiative petition has no impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated this petition, if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated they assume no direct fiscal impact from the proposed statutory amendment to Chapter 290 as government employees are exempt from its provisions. However, employees of providers that receive DMH funding would be impacted, which would include all contracted DMH providers.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated this proposal might impact their department however, they defer to the Office of Administration to respond.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated:

This petition would amend provisions relating to the accumulation of sick time required for employees depending on how many employees are employed by the employer. It also has various requirements regarding how sick time can be used and procedures employers must use. Violations are deemed misdemeanors, and damages are allowed to be awarded in civil suits. It states that the DOLIR "may" create new notices, promulgate rules, and initiate outreach programs but that the DOLIR is not required to create notices if it requires the appropriation of funds. It also states that the DOLIR may inspect employment records and investigate complaints of noncompliance. Still, such inspection is not required if it requires the appropriation of funds, and the cost estimate would be zero.

The funding source will be from General Revenue if the DOLIR receives complaints to enforce it. Therefore the DOLIR estimates it would need two Regulatory Auditors and one Administrative Support Assistant person at an annual ongoing cost of $255,975 by 2027, plus an initial information technology (IT) component of $28,318 and office equipment of $25,011.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety indicated no impact for their department, Director's office.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated no impact anticipated by their department.

Officials from the Governor's Office indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage law does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact. The state seems excluded from section 3 and we are not included in the definition of an employer in the new sections.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their agency because it specifically exempts the state from the definition of employer.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated this initiative petition excludes the state from the requirements of the proposed new law. Therefore there is no anticipated fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage law does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated beginning January 1, 2025, the minimum wage rate would be not less than $13.75 per hour. This rate would increase by $1.25 per hour each year of the next two years until reaching $16.25 per hour by January 1, 2027.

The increase to wages would approximately have the fiscal impact below for each year:

Calendar Year	Annual Increase from the Current Wage
2025	$ 3,495.00
2026	$ 9,215.00
2027	$ 97,725.00

Raising the minimum wage above $15 per hour pulls more employees into the cost estimate, which makes calendar year 2027 much higher.

This is an estimated impact if not exempt.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In fiscal year (FY) 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. Their office estimates $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no fiscal impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated this petition does not apply to county governments under 290.502.4 for minimum wage and the contemplated new Section 6 for sick leave regarding the definition of an employer. Clay County provides more generous sick leave than this measure as well.

They do estimate additional costs from this petition of $2,000 a year between the Circuit Court and Prosecutor to enforce the misdemeanor and civil action provisions.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county for this initiative petition proposing to amend Chapter 290, RSMo.

Officials from St. Louis County indicated this initiative petition has no apparent fiscal impact on their county.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this amendment would have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact to their college.

Officials from St. Louis Community College indicated the petition request is generally lower than their current compensation structure and therefore its passage appears to have minimal effect on their college. That being said, increases calculated by Consumer Price

Index or other indexed methods may affect them in the future and that cannot be determined at this time.

Officials from the Missouri Lottery indicated there is no impact to their agency.

Officials from the State Tax Commission indicated this initiative petition will not have a fiscal impact on their agency.

Officials from the Missouri Veterans Commission indicated this initiative petition creates no fiscal impact to the Missouri Veterans Commission. However, given the proposed changes to section 290.502 RSMo, they would note that those changes would make it more difficult for state agencies to recruit new employees. As to the remainder of the petition, the definition for the term "employer" found in the proposed section 290.600(6) specifically excludes the state and its agencies, so the requirements of the petition would not apply to the Commission.

Officials from the Missouri Ethics Commission indicated this initiative petition does not have fiscal impact on their Commission.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Police Commissioners indicated per Section 290.600, the Kansas City, Missouri Police Department is exempt as a political subdivision of the state.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated they predict no fiscal impact from this petition.

Officials from the Board of Election Commissioners City of St. Louis indicated the current lowest paid election board employee earns $15/hour. This petition contemplates raising the minimum wage incrementally until in 2027, where the minimum wage would be $16.25/hour (cost of living adjustments would occur thereafter).

Excluding the incremental raises, if the approximately 5 individuals earning $15/hour were to receive $16.25/hour, this would result in a yearly increase by the election board of $13,000.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners indicated this petition has no material fiscal impact on their operations.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated this petition has no fiscal impact to their Board.

Officials from the Children's Trust Fund indicated no impact.

Officials from the State Auditor's office indicated since this proposed initiative petition does not apply to government entities, this would have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the Missouri Gaming Commission indicated this initiative petition will not have any fiscal impact on their agency.

Lindsey Baker, Research Director, Missouri Budget Project indicated in summary, they estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state and local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue and decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy. She also provided the following information:

We estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state & local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy.

In addition to helping employees by allowing them to address their health needs without losing their jobs or ability to pay their bills, paid sick leave has many benefits for employers, including a healthier workforce, reduced turnover, and increased productivity. The benefits of paid sick leave have been highlighted by the COVID-19 pandemic, illustrating the importance of workers being able to recover at home without lost wages and without risking spread of contagious disease in the workplace.

Several ballot measures have been filed (24-025-042) that would require employers to provide earned sick leave in Missouri. Though the measures vary slightly, each would require employers to provide a minimum of 3-7 days of paid leave to employees, depending on hours worked and size of business. If implemented, Missouri would join the seventeen states, plus the District of Columbia, who ensure employees can earn paid sick leave to care for themselves or family members.ⁱ

An estimated 211,000 Missourians and their families would benefit from the earned sick time provided through these initiatives, with low-wage workers disproportionately likely to benefit from this policy.ⁱⁱ Expanding earned sick leave in Missouri is estimated to provide a net savings to society of between $612.4-$774.1 million annually depending on the number of days provided.ⁱⁱⁱ

Employment Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri's workforce would become stronger, more stable, and more productive leading to economic growth.

- Reduced Absenteeism. Access to earned sick leave allows workers to stay home, reducing the overall spread of illness in the workplace; this leads to fewer illnesses among workers and fewer overall days off work.^{iv}
- Reduced Turnover. Access to earned sick leave gives workers the ability to address their health needs and those of their families, without having to quit a job or risk being fired. Access to paid sick leave is associated with reduced job turnover, which in turn creates significant savings for businesses.^v
- Reduced Presenteeism. Employers who do not offer paid sick leave have higher rates of "presenteeism" or lost productivity due to employees working while injured or sick.^{vi} Offering paid sick leave reduces the likelihood of working at reduced capacity and allows workers to recover from illness or injury more quickly.

Health Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri would become a healthier state as workers would have the ability to care for themselves and their families, while simultaneously benefiting their communities.

- Reduced Flu Contagion in Society. Workers without paid sick leave are more likely to come to work sick, increasing the likelihood of spreading the illness.^{vii} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to stay home when ill, thus reducing the overall spread of influenza throughout the community.
- Reduced Workers Compensation Costs. Workers with access to paid leave are less likely to be injured on the job,^{viii} reducing overall workers comp claims and cost to employers.
- Reduced ER Visits. Paid sick leave is associated with fewer trips to the emergency room.^{ix} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to properly care for themselves and family members during an illness, preventing an escalation of the illness.
- Improved Nursing Home Care. Unpaid sick leave is especially problematic in nursing homes as the residents are especially vulnerable to the consequences of high turnover, absenteeism and presenteeism.^x Access to paid sick leave allows nursing home workers to take care of themselves so that they can better care for residents.

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Petitions 24-025-042

While previous estimates show a cost associated with state level administration and enforcement for earned sick leave of approximately $1 million, we also expect that earned sick leave will be associated with a significant potential for increased revenue collections & decreased spending on services associated with the cost savings outlined above.

- Increased revenue collections. A stronger and more productive workforce is associated with economic growth. Economic growth is in turn associated with growth in both state and local revenue as both sales & income tax collections rise due to increased spending and wages.
- Reductions in spending on services. When workers are able to care for themselves and their families (and others in their community) they are less likely to have minor illnesses escalate into costly health problems. This reduces the overall cost of health care, particularly among low-wage workers who are disproportionately likely to lack access to paid leave. This in turn reduces state and local spending on health other related public services.

As a result, we estimate the fiscal impact on state & local revenue of earned sick leave will be minimal as the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will offset the modest expenses associated with state level administration. While we are confident that a net savings will be realized, the size of the savings is too speculative to estimate exact fiscal impact.

Re: Proposal Related to Chapter 290, RSMo, Petition 2024-025-042

Dear Auditor Fitzpatrick:

A Better Balance is writing to submit our fact sheet titled "Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business" to accompany petition 24-025-042 and to inform the fiscal note process. We thank you for considering our submission.

A Better Balance, a national nonprofit advocacy organization with four regional offices, uses the power of the law to ensure that working individuals can care for themselves and their loved ones without jeopardizing their economic security. Through legislative advocacy, policy, direct legal services, strategic litigation, and public education, our organization works around the country to advance policies like paid sick leave, paid family and medical leave, quality childcare and eldercare, and anti-discrimination protections for pregnant workers and caregivers. From Arizona and Colorado to Duluth (MN) and beyond, our organization has worked on the growing number of paid sick leave laws now in effect.

The enclosed fact sheet summarizes research and data on the resoundingly positive effect that paid sick leave has on business. When paid sick leave policies are in place, businesses financially benefit from increased worker productivity, reduced spread of contagious illness in the workplace, and lower employee turnover. Research has also underscored that workers and the larger community also have better health outcomes overall when there is access to paid sick leave. As documented in the attached fact sheet, paid sick leave has been shown to work well for businesses and workers throughout the country.

Thank you for giving us the opportunity to submit this information. Please do not hesitate to contact A Better Balance at cgomez@abetterbalance.org if we can provide any additional assistance.

Sincerely,
A Better Balance

Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business

The research is clear: paid sick leave isn't just good for workers, it's good for business as well. Healthy workers are essential to a successful business and a strong economy. When workers have access to paid sick leave, they demonstrate increased job satisfaction, commitment, and morale, while employers—and their bottom lines—reap the benefits of increased worker performance and productivity and reduced worker turnover. And access to guaranteed paid sick leave is a vital component to keeping businesses open and safe through the COVID-19 pandemic and beyond.

Access to paid sick leave increases worker productivity and reduces the spread of contagious illness in the workplace, leading to direct savings for businesses.

- Workers with minor illnesses are less productive than their healthy co-workers.¹ Paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (when employees show up to work while sick), which costs businesses approximately $207.6 billion annually in reduced productivity.² After Washington State implemented its paid sick leave law, for example, the percentage of workers that went to work while sick decreased significantly.³
- Paid sick leave also reduces the spread of contagion between co-workers—further increasing productivity and labor in the workplace.⁴ Absenteeism caused by the introduction of flu-like illness in the workplace is estimated to cost employers up to 111 million workdays per year.⁵ Even before the pandemic, states with paid sick leave requirements saw a 40% decrease in influenza rates.⁶

Paid sick leave has proven to be particularly crucial to keeping businesses open during the COVID-19 pandemic.

- As the country with the highest cumulative number of COVID-19 cases,⁷ and the only one of the thirteen G12 countries with no paid sick leave,⁸ it is undeniable that the U.S. will need paid sick leave to end this crisis, to save lives, and to minimize disruption to businesses struggling to avoid the spread of COVID-19 in the workplace.
- Paid sick leave has been critical to keeping businesses open throughout the pandemic. One study found that states in which workers gained temporary access to paid sick leave through the federal Families First Coronavirus Response Act⁹ had around 400 fewer confirmed COVID-19 cases per day as a result.¹⁰

Employers with paid sick leave benefit from reduced worker turnover and better relationships with their employees, saving employers the cost of recruiting, interviewing, and training new hires.

- In general, worker turnover is estimated to cost employers the equivalent of 21% of a worker's annual compensation.¹¹ However, providing paid sick leave only increases labor costs by an average of 2.7 cents per hour worked¹² and workers with paid sick leave are less likely to leave their jobs,¹³ saving businesses money on turnover costs such as interviewing and training.¹⁴

- Paid sick leave also increases worker loyalty and job satisfaction—factors known to increase productivity and job retention.¹⁵ After Connecticut’s paid sick law went into effect, nearly 30% of surveyed employers reported improved employee morale, and over 20% reported increased employee motivation or loyalty.¹⁶
- Two years after paid sick leave went into effect in New York City, one employer reported that “the impact that I saw in my business was a much stronger bond between ourselves and our employees, higher productivity, and a more successful business, not a less successful business.”¹⁷

Paid sick leave also saves employers money by reducing the likelihood of workplace accidents.

- Throughout the country, direct and indirect costs associated with on-the-job injuries cost employers billions of dollars.¹⁸ Workers with paid sick leave are 28% less likely than workers without access to paid sick leave to be injured on the job.¹⁹

Lack of paid sick leave makes workers more likely to go to work while sick and puts co-workers and our communities at risk. With paid sick leave, our workplaces and communities are healthier, which improves the bottom line for employers.

- Access to sick leave will be essential to overcoming the COVID-19 pandemic, as evidenced by previous pandemics. For example, it is estimated that the lack of paid sick leave was responsible for 5 million incidents of flu-like illness during the H1N1 pandemic.²⁰
- In a simulated influenza epidemic, 72% of employees who caught the flu at work did so because of exposure to other employees attending work while sick; paid sick days would reduce flu incidences among workers by approximately 6% across all workplaces, and by over 7% in workplaces with 49 or fewer employees.²¹
- As explained above, access to paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (employees showing up to work while sick) and reduces overall contagion.²² Presenteeism is linked to the spread of harmful contagions to co-workers and customers.²³
- A study of data from the 2009 flu outbreak found that workers with paid sick leave were 30 percent more likely to be vaccinated and were more likely to seek treatment when they were sick with flu-like symptoms compared to those without paid sick leave.²⁴ This has proven true for COVID-19 as well—in June 2021, workers whose employers provided paid time off to get the vaccine or recover from any side effects were 24% more likely to have received at least one dose of the vaccine than workers whose employers provided no paid vaccine leave.²⁵
- A lack of access to paid sick days is particularly harmful for service industry workers. Nearly two-thirds of restaurant workers have cooked or served food while sick,²⁶ and in 2011, nearly one in five food service workers went to work vomiting or with diarrhea, creating dangerous health conditions.²⁷

- People without access to paid sick leave are 1.5x more likely to go to work while they have a contagious illness and are nearly twice as likely to send a sick child to school or daycare than those with access to it.²⁸
- States that have implemented paid sick leave laws had an 11% decrease of cases of flu-like illnesses in their first year after enactment.²⁹

Workers with paid sick leave are more likely to seek preventative care than workers without paid sick leave, leading to better health outcomes and less time away from work.

- People without paid sick days tend to be unable to make time for preventative health care, such as cancer screenings and flu shots, which makes it more likely that such workers will have more significant healthcare needs at later stages of an illness.³⁰
- Workers with access to paid sick days report better general health than workers without paid sick days and are less likely to delay preventive medical care for themselves or for their family.³¹

Paid sick leave has proven to work well for businesses all over the U.S., and experience shows that workers don't abuse paid sick leave.

- Business practices don't have to change to keep up with paid sick leave laws. In a survey of New York City employers after the city's paid sick law was implemented, 91% of employers reported no reduction in hiring, 97% indicated they did not reduce hours, about 94% did not raise prices, and nearly 85% of employers reported no change in their overall business costs.³²
 - In a similar survey of employers in Connecticut a year and a half after the state's paid sick law went into effect, nearly 90% of employers reported no reduction in hours, and about 85% did not raise prices.³³
- Paid sick leave laws stimulate economic growth. When San Francisco's paid sick law went into effect in 2007, the city's job growth actually exceeded that of nearby counties, despite unfounded fears that the law would cause an economic slowdown.³⁴
 - In comparison to other surrounding cities, Seattle saw greater increases in the number of employers in the city when its paid sick leave law was implemented,³⁵ and in general, job growth continued on an upward trend.³⁶
 - After New York City's paid sick days were implemented, the average wage for hourly workers increased and the average number of weekly absences declined.³⁷ On the law's first anniversary, the New York City government released a report touting its successful implementation and noting that since the law went into effect, "the city has had steady job growth and the lowest unemployment in six years."³⁸
- Workers don't abuse paid sick leave. After New York implemented its paid sick leave law, 98% of employers reported no cases of employee abuse of sick days.³⁹

- Employers know that paid sick leave laws work. Two years after New York City’s paid sick law was implemented, a staggering 86% of New York City employers polled supported the law.⁴⁰
- Studies in Washington, D.C. and Seattle also saw no negative economic effects following implementation of their paid sick leave laws in either job loss or movement of businesses out of the city. A report from the Washington D.C. Auditor, issued five years after passage of the District’s sick leave law, found that the law “did not have the economic impact of encouraging business owners to move a business from the District nor did the [law] have the economic impact of discouraging business owners to locate a business in the District of Columbia.”⁴¹ Likewise, a study of the economic impact of Seattle’s sick leave law found that a “preliminary look at available data shows no widespread negative economic impact as some opponents of the ordinance feared.”⁴²
- Recognizing the benefits of paid sick leave, San Francisco, Washington, D.C., and New York City—all among the earliest adopters of paid sick leave laws—later expanded their paid sick leave laws, underscoring how well these laws are working for workers, employers, and communities.

They do not believe the fiscal impact of petitions 24-031 through 24-042 will be different from 24-016 through 24-019, so their submission is the same. They also provided the following information:

Our analysis estimates the impact of the proposed petitions on state sales and personal income tax revenue in Missouri. Our analysis follows a process that has been used in the past to estimate the impact of minimum wage increases, with some updates. We are unable to provide calculations on local sales and income tax revenue, although it should be noted that impacted workers in Kansas City and St. Louis City are subject to a 1% earnings tax on income, so those municipalities will experience revenue gains from their constituents seeing wage increases. Local sales tax revenue will also increase, although the different taxing rates per jurisdiction made estimates overly cumbersome to predict. We also reference some economic literature on the impact of minimum wage laws on employment , social benefit spending and downstream impacts of wage increase in order to address some common claims made by opponents of similar initiatives in the past as well as provide a broader context of impact of wage increases.

As each of these petitions explicitly exclude public employers¹ from proposed increases, we do not include an analysis of payroll expenses to these employers.

I. Economic literature on the employment impact of increases in the minimum wage

With 30 states and numerous other municipalities having increased the minimum wage above the federal minimum, there is ample evidence of the impact of these increases. While opponents will undoubtedly cite individual studies that predict catastrophic job loss and resulting decline in state revenue, the most credible comprehensive review of empirical evidence comes from Hristos Doucouliagos and T.D. Stanley and shows no discernible impact on employment. Their study, “Publication Selection Bias in Minimum- Wage Research? A Meta-Regression Analysis²” combines over 1,500 estimates from 64 different studies. This peer reviewed article has the advantage of any single study in that it used a set of predetermined, objective criteria for weighing the validity of statistical findings across different studies that produced different results.

In addition to this comprehensive review, a recent publication “Are $15 Minimum Wages too High” provides an analysis of California which has gradually increased the minimum wage from $8 in 2014 to $15 in 2022. Their analysis focuses on impacts of two groups of workers most exposed to minimum wage increases- teenagers and restaurant workers and finds that “substantial and ongoing pay increases throughout the treatment period and find no significant disemployment effects, even in relatively low-wage counties.³” This is the most recent study and is analyzing a similar level of increases and time period as the proposed initiatives.

There is ample empirical and theoretical evidence that corroborates these studies. First, relative to total wage and labor costs, minimum-wage increases are small. Second, employers and workers respond to minimum wage increases in many ways that reduce the actual costs to employers.

Probably the most important economic response to a higher minimum wage is a reduction in turnover. At higher wages, employers fill vacancies faster and retain employees longer, boosting total employment and average productivity per worker while reducing direct and indirect training costs. A 2017 study by employee benefits news found that turnover costs as high as 33% of a workers annual salary⁴. Avoiding these costs provides an obvious benefit to employers and research from Dube, Lester and Reich in 2012⁵ finds “striking evidence that separations, new hires, and turnover rates for teens and restaurant workers fall substantially following a minimum wage increase.”

Based on these empirical studies we feel confident in concluding that there is no evidence that increasing the minimum wage will reduce employment. Accordingly, we do not include any projections for impact on employment and the resulting effects on revenue in our analysis.

II. Impact on state and federal spending on social safety net programs

One area where the state is likely to experience significant direct savings from an increase in the minimum wage is on state spending on social safety net programs. Research suggests that at least 44% of Missouri recipients of Medicaid, SNAP or the Federal EITC are members of working families who would be directly impacted by the proposed initiatives⁶. State and Federal spending for this share of the workers on these programs totals $2,400,000.00 dollars. While programs such as SNAP are paid entirely by the federal government, medicaid has a percentage paid by state revenue and the state EITC going into effect this year will cost the state revenue. While individual circumstances often dictate the cost of these or similar programs to the state, it holds that as workers earn higher wages at work access to these benefits will decrease, saving the state potentially tens of millions of dollars.

III. Estimate of number of workers impacted statewide and impact on wages

Number of impacted workers				Total Wage Growth
	Direct impact	Indirectly impacted	Total
Proposal 1	293,000	198,000	491,000	$576,819,000
Proposal 2	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,076,047,000
Proposal 3	331,000	194,000	525,000	$733,133,000
Proposal 4	394,000	241,000	635,000	$1,222,991,000
Proposal 5	293,000	198,000	491,000	$688,721,000
Proposal 6	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,213,236,000
Proposal 7	331,000	194,000	525,000	$852,823,000

Across all eight version of the petitions estimates show a low of $576 million and a high of over $1.3 billion in wage growth for Missouri workers. These estimates include direct impacts to workers making under the minimum wage as well as secondary impacts to workers whose wages are predicted to rise as a result of the minimum wage increases.

IV. Estimate of state income and sales tax revenue

⁶ <https://laborcenter.berkeley.edu/the-public-cost-of-a-low-federal-minimum-wage/>

Based on the wage increase numbers above and the conclusion that minimum wage increases have no discernible impact on employment, we next calculate the impact of projected increases on state sales tax revenue and individual state income tax revenue for Missouri. As previously mentioned, we do not include estimates for local impacts, although we do project increased revenue there as local jurisdictions do capture sales tax revenue and in the case of the Kansas City and the City of St. Louis, increases in income are subject to the individual 1% earnings tax. We do not include any speculation of increased prices as a way to offset higher wages, although any such increase would result in higher sales tax revenue.

	Estimated sales tax revenue*	Estimated individual income tax revenue	Total revenue
Proposal 1	$8,738,808	$24,367,615	$33,106,423
Proposal 2	$16,302,112	$45,457,412	$61,759,524
Proposal 3	$11,712,965	$32,660,864	$44,373,829
Proposal 4	$18,528,314	$51,665,035	$70,193,348
Proposal 5	$10,434,123	$29,094,895	$39,529,018
Proposal 6	$18,380,525	$51,252,936	$69,633,462
Proposal 7	$12,920,268	$36,027,354	$48,947,623
Proposal 8	$20,397,748	$56,877,834	$77,275,582

State sales tax revenue is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average annual Missouri General Revenue sales tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 1.515%)*

Income tax is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average Missouri net individual income tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 4.523%) less an expected 6.6% reduction in collections due to the recent reduction of Missouri's top income tax bracket to 4.95%.*

V. Other downstream impacts of higher wages

Countless studies have also demonstrated the negative health impacts on adults and children of low wages as well as the negative impacts on child development, including academic achievement, of low wages. These situations often contain confounding variables that can make ascertaining cause and effect difficult, recent research using natural experiments to measure the direction of causation of the impact of public policies offers guidance for consideration. The research makes clear that “increases in parental income are found to lead to higher test scores and better educational outcomes for children, greater likelihood of employment in young

adulthood, and improved earnings⁷.” While the exact impact on state or local revenue is difficult to predict, research shows that the impact of higher wages on student academic achievement were four times higher per dollar increase as the effects found in a study of class size reductions that cost around $12,000 per student⁸.” Direct impacts on state and local revenue, especially in the short term, are difficult to predict, but the growing body of research shows definite positive long term impacts on human development resulting from wage increases.

VI. Conclusion

Overall we conclude that these petitions would generate a minimum net benefit to state general revenue of between thirty three and seventy seven million dollars with an undetermined net benefit for local revenue based on local considerations. This benefit is the direct result of the wage increases. Other savings are likely to accrue from a decrease in spending on safety net programs and a downstream benefit to the families of recipients of the wage increases. We submit this information in hopes that it can be useful in your determination of the fiscal impact of the proposed initiatives. Should you need any other information please do not hesitate to contact our office.

Chapter 290, RSMo, is amended by amending section 290.502 and enacting fifteen new sections to be known as sections 290.600, 290.603, 290.606, 290.609, 290.612, 290.615, 290.618, 290.621, 290.624, 290.627, 290.630, 290.633, 290.636, 290.639, and 290.642, to read as follows:

3. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, and notwithstanding subsection 1 of this section, effective January 1, [2019] 2025, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of not less than [$8.60] $13.75 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased each year by [$.85] $1.25 per hour, effective January 1 of each of the next [four] two years, until it reaches [$12.00] $16.25 per hour, effective January 1, [2023] 2027. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased or decreased on January 1, [2024] 2028, and on January 1 of successive years, per the method set forth in subsection 2 of this section. If at any time the federal minimum wage rate is above or is thereafter increased above the minimum wage then in effect under this subsection, the minimum wage required by this subsection shall continue to be increased pursuant to this subsection 3, but the higher federal rate shall immediately become the minimum wage required by this subsection and shall be increased or decreased per the method set forth in subsection 2 for so long as it remains higher than the state minimum wage required and increased pursuant to this subsection.

4. For purposes of this section, the term "public employer" means an employer that is the state or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, or other political subdivision of the state. Subsection 3 of this section shall not apply to a public employer with respect to its employees. Any public employer that is subject to subsections 1 and 2 of this section shall continue to be subject to those subsections.

(2) "Director", Director of the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations.

(3) "Domestic violence", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(4) "Earned paid sick time", time that is compensated at the same hourly rate and with the same benefits, including health care benefits, as the employee normally earns during hours worked and is provided by an employer to an employee for the purposes described in section 290.606, but in no case shall this hourly amount be less than that provided under section 290.502.

(5) "Employee", any individual employed in this state by an employer, but does not include:

(E) Any individual employed on or about a private residence on an occasional basis for six hours or less on each occasion;

(F) Any individual employed on a casual basis to provide baby-sitting services;

(L) Any individual described by the provisions of section 29 U.S.C. 213(a)(8).

(6) "Employer", any person acting directly or indirectly in the interest of an employer in relation to an employee; provided, however, that for the purposes of sections 290.600 through 290.642 "employer" does not include the United States Government, the state, or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, public higher education institution, or other political subdivision of the state.

(7) "Family member", any of the following individuals:

(A) Regardless of age, a biological, adopted or foster child, stepchild or legal ward, a child of a domestic partner, a child to whom the employee stands in loco parentis, or an individual to whom the employee stood in loco parentis when the individual was a minor;

(B) A biological, foster, stepparent or adoptive parent or legal guardian of an employee or an employee's spouse or domestic partner or an individual who stood in loco parentis when the employee or employee's spouse or domestic partner was a minor child;

(D) A grandparent, grandchild, or sibling (whether of a biological, foster, adoptive or step relationship) of the employee or the employee's spouse or domestic partner; or

(E) A person for whom the employee is responsible for providing or arranging health or safety-related care, including but not limited to helping that individual obtain diagnostic, preventative, routine, or therapeutic health treatment or ensuring the person is safe following domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking.

(8) "Health care professional," any individual licensed under federal or any state law to provide medical or emergency services, including but not limited to doctors, nurses, certified nurse midwives, mental health professionals, and emergency room personnel.

(9) "Person", any individual, partnership, association, corporation, business, business trust, legal representative, or any organized group of persons.

(10) "Retaliatory personnel action", denial of any right guaranteed under sections 290.600 through 290.642, or any threat, discharge, suspension, demotion, reduction of hours, or any other adverse action against an employee for the exercise of any right guaranteed herein. "Retaliatory personnel action" shall also include interference with or punishment for in any manner participating in or assisting an investigation, proceeding, or hearing under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

(11) "Same hourly rate", means the following:

(A) For employees paid on the basis of a single hourly rate, the same hourly rate shall be the employee's regular hourly rate.

(B) For employees who are paid multiple hourly rates of pay from the same employer, the same hourly rate shall be either:

(i) the wages the employee would have been paid for the hours absent during use of earned paid sick time if the employee had worked; or,

(ii) the weighted average of all hourly rates of pay during the previous pay period.

Whatever method the employer uses, the employer must use a consistent method for each employee throughout a year.

(C) For employees who are paid a salary, the same hourly rate shall be determined by dividing the wages the employee earns in the previous pay period by the total number of hours worked during the previous pay period. For determining total number of hours worked during the previous pay period, employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1), the Fair Labor Standards Act, shall be assumed to work 40 hours in each work week unless their normal work week is less than 40 hours, in which case earned paid sick time shall accrue and the same hourly rate shall be calculated based on the employee's normal work week. Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(D) For employees paid on a piece rate or a fee-for-service basis, the same hourly rate shall be a reasonable calculation of the wages or fees the employee would have received for the piece work, service, or part thereof, if the employee had worked. Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(E) For employees who are paid on a commission basis (whether base wage plus commission or commission only), the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the base wage or the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(F) For employees who receive and retain compensation in the form of gratuities in addition to wages, the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the employee's regular hourly rate or 100% of the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502 without deduction of any tips as a credit.

(12) "Sexual assault", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(13) "Stalking", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(14) "Year", a regular and consecutive twelve-month period as determined by the employer; except that for the purposes of section 290.615 and section 290.627, "year" shall mean a calendar year.

290.603. 1. Employees of an employer with fifteen or more employees shall accrue a minimum of one hour of earned paid sick time for every thirty hours worked, but such employees shall not be entitled to use more than fifty-six hours of earned paid sick time per year, unless the employer selects a higher limit.

2. Employees of an employer with fewer than fifteen employees shall accrue a minimum of one hour of earned paid sick time for every thirty hours worked, but such employees shall not be entitled to use more than forty hours of earned paid sick time per year, unless the employer selects a higher limit.

3. In determining the number of employees of an employer, all employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation on a full-time, part-time, or temporary basis shall be counted. In situations in which the number of employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation per week fluctuates above and below 15 employees per week over the course of a year, an employer is required to provide earned paid sick time pursuant to subsection (1) of this section if it maintained fifteen or more employees in the state on the payroll for some portion of a working day in each of twenty or more different calendar weeks, including any periods of leave, and whether or not the weeks were consecutive, in either the current or the preceding year (irrespective of whether the same individuals were in employment in each working day).

4. All employees shall accrue earned paid sick time as follows:

(A) Earned paid sick time as provided in this section shall begin to accrue at the commencement of employment or May 1, 2025, whichever is later. An employee shall be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued. An employer may provide all earned paid sick time that an employee is expected to accrue in a year at the beginning of the year.

(B) Employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1) of the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act will be assumed to work forty hours in each work week for purposes of earned paid sick time accrual unless their normal work week is less than forty hours, in which case earned paid sick time accrues based upon that normal work week.

(C) Up to 80 hours of earned paid sick time shall be carried over to the following year if the employee has any unused accrued earned paid sick time at the end of the year, but this law does not require an employer to permit an employee to use more than the applicable number of hours of earned paid sick time per year as set forth in subsection (1) and (2) of this section. Alternatively, in lieu of carryover of unused earned paid sick time from one year to the next, an employer may pay an employee for unused earned paid sick time at the end of a year which could be carried over and provide the employee with an amount of paid sick time that meets or exceeds the requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that is available for the employee's immediate use at the beginning of the subsequent year.

(D) If an employee is transferred to a separate division, entity, or location, but remains employed by the same employer, the employee is entitled to all earned paid sick time accrued at the prior division, entity, or location and is entitled to use all earned paid sick time as provided in this section. When there is a separation from employment and the employee is rehired within nine months of separation by the same employer, previously accrued earned paid sick time that had not been used shall be reinstated. Further, the employee shall be entitled to use accrued earned paid sick time and accrue additional earned paid sick time at the re-commencement of employment.

(E) When a different employer succeeds or takes the place of an existing employer, all employees of the original employer who remain employed by the successor employer are entitled to all earned paid sick time they accrued when employed by the original employer, and are entitled to use earned paid sick time previously accrued.

(F) At its discretion, an employer may loan earned paid sick time to an employee in advance of accrual by such employee.

5. Any employer with a paid leave policy, such as a paid time off policy, who makes available an amount of paid leave sufficient to meet the accrual requirements of this section that may be used for the same purposes and under the same conditions as earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642 is not required to provide additional paid sick time under this section.

6. Except as specifically provided in this section, nothing in this section shall be construed as requiring financial or other reimbursement to an employee from an employer upon the employee's termination, resignation, retirement, or other separation from employment for accrued earned paid sick time that has not been used.

7. Employees shall not accrue earned paid sick time before May 1, 2025. Employees who are employed or who commence employment on or after May 1, 2025 shall accrue earned paid sick time and be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued in accordance with sections 290.600 through 290.642. The Department may develop model posters and notices, engage in rule-making, initiate outreach programs, and engage in other activities for implementation of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 as authorized by those sections before May 1, 2025.

290.606. 1. Earned paid sick time shall be provided to an employee by an employer for:

(A) An employee's mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for preventative medical care;

(B) Care of a family member with a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs preventative medical care;

(C) Closure of the employee's place of business by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or an employee's need to care for a child whose school or place of care has been closed by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or care for oneself or a family member when it has been determined by the health authorities having jurisdiction or by a health care provider that the employee's or family member's presence in the community may jeopardize the health of others because of his or her exposure to a communicable disease, whether or not the employee or family member has actually contracted the communicable disease; or

(D) Absence necessary due to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, provided the leave is to allow the employee to obtain for the employee or the employee's family member:

(i) Medical attention needed to recover from physical or psychological injury or disability caused by domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking;

(ii) Services from a victim services organization;

(iii) Psychological or other counseling;

(iv) Relocation or taking steps to secure an existing home due to the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or

(v) Legal services, including preparing for or participating in any civil or criminal legal proceeding related to or resulting from the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking.

2. Earned paid sick time shall be provided upon the request of an employee. Such request may be made orally, in writing, by electronic means, or by any other means acceptable to the employer. When possible, the request shall include the expected duration of the absence.

3. When the use of earned paid sick time is foreseeable, the employee shall make a good faith effort to provide notice of the need for such time to the employer in advance of the use of the earned paid sick time and shall make a reasonable effort to schedule the use of earned paid sick time in a manner that does not unduly disrupt the operations of the employer. Where such need is not foreseeable, an employer may require an employee to provide notice of the need for the use of earned paid sick time as soon as practicable.

4. An employer that requires notice of the need to use earned paid sick time where the need is not foreseeable shall provide a written policy that contains procedures for the employee to provide notice. An employer that has not provided to the employee a copy of its written policy for providing such notice shall not deny earned paid sick time to the employee based on non-compliance with such a policy.

5. An employer may not require, as a condition of an employee's taking earned paid sick time, that the employee search for or find a replacement worker to cover the hours during which the employee is using earned paid sick time.

6. Earned paid sick time may be used in the smaller of hourly increments or the smallest increment that the employer's payroll system uses to account for absences or use of other time.

7. For earned paid sick time of three or more consecutive work days, an employer may require reasonable documentation that the earned paid sick time has been used for a purpose covered by subsection (1) of this section.

(A) Documentation signed by a health care professional indicating that earned paid sick time is necessary shall be considered reasonable documentation for purposes of this section.

(B) In cases of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, if the employer requests, one of the following types of documentation selected by the employee shall be considered reasonable documentation: (i) a police report indicating that the employee or the employee's family member was a victim of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, (ii) a written statement from an employee or agent of a victim service provider affirming that the employee or employee's family member is or was receiving services from a victim service provider; (iii) documentation signed by a health care professional from whom the employee or employee's family member sought assistance relating to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking or the effects thereof; (vi) a court document indicating that an employee or employee's family member is or was involved in a legal action related to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or (v) a written statement from the employee affirming that the employee or employee's family member is taking or took earned paid sick time for a qualifying purpose of subsection (1) of this section.

(C) An employer may not require that the documentation explain the nature of the illness, details of the underlying health needs, or the details of the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, unless otherwise required by law.

290.609. 1. It shall be unlawful for an employer or any other person to interfere with, restrain, or deny the exercise of, or the attempt to exercise, any right protected under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. An employer shall not take retaliatory personnel action or discriminate against an employee or former employee because the individual has exercised rights protected under sections 290.600 through 290.642. Such rights include, but are not limited to, the right to request or use earned paid sick time pursuant to sections 290.600 through 290.642; the right to file a complaint or inform any person about any employer's alleged violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642; the right to participate in any investigation, hearing, or proceeding or cooperate with or assist the Department in any investigations of alleged violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642; and the right to inform any person of his or her potential rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. It shall be unlawful for an employer's absence control policy to count earned paid sick time taken under sections 290.600 through 290.642 as an absence that may lead to or result in discipline, discharge, demotion, suspension, or any other adverse action.

4. Protections of this section shall apply to any individual who mistakenly but in good faith alleges violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

290.612. 1. Employers shall give employees a written notice about earned paid sick time within fourteen calendar days of the commencement of employment or on April 15, 2025, whichever is later, which must include the following information: (1) beginning May 1, 2025, employees accrue and are entitled to earned paid sick time at the rate one hour of earned paid sick time for every 30 hours of work, and may use earned paid sick time, subject to the limits and terms under sections 290.600 through 290.642 of Missouri law, (2) it is prohibited for an employer to take retaliatory personnel action against employees who request or use earned paid sick time as allowed by law, (3) each employee has the right to bring a civil action if earned paid sick time as required by sections 290.600 through 290.642 is denied by the employer or the employee is subjected to retaliatory personnel action by the employer for exercising the employee's rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642; and, (4) the contact information for the Department. Notice shall be provided by the Employer to the employee on a single piece of paper, at least 8.5 x 11, in no less than 14-point font.

2. Beginning April 15, 2025, employers shall display a poster that contains the information required in subsection (1) of this section in a conspicuous and accessible place in each establishment where such employees are employed, provided that such poster has been made available by the Department.

3. The Department may create and make available to employers, model notices and posters that contain the information required under subsection (1) of this section for employers' use in complying with subsections (1) and (2) of this section. Nothing in this subsection shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department to create or make available notices or posters if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.615. 1. Employers shall retain records documenting hours worked by employees and earned paid sick time taken by employees, for a period of not less than three years, and shall allow the Department access to such records, with appropriate notice and at a mutually agreeable time, to monitor compliance with the requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. To the extent permitted by law, the Director may inspect such records, and the records shall be open for inspection by the Director by appointment. Where the records required under this section are kept outside the state, the records shall be made available to the Director upon demand. Every such employer shall furnish to the Director on demand a sworn statement of time records and information upon forms prescribed or approved by the Director. All the records and information obtained by the Department are confidential and shall be disclosed only on order of a court of competent jurisdiction.

290.618. 1. The Department may, in accordance with chapter 536, promulgate rules for the implementation, enforcement, and administration of sections 290.600 through 290.642. Any rule or portion of a rule, as that term is defined in section 536.010, that is created under the authority delegated in this section shall become effective only if it complies with and is subject to all of the provisions of chapter 536 and, if applicable, section 536.028. This section and chapter 536 are nonseverable and if any of the powers vested with the general assembly pursuant to chapter 536 to review, to delay the effective date, or to disapprove and annul a rule are subsequently held unconstitutional, then the grant of rulemaking authority and any rule proposed or adopted after November 5, 2024, shall be invalid and void.

290.621. 1. The Department may investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to $500 per day of each day of a continuing violation. A final decision of the department is subject to review in accordance with the provisions of chapter 536.

2. The Department may develop and implement an outreach program to inform employees, parents, and persons who are under the care of a health care provider about the availability of earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642. This program may include the distribution of notices and other written materials to child care and elder care providers, domestic violence shelters, schools, hospitals, community health centers and other health care providers in Missouri.

3. A municipality, county, city, town, or village may adopt ordinances, rules, and regulations to investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, with respect to employers within, or employees performing work while physically present in, the geographic boundaries of the municipality, county, city, town, or village. Any such ordinance, rule, or regulation shall be consistent with this law and any Department rules or regulations and system for compliance and enforcement. The municipality, county, city, town, or village may exercise such powers as allowed by any applicable charter or ordinance, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to the maximum allowed for an ordinance violation. Before investigating or seeking to resolve any complaint between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall give notice to the Department with a copy of the complaint and, within 14 days of such notice, the Department may intervene as of right and participate in the matter to ensure that the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642 or, alternatively, the Department may institute its own proceedings in which case the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall refrain from acting on the matter so long as the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642. If the Department does not, within 14 days, intervene or instigate its own proceedings, the municipality, county, city, town, or village may, without the Department, investigate and attempt to resolve the complaint and take other additional means within its power to enforce sections 290.600 through 290.642 against the subject of the complaint. In no event shall an employer be subject to compliance proceedings arising out of a single set of facts after having already been subjected to a final compliance order by another governmental entity.

4. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department, a municipality, county, city, town, or village to conduct investigations and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, to establish and implement a system to receive or resolve complaints, to establish additional means of enforcement, or to conduct outreach and education, including the creation of notices and other written materials, concerning sections 290.600 through 290.642, if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.624. 1. Any employer who willfully violates or fails to comply with any of the provisions and requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be guilty of a class C misdemeanor; provided, however, that an employer who willfully violates the notice and posting requirements of section 290.612 shall be guilty of an infraction.

2. For purposes of this section, each day of violation or failure to comply and each employee affected shall constitute a separate offense.

290.627. 1. Any individual who claims to have been aggrieved by a failure of an employer to comply with any portion of sections 290.600 through 290.642, including but not limited to the failure to provide earned paid sick time or to allow employees to use such time consistent with sections 290.600 through 290.642, or who claims to have suffered a retaliatory personnel action, shall have a right of action and may commence a civil action in the appropriate court of jurisdiction within three years of the accrual of the cause of action, to obtain appropriate relief with respect to such unlawful violation. Such action may be brought without first filing an administrative complaint.

2. In a civil action under this section, if the court finds a violation has occurred, the court may grant as relief, as it deems appropriate and to the extent permitted by law, any permanent or temporary injunction, the full amount of any unpaid earned sick time plus any actual damages suffered as the result of the employer's violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642, an additional amount equal to twice any unpaid earned sick time as liquidated damages, costs, and reasonable attorney's fees as may be allowed by the court, and other legal or equitable relief as may be appropriate to remedy the violation, including, without limitation, reinstatement to employment and back pay.

290.630. 1. Except as otherwise required by law, an employer may not require disclosure of details relating to an employee's or an employee's family member's health information, domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking as a condition of providing earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. Unless as otherwise required by law, any health or safety information possessed by an employer regarding an employee or employee's family member must:

(A) be maintained on a separate form and in a separate file from other personnel information;

(B) be treated as confidential medical records; and

(C) not be disclosed except to the affected employee or with the express written permission of the affected employee.

290.633. 1. With respect to employees covered by a valid collective bargaining agreement in effect on November 5, 2024, no provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply until the stated expiration date in the collective bargaining agreement; however, further the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply upon any such agreement's renewal, extension, amendment, or modification in any respect after November 5, 2024.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed to interfere, impede, or otherwise diminish the right of employees to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing in order to establish earned paid sick time or other conditions of work in excess of the applicable minimum standards under the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. All or any portion of the earned paid sick time requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall not apply to employees covered by a bona fide collective bargaining agreement to the extent that such requirements are expressly waived in the collective bargaining agreement in clear and unambiguous terms.

4. With the exception noted in subsection 3, any waiver by an employee of rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed contrary to public policy and shall be void.

290.636. 1. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed to discourage or prohibit an employer from the adoption or retention of an earned paid sick time policy more generous than the one required herein.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed as diminishing the obligation of an employer to comply with any contract, collective bargaining agreement, employment benefit plan, or other agreement providing more generous paid sick time to an employee than required herein. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed as diminishing the rights of public employees regarding paid sick time or use of paid sick time as provided in the laws of Missouri and ordinances of political subdivisions pertaining to public employees.

290.639. 1. Sections 290.600 through 290.642 provide minimum requirements pertaining to earned paid sick time and shall not be construed to preempt, limit, or otherwise affect the applicability of any other law, regulation, requirement, policy, or standard that provides for greater accrual or use by employees of earned paid sick time or that extends other protections to employees.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be interpreted or applied to create a power or obligation contrary to any federal law, rule, or regulation.

290.642. Except as detailed in section 290.618, all of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are severable, and if any provision, including any section, subsection, subdivision, paragraph, sentence, or clause, or the application thereof to any person or circumstance, is found by a court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted, such decision shall not affect other provisions or applications of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that can be given effect without the invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted provision or application, and to this end the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are declared severable.

Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, their office could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. However, if the enactment of this proposal were to result in substantial additional litigation, their office may be required to request additional appropriations.

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated their department has no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated no fiscal impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated this initiative petition has no impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated this petition, if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated they assume no direct fiscal impact from the proposed statutory amendment to Chapter 290 as government employees are exempt from its provisions. However, employees of providers that receive DMH funding would be impacted, which would include all contracted DMH providers.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated this proposal might impact their department however, they defer to the Office of Administration to respond.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated:

This petition would amend provisions relating to the accumulation of sick time required for employees depending on how many employees are employed by the employer. It also has various requirements regarding how sick time can be used and procedures employers must use. Violations are deemed misdemeanors, and damages are allowed to be awarded in civil suits. It states that the DOLIR "may" create new notices, promulgate rules, and initiate outreach programs but that the DOLIR is not required to create notices if it requires the appropriation of funds. It also states that the DOLIR may inspect employment records and investigate complaints of noncompliance. Still, such inspection is not required if it requires the appropriation of funds, and the cost estimate would be zero.

The funding source will be from General Revenue if the DOLIR receives complaints to enforce it. Therefore the DOLIR estimates it would need two Regulatory Auditors and one Administrative Support Assistant person at an annual ongoing cost of $255,975 by 2027, plus an initial information technology (IT) component of $28,318 and office equipment of $25,011.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety indicated no impact for their department, Director's office.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated no impact anticipated by their department.

Officials from the Governor's Office indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage law does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact. The state seems excluded from section 3 and we are not included in the definition of an employer in the new sections.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their agency because it specifically exempts the state from the definition of employer.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated this initiative petition excludes the state from the requirements of the proposed new law. Therefore there is no anticipated fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage law does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated beginning January 1, 2025, the minimum wage rate would be not less than $13.75 per hour. This rate would increase by $1.25 per hour each year of the next two years until reaching $16.25 per hour by January 1, 2027.

The increase to wages would approximately have the fiscal impact below for each year:

Calendar Year	Annual Increase from the Current Wage
2025	$ 3,495.00
2027	$ 97,725.00

Raising the minimum wage above $15 per hour pulls more employees into the cost estimate, which makes calendar year 2027 much higher.

This is an estimated impact if not exempt.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In fiscal year (FY) 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. Their office estimates $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no fiscal impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated this petition does not apply to county governments under 290.502.4 for minimum wage and the contemplated new Section 6 for sick leave regarding the definition of an employer. Clay County provides more generous sick leave than this measure as well.

They do estimate additional costs from this petition of $2,000 a year between the Circuit Court and Prosecutor to enforce the misdemeanor and civil action provisions.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county for this initiative petition proposing to amend Chapter 290, RSMo.

Officials from St. Louis County indicated this initiative petition has no apparent fiscal impact on their county.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this amendment would have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact to their college.

Officials from St. Louis Community College indicated the petition request is generally lower than their current compensation structure and therefore its passage appears to have minimal effect on their college. That being said, increases calculated by Consumer Price

Index or other indexed methods may affect them in the future and that cannot be determined at this time.

Officials from the Missouri Lottery indicated there is no impact to their agency.

Officials from the State Tax Commission indicated this initiative petition will not have a fiscal impact on their agency.

Officials from the Missouri Veterans Commission indicated this initiative petition creates no fiscal impact to the Missouri Veterans Commission. However, given the proposed changes to section 290.502 RSMo, they would note that those changes would make it more difficult for state agencies to recruit new employees. As to the remainder of the petition, the definition for the term "employer" found in the proposed section 290.600(6) specifically excludes the state and its agencies, so the requirements of the petition would not apply to the Commission.

Officials from the Missouri Ethics Commission indicated this initiative petition does not have fiscal impact on their Commission.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Police Commissioners indicated per Section 290.600, the Kansas City, Missouri Police Department is exempt as a political subdivision of the state.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated they predict no fiscal impact from this petition.

Officials from the Board of Election Commissioners City of St. Louis indicated the current lowest paid election board employee earns $15/hour. This petition contemplates raising the minimum wage incrementally until in 2027, where the minimum wage would be $16.25 / hour (cost of living adjustments would occur thereafter).

Excluding the incremental raises, if the approximately 5 individuals earning $15/hour were to receive $16.25/hour, this would result in a yearly increase by the election board of $13,000.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners indicated this petition has no material fiscal impact on their operations.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated this petition has no fiscal impact to their Board.

Officials from the Children's Trust Fund indicated no impact.

Officials from the State Auditor's office indicated since this proposed initiative petition does not apply to government entities, this would have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the Missouri Gaming Commission indicated this initiative petition will not have any fiscal impact on their agency.

Lindsey Baker, Research Director, Missouri Budget Project indicated in summary, they estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state and local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue and decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy. She also provided the following information:

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Earned Sick Leave Petitions 24-025-042

We estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state & local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy.

In addition to helping employees by allowing them to address their health needs without losing their jobs or ability to pay their bills, paid sick leave has many benefits for employers, including a healthier workforce, reduced turnover, and increased productivity. The benefits of paid sick leave have been highlighted by the COVID-19 pandemic, illustrating the importance of workers being able to recover at home without lost wages and without risking spread of contagious disease in the workplace.

Several ballot measures have been filed (24-025-042) that would require employers to provide earned sick leave in Missouri. Though the measures vary slightly, each would require employers to provide a minimum of 3-7 days of paid leave to employees, depending on hours worked and size of business. If implemented, Missouri would join the seventeen states, plus the District of Columbia, who ensure employees can earn paid sick leave to care for themselves or family members.ⁱ

An estimated 211,000 Missourians and their families would benefit from the earned sick time provided through these initiatives, with low-wage workers disproportionately likely to benefit from this policy.ⁱⁱ Expanding earned sick leave in Missouri is estimated to provide a net savings to society of between $612.4-$774.1 million annually depending on the number of days provided.ⁱⁱⁱ

	3-5 Scenario*	5-7 Scenario*
Estimated Cost Savings	$1.26B	$1.29B
- Employment Related Savings	$436.73M	$466.6M
- Health Related Savings	$825.61M	$825.61M
Estimated Costs (Employer & State Admin)	$488.22M	$679.77M
Estimated Net Societal Benefit*	$774.11M	$612.44M

In the 3/5 scenario, small employers are required to offer at least three days of leave and large employers at least five days. The 5/7 scenario requires small employers to offer at least five days of paid sick leave and large employers to offer at least seven days of paid leave. A small employer defined as less than 15 employees.*

Societal Cost Savings from Earned Sick Leave in Missouri

Employment Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri's workforce would become stronger, more stable, and more productive leading to economic growth.

- Reduced Absenteeism. Access to earned sick leave allows workers to stay home, reducing the overall spread of illness in the workplace; this leads to fewer illnesses among workers and fewer overall days off work.^{iv}
- Reduced Turnover. Access to earned sick leave gives workers the ability to address their health needs and those of their families, without having to quit a job or risk being fired. Access to paid sick leave is associated with reduced job turnover, which in turn creates significant savings for businesses.^v
- Reduced Presenteeism. Employers who do not offer paid sick leave have higher rates of "presenteeism" or lost productivity due to employees working while injured or sick.^{vi} Offering paid sick leave reduces the likelihood of working at reduced capacity and allows workers to recover from illness or injury more quickly.

Health Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri would become a healthier state as workers would have the ability to care for themselves and their families, while simultaneously benefiting their communities.

- Reduced Flu Contagion in Society. Workers without paid sick leave are more likely to come to work sick, increasing the likelihood of spreading the illness.^{vii} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to stay home when ill, thus reducing the overall spread of influenza throughout the community.
- Reduced Workers Compensation Costs. Workers with access to paid leave are less likely to be injured on the job,^{viii} reducing overall workers comp claims and cost to employers.
- Reduced ER Visits. Paid sick leave is associated with fewer trips to the emergency room.^{ix} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to properly care for themselves and family members during an illness, preventing an escalation of the illness.
- Improved Nursing Home Care. Unpaid sick leave is especially problematic in nursing homes as the residents are especially vulnerable to the consequences of high turnover, absenteeism and presenteeism.^x Access to paid sick leave allows nursing home workers to take care of themselves so that they can better care for residents.

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Petitions 24-025-042

While previous estimates show a cost associated with state level administration and enforcement for earned sick leave of approximately $1 million, we also expect that earned sick leave will be associated with a significant potential for increased revenue collections & decreased spending on services associated with the cost savings outlined above.

- Increased revenue collections. A stronger and more productive workforce is associated with economic growth. Economic growth is in turn associated with growth in both state and local revenue as both sales & income tax collections rise due to increased spending and wages.
- Reductions in spending on services. When workers are able to care for themselves and their families (and others in their community) they are less likely to have minor illnesses escalate into costly health problems. This reduces the overall cost of health care, particularly among low-wage workers who are disproportionately likely to lack access to paid leave. This in turn reduces state and local spending on health other related public services.

As a result, we estimate the fiscal impact on state & local revenue of earned sick leave will be minimal as the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will offset the modest expenses associated with state level administration. While we are confident that a net savings will be realized, the size of the savings is too speculative to estimate exact fiscal impact.

Re: Proposal Related to Chapter 290, RSMo, Petition 2024-025-042

Dear Auditor Fitzpatrick:

A Better Balance is writing to submit our fact sheet titled "Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business" to accompany petition 24-025-042 and to inform the fiscal note process. We thank you for considering our submission.

A Better Balance, a national nonprofit advocacy organization with four regional offices, uses the power of the law to ensure that working individuals can care for themselves and their loved ones without jeopardizing their economic security. Through legislative advocacy, policy, direct legal services, strategic litigation, and public education, our organization works around the country to advance policies like paid sick leave, paid family and medical leave, quality childcare and eldercare, and anti-discrimination protections for pregnant workers and caregivers. From Arizona and Colorado to Duluth (MN) and beyond, our organization has worked on the growing number of paid sick leave laws now in effect.

The enclosed fact sheet summarizes research and data on the resoundingly positive effect that paid sick leave has on business. When paid sick leave policies are in place, businesses financially benefit from increased worker productivity, reduced spread of contagious illness in the workplace, and lower employee turnover. Research has also underscored that workers and the larger community also have better health outcomes overall when there is access to paid sick leave. As documented in the attached fact sheet, paid sick leave has been shown to work well for businesses and workers throughout the country.

Thank you for giving us the opportunity to submit this information. Please do not hesitate to contact A Better Balance at cgomez@abetterbalance.org if we can provide any additional assistance.

Sincerely,
A Better Balance

Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business

The research is clear: paid sick leave isn't just good for workers, it's good for business as well. Healthy workers are essential to a successful business and a strong economy. When workers have access to paid sick leave, they demonstrate increased job satisfaction, commitment, and morale, while employers—and their bottom lines—reap the benefits of increased worker performance and productivity and reduced worker turnover. And access to guaranteed paid sick leave is a vital component to keeping businesses open and safe through the COVID-19 pandemic and beyond.

Access to paid sick leave increases worker productivity and reduces the spread of contagious illness in the workplace, leading to direct savings for businesses.

- Workers with minor illnesses are less productive than their healthy co-workers.¹ Paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (when employees show up to work while sick), which costs businesses approximately $207.6 billion annually in reduced productivity.² After Washington State implemented its paid sick leave law, for example, the percentage of workers that went to work while sick decreased significantly.³
- Paid sick leave also reduces the spread of contagion between co-workers—further increasing productivity and labor in the workplace.⁴ Absenteeism caused by the introduction of flu-like illness in the workplace is estimated to cost employers up to 111 million workdays per year.⁵ Even before the pandemic, states with paid sick leave requirements saw a 40% decrease in influenza rates.⁶

Paid sick leave has proven to be particularly crucial to keeping businesses open during the COVID-19 pandemic.

- As the country with the highest cumulative number of COVID-19 cases,⁷ and the only one of the thirteen G12 countries with no paid sick leave,⁸ it is undeniable that the U.S. will need paid sick leave to end this crisis, to save lives, and to minimize disruption to businesses struggling to avoid the spread of COVID-19 in the workplace.
- Paid sick leave has been critical to keeping businesses open throughout the pandemic. One study found that states in which workers gained temporary access to paid sick leave through the federal Families First Coronavirus Response Act⁹ had around 400 fewer confirmed COVID-19 cases per day as a result.¹⁰

Employers with paid sick leave benefit from reduced worker turnover and better relationships with their employees, saving employers the cost of recruiting, interviewing, and training new hires.

- In general, worker turnover is estimated to cost employers the equivalent of 21% of a worker's annual compensation.¹¹ However, providing paid sick leave only increases labor costs by an average of 2.7 cents per hour worked¹² and workers with paid sick leave are less likely to leave their jobs,¹³ saving businesses money on turnover costs such as interviewing and training.¹⁴

- Paid sick leave also increases worker loyalty and job satisfaction—factors known to increase productivity and job retention.¹⁵ After Connecticut’s paid sick law went into effect, nearly 30% of surveyed employers reported improved employee morale, and over 20% reported increased employee motivation or loyalty.¹⁶
- Two years after paid sick leave went into effect in New York City, one employer reported that “the impact that I saw in my business was a much stronger bond between ourselves and our employees, higher productivity, and a more successful business, not a less successful business.”¹⁷

Paid sick leave also saves employers money by reducing the likelihood of workplace accidents.

- Throughout the country, direct and indirect costs associated with on-the-job injuries cost employers billions of dollars.¹⁸ Workers with paid sick leave are 28% less likely than workers without access to paid sick leave to be injured on the job.¹⁹

Lack of paid sick leave makes workers more likely to go to work while sick and puts co-workers and our communities at risk. With paid sick leave, our workplaces and communities are healthier, which improves the bottom line for employers.

- Access to sick leave will be essential to overcoming the COVID-19 pandemic, as evidenced by previous pandemics. For example, it is estimated that the lack of paid sick leave was responsible for 5 million incidents of flu-like illness during the H1N1 pandemic.²⁰
- In a simulated influenza epidemic, 72% of employees who caught the flu at work did so because of exposure to other employees attending work while sick; paid sick days would reduce flu incidences among workers by approximately 6% across all workplaces, and by over 7% in workplaces with 49 or fewer employees.²¹
- As explained above, access to paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (employees showing up to work while sick) and reduces overall contagion.²² Presenteeism is linked to the spread of harmful contagions to co-workers and customers.²³
- A study of data from the 2009 flu outbreak found that workers with paid sick leave were 30 percent more likely to be vaccinated and were more likely to seek treatment when they were sick with flu-like symptoms compared to those without paid sick leave.²⁴ This has proven true for COVID-19 as well—in June 2021, workers whose employers provided paid time off to get the vaccine or recover from any side effects were 24% more likely to have received at least one dose of the vaccine than workers whose employers provided no paid vaccine leave.²⁵
- A lack of access to paid sick days is particularly harmful for service industry workers. Nearly two-thirds of restaurant workers have cooked or served food while sick,²⁶ and in 2011, nearly one in five food service workers went to work vomiting or with diarrhea, creating dangerous health conditions.²⁷

- People without access to paid sick leave are 1.5x more likely to go to work while they have a contagious illness and are nearly twice as likely to send a sick child to school or daycare than those with access to it.²⁸
- States that have implemented paid sick leave laws had an 11% decrease of cases of flu-like illnesses in their first year after enactment.²⁹

Workers with paid sick leave are more likely to seek preventative care than workers without paid sick leave, leading to better health outcomes and less time away from work.

- People without paid sick days tend to be unable to make time for preventative health care, such as cancer screenings and flu shots, which makes it more likely that such workers will have more significant healthcare needs at later stages of an illness.³⁰
- Workers with access to paid sick days report better general health than workers without paid sick days and are less likely to delay preventive medical care for themselves or for their family.³¹

Paid sick leave has proven to work well for businesses all over the U.S., and experience shows that workers don't abuse paid sick leave.

- Business practices don't have to change to keep up with paid sick leave laws. In a survey of New York City employers after the city's paid sick law was implemented, 91% of employers reported no reduction in hiring, 97% indicated they did not reduce hours, about 94% did not raise prices, and nearly 85% of employers reported no change in their overall business costs.³²
 - In a similar survey of employers in Connecticut a year and a half after the state's paid sick law went into effect, nearly 90% of employers reported no reduction in hours, and about 85% did not raise prices.³³
- Paid sick leave laws stimulate economic growth. When San Francisco's paid sick law went into effect in 2007, the city's job growth actually exceeded that of nearby counties, despite unfounded fears that the law would cause an economic slowdown.³⁴
 - In comparison to other surrounding cities, Seattle saw greater increases in the number of employers in the city when its paid sick leave law was implemented,³⁵ and in general, job growth continued on an upward trend.³⁶
 - After New York City's paid sick days were implemented, the average wage for hourly workers increased and the average number of weekly absences declined.³⁷ On the law's first anniversary, the New York City government released a report touting its successful implementation and noting that since the law went into effect, "the city has had steady job growth and the lowest unemployment in six years."³⁸
- Workers don't abuse paid sick leave. After New York implemented its paid sick leave law, 98% of employers reported no cases of employee abuse of sick days.³⁹

- Employers know that paid sick leave laws work. Two years after New York City’s paid sick law was implemented, a staggering 86% of New York City employers polled supported the law.⁴⁰
- Studies in Washington, D.C. and Seattle also saw no negative economic effects following implementation of their paid sick leave laws in either job loss or movement of businesses out of the city. A report from the Washington D.C. Auditor, issued five years after passage of the District’s sick leave law, found that the law “did not have the economic impact of encouraging business owners to move a business from the District nor did the [law] have the economic impact of discouraging business owners to locate a business in the District of Columbia.”⁴¹ Likewise, a study of the economic impact of Seattle’s sick leave law found that a “preliminary look at available data shows no widespread negative economic impact as some opponents of the ordinance feared.”⁴²
- Recognizing the benefits of paid sick leave, San Francisco, Washington, D.C., and New York City—all among the earliest adopters of paid sick leave laws—later expanded their paid sick leave laws, underscoring how well these laws are working for workers, employers, and communities.

Richard von Glahn, Policy Director, Missouri Jobs with Justice indicated he was resubmitting the information previously submitted for initiative petitions 24-016 through 24-023 for initiative petitions 24-031 through 24-042. Petitions 24-031 through petition 24-042 all contain the language from petitions 24-016 through 24-019 in regards to the minimum wage. They do not believe the fiscal impact of petitions 24-031 through 24-042 will be different from 24-016 through 24-019, so their submission is the same. They also provided the following information:

Our analysis estimates the impact of the proposed petitions on state sales and personal income tax revenue in Missouri. Our analysis follows a process that has been used in the past to estimate the impact of minimum wage increases, with some updates. We are unable to provide calculations on local sales and income tax revenue, although it should be noted that impacted workers in Kansas City and St. Louis City are subject to a 1% earnings tax on income, so those municipalities will experience revenue gains from their constituents seeing wage increases. Local sales tax revenue will also increase, although the different taxing rates per jurisdiction made estimates overly cumbersome to predict. We also reference some economic literature on the impact of minimum wage laws on employment , social benefit spending and downstream impacts of wage increase in order to address some common claims made by opponents of similar initiatives in the past as well as provide a broader context of impact of wage increases.

As each of these petitions explicitly exclude public employers¹ from proposed increases, we do not include an analysis of payroll expenses to these employers.

I. Economic literature on the employment impact of increases in the minimum wage

With 30 states and numerous other municipalities having increased the minimum wage above the federal minimum, there is ample evidence of the impact of these increases. While opponents will undoubtedly cite individual studies that predict catastrophic job loss and resulting decline in state revenue, the most credible comprehensive review of empirical evidence comes from Hristos Doucouliagos and T.D. Stanley and shows no discernible impact on employment. Their study, “Publication Selection Bias in Minimum- Wage Research? A Meta-Regression Analysis²” combines over 1,500 estimates from 64 different studies. This peer reviewed article has the advantage of any single study in that it used a set of predetermined, objective criteria for weighing the validity of statistical findings across different studies that produced different results.

In addition to this comprehensive review, a recent publication “Are $15 Minimum Wages too High” provides an analysis of California which has gradually increased the minimum wage from $8 in 2014 to $15 in 2022. Their analysis focuses on impacts of two groups of workers most exposed to minimum wage increases- teenagers and restaurant workers and finds that “substantial and ongoing pay increases throughout the treatment period and find no significant disemployment effects, even in relatively low-wage counties.³” This is the most recent study and is analyzing a similar level of increases and time period as the proposed initiatives.

There is ample empirical and theoretical evidence that corroborates these studies. First, relative to total wage and labor costs, minimum-wage increases are small. Second, employers and workers respond to minimum wage increases in many ways that reduce the actual costs to employers.

Probably the most important economic response to a higher minimum wage is a reduction in turnover. At higher wages, employers fill vacancies faster and retain employees longer, boosting total employment and average productivity per worker while reducing direct and indirect training costs. A 2017 study by employee benefits news found that turnover costs as high as 33% of a workers annual salary⁴. Avoiding these costs provides an obvious benefit to employers and research from Dube, Lester and Reich in 2012⁵ finds “striking evidence that separations, new hires, and turnover rates for teens and restaurant workers fall substantially following a minimum wage increase.”

Based on these empirical studies we feel confident in concluding that there is no evidence that increasing the minimum wage will reduce employment. Accordingly, we do not include any projections for impact on employment and the resulting effects on revenue in our analysis.

II. Impact on state and federal spending on social safety net programs

One area where the state is likely to experience significant direct savings from an increase in the minimum wage is on state spending on social safety net programs. Research suggests that at least 44% of Missouri recipients of Medicaid, SNAP or the Federal EITC are members of working families who would be directly impacted by the proposed initiatives⁶. State and Federal spending for this share of the workers on these programs totals $2,400,000.00 dollars. While programs such as SNAP are paid entirely by the federal government, medicaid has a percentage paid by state revenue and the state EITC going into effect this year will cost the state revenue. While individual circumstances often dictate the cost of these or similar programs to the state, it holds that as workers earn higher wages at work access to these benefits will decrease, saving the state potentially tens of millions of dollars.

III. Estimate of number of workers impacted statewide and impact on wages

Number of impacted workers				Total Wage Growth
	Direct impact	Indirectly impacted	Total
Proposal 1	293,000	198,000	491,000	$576,819,000
Proposal 2	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,076,047,000
Proposal 3	331,000	194,000	525,000	$733,133,000
Proposal 4	394,000	241,000	635,000	$1,222,991,000
Proposal 5	293,000	198,000	491,000	$688,721,000
Proposal 6	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,213,236,000
Proposal 7	331,000	194,000	525,000	$852,823,000
Proposal 8	394,000	241,000	635,000	$1,346,386,000

Across all eight version of the petitions estimates show a low of $576 million and a high of over $1.3 billion in wage growth for Missouri workers. These estimates include direct impacts to workers making under the minimum wage as well as secondary impacts to workers whose wages are predicted to rise as a result of the minimum wage increases.

IV. Estimate of state income and sales tax revenue

⁶ <https://laborcenter.berkeley.edu/the-public-cost-of-a-low-federal-minimum-wage/>

Based on the wage increase numbers above and the conclusion that minimum wage increases have no discernible impact on employment, we next calculate the impact of projected increases on state sales tax revenue and individual state income tax revenue for Missouri. As previously mentioned, we do not include estimates for local impacts, although we do project increased revenue there as local jurisdictions do capture sales tax revenue and in the case of the Kansas City and the City of St. Louis, increases in income are subject to the individual 1% earnings tax. We do not include any speculation of increased prices as a way to offset higher wages, although any such increase would result in higher sales tax revenue.

	Estimated sales tax revenue*	Estimated individual income tax revenue	Total revenue
Proposal 1	$8,738,808	$24,367,615	$33,106,423
Proposal 2	$16,302,112	$45,457,412	$61,759,524
Proposal 3	$11,712,965	$32,660,864	$44,373,829
Proposal 4	$18,528,314	$51,665,035	$70,193,348
Proposal 5	$10,434,123	$29,094,895	$39,529,018
Proposal 6	$18,380,525	$51,252,936	$69,633,462
Proposal 7	$12,920,268	$36,027,354	$48,947,623
Proposal 8	$20,397,748	$56,877,834	$77,275,582

State sales tax revenue is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average annual Missouri General Revenue sales tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 1.515%)*

Income tax is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average Missouri net individual income tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 4.523%) less an expected 6.6% reduction in collections due to the recent reduction of Missouri's top income tax bracket to 4.95%.*

V. Other downstream impacts of higher wages

Countless studies have also demonstrated the negative health impacts on adults and children of low wages as well as the negative impacts on child development, including academic achievement, of low wages. These situations often contain confounding variables that can make ascertaining cause and effect difficult, recent research using natural experiments to measure the direction of causation of the impact of public policies offers guidance for consideration. The research makes clear that “increases in parental income are found to lead to higher test scores and better educational outcomes for children, greater likelihood of employment in young

adulthood, and improved earnings⁷.” While the exact impact on state or local revenue is difficult to predict, research shows that the impact of higher wages on student academic achievement were four times higher per dollar increase as the effects found in a study of class size reductions that cost around $12,000 per student⁸.” Direct impacts on state and local revenue, especially in the short term, are difficult to predict, but the growing body of research shows definite positive long term impacts on human development resulting from wage increases.

VI. Conclusion

Overall we conclude that these petitions would generate a minimum net benefit to state general revenue of between thirty three and seventy seven million dollars with an undetermined net benefit for local revenue based on local considerations. This benefit is the direct result of the wage increases. Other savings are likely to accrue from a decrease in spending on safety net programs and a downstream benefit to the families of recipients of the wage increases. We submit this information in hopes that it can be useful in your determination of the fiscal impact of the proposed initiatives. Should you need any other information please do not hesitate to contact our office.

Chapter 290, RSMo, is amended by amending section 290.502 and enacting fifteen new sections to be known as sections 290.600, 290.603, 290.606, 290.609, 290.612, 290.615, 290.618, 290.621, 290.624, 290.627, 290.630, 290.633, 290.636, 290.639, and 290.642, to read as follows:

2. The minimum wage shall be increased or decreased on January 1, 2008, and on January 1 of successive years, by the increase or decrease in the cost of living. On September 30, 2007, and on each September 30 of each successive year, the director shall measure the increase or decrease in the cost of living by the percentage increase or decrease as of the preceding July over the level as of July of the immediately preceding year of the Consumer Price Index for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers (CPI-W) or successor index as published by the U.S. Department of Labor or its successor agency, with the amount of the minimum wage increase or decrease rounded to the nearest five cents.

3. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, and notwithstanding subsection 1 of this section, effective January 1, [2019] 2025, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of not less than [$8.60] $13.50 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased each year by [$.85] $.75 per hour, effective January 1 of each of the next [four] two years, until it reaches [$12.00] $15.00 per hour, effective January 1, [2023] 2027. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased or decreased on January 1, [2024] 2028, and on January 1 of successive years, per the method set forth in subsection 2 of this section. If at any time the federal minimum wage rate is above or is thereafter increased above the minimum wage then in effect under this subsection, the minimum wage required by this subsection shall continue to be increased pursuant to this subsection 3, but the higher federal rate shall immediately become the minimum wage required by this subsection and shall be increased or decreased per the method set forth in subsection 2 for so long as it remains higher than the state minimum wage required and increased pursuant to this subsection.

Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(D) For employees paid on a piece rate or a fee-for-service basis, the same hourly rate shall be a reasonable calculation of the wages or fees the employee would have received for the piece work, service, or part thereof, if the employee had worked. Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(E) For employees who are paid on a commission basis (whether base wage plus commission or commission only), the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the base wage or the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(F) For employees who receive and retain compensation in the form of gratuities in addition to wages, the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the employee's regular hourly rate or 100% of the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502 without deduction of any tips as a credit.

(14) "Sexual assault", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(15) "Stalking", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(16) "Year", a regular and consecutive twelve-month period as determined by the employer; except that for the purposes of section 290.615 and section 290.627, "year" shall mean a calendar year.

290.603. 1. Employees of an employer with fifteen or more employees shall accrue a minimum of one hour of earned paid sick time for every thirty hours worked, but such employees shall not be entitled to use more than fifty-six hours of earned paid sick time per year, unless the employer selects a higher limit.

2. Employees of an employer with fewer than fifteen employees shall accrue a minimum of one hour of earned paid sick time for every thirty hours worked, but such employees shall not be entitled to use more than forty hours of earned paid sick time per year, unless the employer selects a higher limit.

3. In determining the number of employees of an employer, all employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation on a full-time, part-time, or temporary basis shall be counted. In situations in which the number of employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation per week fluctuates above and below 15 employees per week over the course of a year, an employer is required to provide earned paid sick time pursuant to subsection (1) of this section if it maintained fifteen or more employees in the state on the payroll for some portion of a working day in each of twenty or more different calendar weeks, including any periods of leave, and whether or not the weeks were consecutive, in either the current or the preceding year (irrespective of whether the same individuals were in employment in each working day).

4. All employees shall accrue earned paid sick time as follows:

(A) Earned paid sick time as provided in this section shall begin to accrue at the commencement of employment or May 1, 2025, whichever is later. An employee shall be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued. An employer may provide all earned paid sick time that an employee is expected to accrue in a year at the beginning of the year.

(B) Employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1) of the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act will be assumed to work forty hours in each work week for purposes of earned paid sick time accrual unless their normal work week is less than forty hours, in which case earned paid sick time accrues based upon that normal work week.

(C) Up to 80 hours of earned paid sick time shall be carried over to the following year if the employee has any unused accrued earned paid sick time at the end of the year, but this law does not require an employer to permit an employee to use more than the applicable number of hours of earned paid sick time per year as set forth in subsection (1) and (2) of this section. Alternatively, in lieu of carryover of unused earned paid sick time from one year to the next, an employer may pay an employee for unused earned paid sick time at the end of a year which could be carried over and provide the employee with an amount of paid sick time that meets or exceeds the requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that is available for the employee's immediate use at the beginning of the subsequent year.

(D) If an employee is transferred to a separate division, entity, or location, but remains employed by the same employer, the employee is entitled to all earned paid sick time accrued at the prior division, entity, or location and is entitled to use all earned paid sick time as provided in this section. When there is a separation from employment and the employee is rehired within nine months of separation by the same employer, previously accrued earned paid sick time that had not been used shall be reinstated. Further, the employee shall be entitled to use accrued earned paid sick time and accrue additional earned paid sick time at the re-commencement of employment.

(E) When a different employer succeeds or takes the place of an existing employer, all employees of the original employer who remain employed by the successor employer are entitled to all earned paid sick time they accrued when employed by the original employer, and are entitled to use earned paid sick time previously accrued.

(F) At its discretion, an employer may loan earned paid sick time to an employee in advance of accrual by such employee.

5. Any employer with a paid leave policy, such as a paid time off policy, who makes available an amount of paid leave sufficient to meet the accrual requirements of this section that may be used for the same purposes and under the same conditions as earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642 is not required to provide additional paid sick time under this section.

6. Except as specifically provided in this section, nothing in this section shall be construed as requiring financial or other reimbursement to an employee from an employer upon the employee's termination, resignation, retirement, or other separation from employment for accrued earned paid sick time that has not been used.

7. Employees shall not accrue earned paid sick time before May 1, 2025. Employees who are employed or who commence employment on or after May 1, 2025 shall accrue earned paid sick time and be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued in accordance with sections 290.600 through 290.642. The Department may develop model posters and notices, engage in rule-making, initiate outreach programs, and engage in other activities for implementation of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 as authorized by those sections before May 1, 2025.

290.606. 1. Earned paid sick time shall be provided to an employee by an employer for:

(A) An employee's mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for preventative medical care;

(B) Care of a family member with a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs preventative medical care;

(C) Closure of the employee's place of business by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or an employee's need to care for a child whose school or place of care has been closed by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or care for oneself or a family member when it has been determined by the health authorities having jurisdiction or by a health care provider that the employee's or family member's presence in the community may jeopardize the health of others because of his or her exposure to a communicable disease, whether or not the employee or family member has actually contracted the communicable disease; or

(D) Absence necessary due to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, provided the leave is to allow the employee to obtain for the employee or the employee's family member:

(i) Medical attention needed to recover from physical or psychological injury or disability caused by domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking;

(ii) Services from a victim services organization;

(iii) Psychological or other counseling;

(iv) Relocation or taking steps to secure an existing home due to the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or

(v) Legal services, including preparing for or participating in any civil or criminal legal proceeding related to or resulting from the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking.

2. Earned paid sick time shall be provided upon the request of an employee. Such request may be made orally, in writing, by electronic means, or by any other means acceptable to the employer. When possible, the request shall include the expected duration of the absence.

3. When the use of earned paid sick time is foreseeable, the employee shall make a good faith effort to provide notice of the need for such time to the employer in advance of the use of the earned paid sick time and shall make a reasonable effort to schedule the use of earned paid sick time in a manner that does not unduly disrupt the operations of the employer. Where such need is not foreseeable, an employer may require an employee to provide notice of the need for the use of earned paid sick time as soon as practicable.

4. An employer that requires notice of the need to use earned paid sick time where the need is not foreseeable shall provide a written policy that contains procedures for the employee to provide notice. An employer that has not provided to the employee a copy of its written policy for providing such notice shall not deny earned paid sick time to the employee based on non-compliance with such a policy.

5. An employer may not require, as a condition of an employee's taking earned paid sick time, that the employee search for or find a replacement worker to cover the hours during which the employee is using earned paid sick time.

6. Earned paid sick time may be used in the smaller of hourly increments or the smallest increment that the employer's payroll system uses to account for absences or use of other time.

7. For earned paid sick time of three or more consecutive work days, an employer may require reasonable documentation that the earned paid sick time has been used for a purpose covered by subsection (1) of this section.

(A) Documentation signed by a health care professional indicating that earned paid sick time is necessary shall be considered reasonable documentation for purposes of this section.

(B) In cases of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, if the employer requests, one of the following types of documentation selected by the employee shall be considered reasonable documentation: (i) a police report indicating that the employee or the employee's family member was a victim of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, (ii) a written statement from an employee or agent of a victim service provider affirming that the employee or employee's family member is or was receiving services from a victim service provider; (iii) documentation signed by a health care professional from whom the employee or employee's family member sought assistance relating to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking or the effects thereof; (vi) a court document indicating that an employee or employee's family member is or was involved in a legal action related to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or (v) a written statement from the employee affirming that the employee or employee's family member is taking or took earned paid sick time for a qualifying purpose of subsection (1) of this section.

(C) An employer may not require that the documentation explain the nature of the illness, details of the underlying health needs, or the details of the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, unless otherwise required by law.

290.609. 1. It shall be unlawful for an employer or any other person to interfere with, restrain, or deny the exercise of, or the attempt to exercise, any right protected under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. An employer shall not take retaliatory personnel action or discriminate against an employee or former employee because the individual has exercised rights protected under sections 290.600 through 290.642. Such rights include, but are not limited to, the right to request or use earned paid sick time pursuant to sections 290.600 through 290.642; the right to file a complaint or inform any person about any employer's alleged violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642; the right to participate in any investigation, hearing, or proceeding or cooperate with or assist the Department in any investigations of alleged violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642; and the right to inform any person of his or her potential rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. It shall be unlawful for an employer's absence control policy to count earned paid sick time taken under sections 290.600 through 290.642 as an absence that may lead to or result in discipline, discharge, demotion, suspension, or any other adverse action.

4. Protections of this section shall apply to any individual who mistakenly but in good faith alleges violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

290.612. 1. Employers shall give employees a written notice about earned paid sick time within fourteen calendar days of the commencement of employment or on April 15, 2025, whichever is later, which must include the following information: (1) beginning May 1, 2025, employees accrue and are entitled to earned paid sick time at the rate one hour of earned paid sick time for every 30 hours of work, and may use earned paid sick time, subject to the limits and terms under sections 290.600 through 290.642 of Missouri law, (2) it is prohibited for an employer to take retaliatory personnel action against employees who request or use earned paid sick time as allowed by law, (3) each employee has the right to bring a civil action if earned paid sick time as required by sections 290.600 through 290.642 is denied by the employer or the employee is subjected to retaliatory personnel action by the employer for exercising the employee's rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642; and, (4) the contact information for the Department. Notice shall be provided by the Employer to the employee on a single piece of paper, at least 8.5 x 11, in no less than 14-point font.

2. Beginning April 15, 2025, employers shall display a poster that contains the information required in subsection (1) of this section in a conspicuous and accessible place in each establishment where such employees are employed, provided that such poster has been made available by the Department.

3. The Department may create and make available to employers, model notices and posters that contain the information required under subsection (1) of this section for employers' use in complying with subsections (1) and (2) of this section. Nothing in this subsection shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department to create or make available notices or posters if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.615. 1. Employers shall retain records documenting hours worked by employees and earned paid sick time taken by employees, for a period of not less than three years, and shall allow the Department access to such records, with appropriate notice and at a mutually agreeable time, to monitor compliance with the requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. To the extent permitted by law, the Director may inspect such records, and the records shall be open for inspection by the Director by appointment. Where the records required under this section are kept outside the state, the records shall be made available to the Director upon demand. Every such employer shall furnish to the Director on demand a sworn statement of time records and information upon forms prescribed or approved by the Director. All the records and information obtained by the Department are confidential and shall be disclosed only on order of a court of competent jurisdiction.

3. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department or Director to access or inspect records or to create forms relating to the inspection of records if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.618. 1. The Department may, in accordance with chapter 536, promulgate rules for the implementation, enforcement, and administration of sections 290.600 through 290.642. Any rule or portion of a rule, as that term is defined in section 536.010, that is created under the authority delegated in this section shall become effective only if it complies with and is subject to all of the provisions of chapter 536 and, if applicable, section 536.028. This section and chapter 536 are nonseverable and if any of the powers vested with the general assembly pursuant to chapter 536 to review, to delay the effective date, or to disapprove and annul a rule are subsequently held unconstitutional, then the grant of rulemaking authority and any rule proposed or adopted after November 5, 2024, shall be invalid and void.

290.621. 1. The Department may investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to $500 per day of each day of a continuing violation. A final decision of the department is subject to review in accordance with the provisions of chapter 536.

2. The Department may develop and implement an outreach program to inform employees, parents, and persons who are under the care of a health care provider about the availability of earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642. This program may include the distribution of notices and other written materials to child care and elder care providers, domestic violence shelters, schools, hospitals, community health centers and other health care providers in Missouri.

3. A municipality, county, city, town, or village may adopt ordinances, rules, and regulations to investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, with respect to employers within, or employees performing work while physically present in, the geographic boundaries of the municipality, county, city, town, or village. Any such ordinance, rule, or regulation shall be consistent with this law and any Department rules or regulations and system for compliance and enforcement. The municipality, county, city, town, or village may exercise such powers as allowed by any applicable charter or ordinance, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to the maximum allowed for an ordinance violation. Before investigating or seeking to resolve any complaint between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall give notice to the Department with a copy of the complaint and, within 14 days of such notice, the Department may intervene as of right and participate in the matter to ensure that the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642 or, alternatively, the Department may institute its own proceedings in which case the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall refrain from acting on the matter so long as the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642. If the Department does not, within 14 days, intervene or instigate its own proceedings, the municipality, county, city, town, or village may, without the Department, investigate and attempt to resolve the complaint and take other additional means within its power to enforce sections 290.600 through 290.642 against the subject of the complaint. In no event shall an employer be subject to compliance proceedings arising out of a single set of facts after having already been subjected to a final compliance order by another governmental entity.

4. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department, a municipality, county, city, town, or village to conduct investigations and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, to establish and implement a system to receive or resolve complaints, to establish additional means of enforcement, or to conduct outreach and education, including the creation of notices and other written materials, concerning sections 290.600 through 290.642, if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.624. 1. Any employer who willfully violates or fails to comply with any of the provisions and requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be guilty of a class C misdemeanor; provided, however, that an employer who willfully violates the notice and posting requirements of section 290.612 shall be guilty of an infraction.

2. For purposes of this section, each day of violation or failure to comply and each employee affected shall constitute a separate offense.

290.627. 1. Any individual who claims to have been aggrieved by a failure of an employer to comply with any portion of sections 290.600 through 290.642, including but not limited to the failure to provide earned paid sick time or to allow employees to use such time consistent with sections 290.600 through 290.642, or who claims to have suffered a retaliatory personnel action, shall have a right of action and may commence a civil action in the appropriate court of jurisdiction within three years of the accrual of the cause of action, to obtain appropriate relief with respect to such unlawful violation. Such action may be brought without first filing an administrative complaint.

2. In a civil action under this section, if the court finds a violation has occurred, the court may grant as relief, as it deems appropriate and to the extent permitted by law, any permanent or temporary injunction, the full amount of any unpaid earned sick time plus any actual damages suffered as the result of the employer's violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642, an additional amount equal to twice any unpaid earned sick time as liquidated damages, costs, and reasonable attorney's fees as may be allowed by the court, and other legal or equitable relief as may be appropriate to remedy the violation, including, without limitation, reinstatement to employment and back pay.

290.630. 1. Except as otherwise required by law, an employer may not require disclosure of details relating to an employee's or an employee's family member's health information, domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking as a condition of providing earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. Unless as otherwise required by law, any health or safety information possessed by an employer regarding an employee or employee's family member must:

(A) be maintained on a separate form and in a separate file from other personnel information;

(B) be treated as confidential medical records; and

(C) not be disclosed except to the affected employee or with the express written permission of the affected employee.

290.633. 1. With respect to employees covered by a valid collective bargaining agreement in effect on November 5, 2024, no provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply until the stated expiration date in the collective bargaining agreement; however, further the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply upon any such agreement's renewal, extension, amendment, or modification in any respect after November 5, 2024.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed to interfere, impede, or otherwise diminish the right of employees to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing in order to establish earned paid sick time or other conditions of work in excess of the applicable minimum standards under the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. Any waiver by an employee of rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed contrary to public policy and shall be void.

290.636. 1. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed to discourage or prohibit an employer from the adoption or retention of an earned paid sick time policy more generous than the one required herein.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed as diminishing the obligation of an employer to comply with any contract, collective bargaining agreement, employment benefit plan, or other agreement providing more generous paid sick time to an employee than required herein. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed as diminishing the rights of public employees regarding paid sick time or use of paid sick time as provided in the laws of Missouri and ordinances of political subdivisions pertaining to public employees.

290.639. 1. Sections 290.600 through 290.642 provide minimum requirements pertaining to earned paid sick time and shall not be construed to preempt, limit, or otherwise affect the applicability of any other law, regulation, requirement, policy, or standard that provides for greater accrual or use by employees of earned paid sick time or that extends other protections to employees.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be interpreted or applied to create a power or obligation contrary to any federal law, rule, or regulation.

290.642. Except as detailed in section 290.618, all of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are severable, and if any provision, including any section, subsection, subdivision, paragraph, sentence, or clause, or the application thereof to any person or circumstance, is found by a court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted, such decision shall not affect other provisions or applications of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that can be given effect without the invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted provision or application, and to this end the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are declared severable.

Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, their office could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. However, if the enactment of this proposal were to result in substantial additional litigation, their office may be required to request additional appropriations.

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated their department has no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated no fiscal impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated this initiative petition has no impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated this petition, if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated they assume no direct fiscal impact from the proposed statutory amendment to Chapter 290 as government employees are exempt from its provisions. However, employees of providers that receive DMH funding would be impacted, which would include all contracted DMH providers.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated this proposal might impact their department however, they defer to the Office of Administration to respond.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated:

This petition would amend provisions relating to the accumulation of sick time required for employees depending on how many employees are employed by the employer. It also has various requirements regarding how sick time can be used and procedures employers must use. Violations are deemed misdemeanors, and damages are allowed to be awarded in civil suits. It states that the DOLIR "may" create new notices, promulgate rules, and initiate outreach programs but that the DOLIR is not required to create notices if it requires the appropriation of funds. It also states that the DOLIR may inspect employment records and investigate complaints of noncompliance. Still, such inspection is not required if it requires the appropriation of funds, and the cost estimate would be zero.

The funding source will be from General Revenue if the DOLIR receives complaints to enforce it. Therefore the DOLIR estimates it would need two Regulatory Auditors and one Administrative Support Assistant person at an annual ongoing cost of $255,975 by 2027, plus an initial information technology (IT) component of $28,318 and office equipment of $25,011.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety indicated no impact for their department, Director's office.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated no impact anticipated by their department.

Officials from the Governor's Office indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage law does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact. The state seems excluded from section 3 and we are not included in the definition of an employer in the new sections.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their agency because it specifically exempts the state from the definition of employer.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated this initiative petition excludes the state from the requirements of the proposed new law. Therefore there is no anticipated fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage law does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated beginning January 1, 2025, the minimum wage rate would be not less than $13.50 per hour. This rate would increase by $0.75 per hour each year of the next two years until reaching $15.00 per hour by January 1, 2027.

The increase to wages would approximately have the fiscal impact below for each year:

Calendar Year	Annual Increase from the Current Wage
2025	$ 2,351.00
2026	$ 5,783.00
2027	$ 9,215.00

This is an estimated impact if not exempt.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In fiscal year (FY) 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. Their office estimates $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no fiscal impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated this petition does not apply to county governments under 290.502.4 for minimum wage and the contemplated new Section 8 for sick leave regarding the definition of an employer. Clay County provides more generous sick leave than this measure as well.

They do estimate additional costs from this petition of $2,000 a year between the Circuit Court and Prosecutor to enforce the misdemeanor and civil action provisions.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county for this initiative petition proposing to amend Chapter 290, RSMo.

Officials from St. Louis County indicated this initiative petition has no apparent fiscal impact on their county.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this amendment would have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact to their college.

Officials from St. Louis Community College indicated the petition request is generally lower than their current compensation structure and therefore its passage appears to have minimal effect on their college. That being said, increases calculated by Consumer Price Index or other indexed methods may affect them in the future and that cannot be determined at this time.

Officials from the Missouri Lottery indicated no fiscal impact to their agency. Current hourly wages are $15 or higher.

Officials from the State Tax Commission indicated this initiative petition will not have a fiscal impact on their agency.

Officials from the Missouri Veterans Commission indicated this initiative petition creates no fiscal impact to the Missouri Veterans Commission. However, given the proposed changes to section 290.502 RSMo, they would note that those changes would make it more difficult for state agencies to recruit new employees. As to the remainder of the petition, the definition for the term "employer" found in the proposed section 290.600(8) specifically excludes the state and its agencies, so the requirements of the petition would not apply to the Commission.

Officials from the Missouri Ethics Commission indicated this initiative petition does not have fiscal impact on their Commission.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Police Commissioners indicated per Section 290.600, the Kansas City, Missouri Police Department is exempt as a political subdivision of the state.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated they predict no fiscal impact from this petition.

Officials from the Board of Election Commissioners City of St. Louis indicated no fiscal impact; the lowest paid election board employee makes $15/hour.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners indicated this petition has no material fiscal impact on their operations.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated this petition has no fiscal impact to their Board.

Officials from the Children's Trust Fund indicated no impact.

Officials from the State Auditor's office indicated since this proposed initiative petition does not apply to government entities, this would have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the Missouri Gaming Commission indicated this initiative petition will not have any fiscal impact on their agency.

Lindsey Baker, Research Director, Missouri Budget Project indicated in summary, they estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state and local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue and decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy. She also provided the following information:

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Earned Sick Leave Petitions 24-025-042

We estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state & local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy.

In addition to helping employees by allowing them to address their health needs without losing their jobs or ability to pay their bills, paid sick leave has many benefits for employers, including a healthier workforce, reduced turnover, and increased productivity. The benefits of paid sick leave have been highlighted by the COVID-19 pandemic, illustrating the importance of workers being able to recover at home without lost wages and without risking spread of contagious disease in the workplace.

Several ballot measures have been filed (24-025-042) that would require employers to provide earned sick leave in Missouri. Though the measures vary slightly, each would require employers to provide a minimum of 3-7 days of paid leave to employees, depending on hours worked and size of business. If implemented, Missouri would join the seventeen states, plus the District of Columbia, who ensure employees can earn paid sick leave to care for themselves or family members.ⁱ

An estimated 211,000 Missourians and their families would benefit from the earned sick time provided through these initiatives, with low-wage workers disproportionately likely to benefit from this policy.ⁱⁱ Expanding earned sick leave in Missouri is estimated to provide a net savings to society of between $612.4-$774.1 million annually depending on the number of days provided.ⁱⁱⁱ

	3-5 Scenario*	5-7 Scenario*
Estimated Cost Savings	$1.26B	$1.29B
- Employment Related Savings	$436.73M	$466.6M
- Health Related Savings	$825.61M	$825.61M
Estimated Costs (Employer & State Admin)	$488.22M	$679.77M
Estimated Net Societal Benefit*	$774.11M	$612.44M

In the 3/5 scenario, small employers are required to offer at least three days of leave and large employers at least five days. The 5/7 scenario requires small employers to offer at least five days of paid sick leave and large employers to offer at least seven days of paid leave. A small employer defined as less than 15 employees.*

Societal Cost Savings from Earned Sick Leave in Missouri

Employment Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri's workforce would become stronger, more stable, and more productive leading to economic growth.

- Reduced Absenteeism. Access to earned sick leave allows workers to stay home, reducing the overall spread of illness in the workplace; this leads to fewer illnesses among workers and fewer overall days off work.^{iv}
- Reduced Turnover. Access to earned sick leave gives workers the ability to address their health needs and those of their families, without having to quit a job or risk being fired. Access to paid sick leave is associated with reduced job turnover, which in turn creates significant savings for businesses.^v
- Reduced Presenteeism. Employers who do not offer paid sick leave have higher rates of "presenteeism" or lost productivity due to employees working while injured or sick.^{vi} Offering paid sick leave reduces the likelihood of working at reduced capacity and allows workers to recover from illness or injury more quickly.

Health Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri would become a healthier state as workers would have the ability to care for themselves and their families, while simultaneously benefiting their communities.

- Reduced Flu Contagion in Society. Workers without paid sick leave are more likely to come to work sick, increasing the likelihood of spreading the illness.^{vii} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to stay home when ill, thus reducing the overall spread of influenza throughout the community.
- Reduced Workers Compensation Costs. Workers with access to paid leave are less likely to be injured on the job,^{viii} reducing overall workers comp claims and cost to employers.
- Reduced ER Visits. Paid sick leave is associated with fewer trips to the emergency room.^{ix} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to properly care for themselves and family members during an illness, preventing an escalation of the illness.
- Improved Nursing Home Care. Unpaid sick leave is especially problematic in nursing homes as the residents are especially vulnerable to the consequences of high turnover, absenteeism and presenteeism.^x Access to paid sick leave allows nursing home workers to take care of themselves so that they can better care for residents.

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Petitions 24-025-042

While previous estimates show a cost associated with state level administration and enforcement for earned sick leave of approximately $1 million, we also expect that earned sick leave will be associated with a significant potential for increased revenue collections & decreased spending on services associated with the cost savings outlined above.

- Increased revenue collections. A stronger and more productive workforce is associated with economic growth. Economic growth is in turn associated with growth in both state and local revenue as both sales & income tax collections rise due to increased spending and wages.
- Reductions in spending on services. When workers are able to care for themselves and their families (and others in their community) they are less likely to have minor illnesses escalate into costly health problems. This reduces the overall cost of health care, particularly among low-wage workers who are disproportionately likely to lack access to paid leave. This in turn reduces state and local spending on health other related public services.

As a result, we estimate the fiscal impact on state & local revenue of earned sick leave will be minimal as the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will offset the modest expenses associated with state level administration. While we are confident that a net savings will be realized, the size of the savings is too speculative to estimate exact fiscal impact.

Re: Proposal Related to Chapter 290, RSMo, Petition 2024-025-042

Dear Auditor Fitzpatrick:

A Better Balance is writing to submit our fact sheet titled "Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business" to accompany petition 24-025-042 and to inform the fiscal note process. We thank you for considering our submission.

A Better Balance, a national nonprofit advocacy organization with four regional offices, uses the power of the law to ensure that working individuals can care for themselves and their loved ones without jeopardizing their economic security. Through legislative advocacy, policy, direct legal services, strategic litigation, and public education, our organization works around the country to advance policies like paid sick leave, paid family and medical leave, quality childcare and eldercare, and anti-discrimination protections for pregnant workers and caregivers. From Arizona and Colorado to Duluth (MN) and beyond, our organization has worked on the growing number of paid sick leave laws now in effect.

The enclosed fact sheet summarizes research and data on the resoundingly positive effect that paid sick leave has on business. When paid sick leave policies are in place, businesses financially benefit from increased worker productivity, reduced spread of contagious illness in the workplace, and lower employee turnover. Research has also underscored that workers and the larger community also have better health outcomes overall when there is access to paid sick leave. As documented in the attached fact sheet, paid sick leave has been shown to work well for businesses and workers throughout the country.

Thank you for giving us the opportunity to submit this information. Please do not hesitate to contact A Better Balance at cgomez@abetterbalance.org if we can provide any additional assistance.

Sincerely,
A Better Balance

Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business

The research is clear: paid sick leave isn't just good for workers, it's good for business as well. Healthy workers are essential to a successful business and a strong economy. When workers have access to paid sick leave, they demonstrate increased job satisfaction, commitment, and morale, while employers—and their bottom lines—reap the benefits of increased worker performance and productivity and reduced worker turnover. And access to guaranteed paid sick leave is a vital component to keeping businesses open and safe through the COVID-19 pandemic and beyond.

Access to paid sick leave increases worker productivity and reduces the spread of contagious illness in the workplace, leading to direct savings for businesses.

- Workers with minor illnesses are less productive than their healthy co-workers.¹ Paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (when employees show up to work while sick), which costs businesses approximately $207.6 billion annually in reduced productivity.² After Washington State implemented its paid sick leave law, for example, the percentage of workers that went to work while sick decreased significantly.³
- Paid sick leave also reduces the spread of contagion between co-workers—further increasing productivity and labor in the workplace.⁴ Absenteeism caused by the introduction of flu-like illness in the workplace is estimated to cost employers up to 111 million workdays per year.⁵ Even before the pandemic, states with paid sick leave requirements saw a 40% decrease in influenza rates.⁶

Paid sick leave has proven to be particularly crucial to keeping businesses open during the COVID-19 pandemic.

- As the country with the highest cumulative number of COVID-19 cases,⁷ and the only one of the thirteen G12 countries with no paid sick leave,⁸ it is undeniable that the U.S. will need paid sick leave to end this crisis, to save lives, and to minimize disruption to businesses struggling to avoid the spread of COVID-19 in the workplace.
- Paid sick leave has been critical to keeping businesses open throughout the pandemic. One study found that states in which workers gained temporary access to paid sick leave through the federal Families First Coronavirus Response Act⁹ had around 400 fewer confirmed COVID-19 cases per day as a result.¹⁰

Employers with paid sick leave benefit from reduced worker turnover and better relationships with their employees, saving employers the cost of recruiting, interviewing, and training new hires.

- In general, worker turnover is estimated to cost employers the equivalent of 21% of a worker's annual compensation.¹¹ However, providing paid sick leave only increases labor costs by an average of 2.7 cents per hour worked¹² and workers with paid sick leave are less likely to leave their jobs,¹³ saving businesses money on turnover costs such as interviewing and training.¹⁴

- Paid sick leave also increases worker loyalty and job satisfaction—factors known to increase productivity and job retention.¹⁵ After Connecticut’s paid sick law went into effect, nearly 30% of surveyed employers reported improved employee morale, and over 20% reported increased employee motivation or loyalty.¹⁶
- Two years after paid sick leave went into effect in New York City, one employer reported that “the impact that I saw in my business was a much stronger bond between ourselves and our employees, higher productivity, and a more successful business, not a less successful business.”¹⁷

Paid sick leave also saves employers money by reducing the likelihood of workplace accidents.

- Throughout the country, direct and indirect costs associated with on-the-job injuries cost employers billions of dollars.¹⁸ Workers with paid sick leave are 28% less likely than workers without access to paid sick leave to be injured on the job.¹⁹

Lack of paid sick leave makes workers more likely to go to work while sick and puts co-workers and our communities at risk. With paid sick leave, our workplaces and communities are healthier, which improves the bottom line for employers.

- Access to sick leave will be essential to overcoming the COVID-19 pandemic, as evidenced by previous pandemics. For example, it is estimated that the lack of paid sick leave was responsible for 5 million incidents of flu-like illness during the H1N1 pandemic.²⁰
- In a simulated influenza epidemic, 72% of employees who caught the flu at work did so because of exposure to other employees attending work while sick; paid sick days would reduce flu incidences among workers by approximately 6% across all workplaces, and by over 7% in workplaces with 49 or fewer employees.²¹
- As explained above, access to paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (employees showing up to work while sick) and reduces overall contagion.²² Presenteeism is linked to the spread of harmful contagions to co-workers and customers.²³
- A study of data from the 2009 flu outbreak found that workers with paid sick leave were 30 percent more likely to be vaccinated and were more likely to seek treatment when they were sick with flu-like symptoms compared to those without paid sick leave.²⁴ This has proven true for COVID-19 as well—in June 2021, workers whose employers provided paid time off to get the vaccine or recover from any side effects were 24% more likely to have received at least one dose of the vaccine than workers whose employers provided no paid vaccine leave.²⁵
- A lack of access to paid sick days is particularly harmful for service industry workers. Nearly two-thirds of restaurant workers have cooked or served food while sick,²⁶ and in 2011, nearly one in five food service workers went to work vomiting or with diarrhea, creating dangerous health conditions.²⁷

- People without access to paid sick leave are 1.5x more likely to go to work while they have a contagious illness and are nearly twice as likely to send a sick child to school or daycare than those with access to it.²⁸
- States that have implemented paid sick leave laws had an 11% decrease of cases of flu-like illnesses in their first year after enactment.²⁹

Workers with paid sick leave are more likely to seek preventative care than workers without paid sick leave, leading to better health outcomes and less time away from work.

- People without paid sick days tend to be unable to make time for preventative health care, such as cancer screenings and flu shots, which makes it more likely that such workers will have more significant healthcare needs at later stages of an illness.³⁰
- Workers with access to paid sick days report better general health than workers without paid sick days and are less likely to delay preventive medical care for themselves or for their family.³¹

Paid sick leave has proven to work well for businesses all over the U.S., and experience shows that workers don't abuse paid sick leave.

- Business practices don't have to change to keep up with paid sick leave laws. In a survey of New York City employers after the city's paid sick law was implemented, 91% of employers reported no reduction in hiring, 97% indicated they did not reduce hours, about 94% did not raise prices, and nearly 85% of employers reported no change in their overall business costs.³²
 - In a similar survey of employers in Connecticut a year and a half after the state's paid sick law went into effect, nearly 90% of employers reported no reduction in hours, and about 85% did not raise prices.³³
- Paid sick leave laws stimulate economic growth. When San Francisco's paid sick law went into effect in 2007, the city's job growth actually exceeded that of nearby counties, despite unfounded fears that the law would cause an economic slowdown.³⁴
 - In comparison to other surrounding cities, Seattle saw greater increases in the number of employers in the city when its paid sick leave law was implemented,³⁵ and in general, job growth continued on an upward trend.³⁶
 - After New York City's paid sick days were implemented, the average wage for hourly workers increased and the average number of weekly absences declined.³⁷ On the law's first anniversary, the New York City government released a report touting its successful implementation and noting that since the law went into effect, "the city has had steady job growth and the lowest unemployment in six years."³⁸
- Workers don't abuse paid sick leave. After New York implemented its paid sick leave law, 98% of employers reported no cases of employee abuse of sick days.³⁹

- Employers know that paid sick leave laws work. Two years after New York City’s paid sick law was implemented, a staggering 86% of New York City employers polled supported the law.⁴⁰
- Studies in Washington, D.C. and Seattle also saw no negative economic effects following implementation of their paid sick leave laws in either job loss or movement of businesses out of the city. A report from the Washington D.C. Auditor, issued five years after passage of the District’s sick leave law, found that the law “did not have the economic impact of encouraging business owners to move a business from the District nor did the [law] have the economic impact of discouraging business owners to locate a business in the District of Columbia.”⁴¹ Likewise, a study of the economic impact of Seattle’s sick leave law found that a “preliminary look at available data shows no widespread negative economic impact as some opponents of the ordinance feared.”⁴²
- Recognizing the benefits of paid sick leave, San Francisco, Washington, D.C., and New York City—all among the earliest adopters of paid sick leave laws—later expanded their paid sick leave laws, underscoring how well these laws are working for workers, employers, and communities.

Richard von Glahn, Policy Director, Missouri Jobs with Justice indicated he was resubmitting the information previously submitted for initiative petitions 24-016 through 24-023 for initiative petitions 24-031 through 24-042. Petitions 24-031 through petition 24-042 all contain the language from petitions 24-016 through 24-019 in regards to the minimum wage. They do not believe the fiscal impact of petitions 24-031 through 24-042 will be different from 24-016 through 24-019, so their submission is the same. They also provided the following information:

Our analysis estimates the impact of the proposed petitions on state sales and personal income tax revenue in Missouri. Our analysis follows a process that has been used in the past to estimate the impact of minimum wage increases, with some updates. We are unable to provide calculations on local sales and income tax revenue, although it should be noted that impacted workers in Kansas City and St. Louis City are subject to a 1% earnings tax on income, so those municipalities will experience revenue gains from their constituents seeing wage increases. Local sales tax revenue will also increase, although the different taxing rates per jurisdiction made estimates overly cumbersome to predict. We also reference some economic literature on the impact of minimum wage laws on employment , social benefit spending and downstream impacts of wage increase in order to address some common claims made by opponents of similar initiatives in the past as well as provide a broader context of impact of wage increases.

As each of these petitions explicitly exclude public employers¹ from proposed increases, we do not include an analysis of payroll expenses to these employers.

I. Economic literature on the employment impact of increases in the minimum wage

With 30 states and numerous other municipalities having increased the minimum wage above the federal minimum, there is ample evidence of the impact of these increases. While opponents will undoubtedly cite individual studies that predict catastrophic job loss and resulting decline in state revenue, the most credible comprehensive review of empirical evidence comes from Hristos Doucouliagos and T.D. Stanley and shows no discernible impact on employment. Their study, “Publication Selection Bias in Minimum- Wage Research? A Meta-Regression Analysis²” combines over 1,500 estimates from 64 different studies. This peer reviewed article has the advantage of any single study in that it used a set of predetermined, objective criteria for weighing the validity of statistical findings across different studies that produced different results.

In addition to this comprehensive review, a recent publication “Are $15 Minimum Wages too High” provides an analysis of California which has gradually increased the minimum wage from $8 in 2014 to $15 in 2022. Their analysis focuses on impacts of two groups of workers most exposed to minimum wage increases- teenagers and restaurant workers and finds that “substantial and ongoing pay increases throughout the treatment period and find no significant disemployment effects, even in relatively low-wage counties.³” This is the most recent study and is analyzing a similar level of increases and time period as the proposed initiatives.

There is ample empirical and theoretical evidence that corroborates these studies. First, relative to total wage and labor costs, minimum-wage increases are small. Second, employers and workers respond to minimum wage increases in many ways that reduce the actual costs to employers.

Probably the most important economic response to a higher minimum wage is a reduction in turnover. At higher wages, employers fill vacancies faster and retain employees longer, boosting total employment and average productivity per worker while reducing direct and indirect training costs. A 2017 study by employee benefits news found that turnover costs as high as 33% of a workers annual salary⁴. Avoiding these costs provides an obvious benefit to employers and research from Dube, Lester and Reich in 2012⁵ finds “striking evidence that separations, new hires, and turnover rates for teens and restaurant workers fall substantially following a minimum wage increase.”

Based on these empirical studies we feel confident in concluding that there is no evidence that increasing the minimum wage will reduce employment. Accordingly, we do not include any projections for impact on employment and the resulting effects on revenue in our analysis.

II. Impact on state and federal spending on social safety net programs

One area where the state is likely to experience significant direct savings from an increase in the minimum wage is on state spending on social safety net programs. Research suggests that at least 44% of Missouri recipients of Medicaid, SNAP or the Federal EITC are members of working families who would be directly impacted by the proposed initiatives⁶. State and Federal spending for this share of the workers on these programs totals $2,400,000.00 dollars. While programs such as SNAP are paid entirely by the federal government, medicaid has a percentage paid by state revenue and the state EITC going into effect this year will cost the state revenue. While individual circumstances often dictate the cost of these or similar programs to the state, it holds that as workers earn higher wages at work access to these benefits will decrease, saving the state potentially tens of millions of dollars.

III. Estimate of number of workers impacted statewide and impact on wages

Number of impacted workers				Total Wage Growth
	Direct impact	Indirectly impacted	Total
Proposal 1	293,000	198,000	491,000	$576,819,000
Proposal 2	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,076,047,000
Proposal 3	331,000	194,000	525,000	$733,133,000
Proposal 4	394,000	241,000	635,000	$1,222,991,000
Proposal 5	293,000	198,000	491,000	$688,721,000
Proposal 6	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,213,236,000
Proposal 7	331,000	194,000	525,000	$852,823,000
Proposal 8	394,000	241,000	635,000	$1,346,386,000

Across all eight version of the petitions estimates show a low of $576 million and a high of over $1.3 billion in wage growth for Missouri workers. These estimates include direct impacts to workers making under the minimum wage as well as secondary impacts to workers whose wages are predicted to rise as a result of the minimum wage increases.

IV. Estimate of state income and sales tax revenue

⁶ <https://laborcenter.berkeley.edu/the-public-cost-of-a-low-federal-minimum-wage/>

Based on the wage increase numbers above and the conclusion that minimum wage increases have no discernible impact on employment, we next calculate the impact of projected increases on state sales tax revenue and individual state income tax revenue for Missouri. As previously mentioned, we do not include estimates for local impacts, although we do project increased revenue there as local jurisdictions do capture sales tax revenue and in the case of the Kansas City and the City of St. Louis, increases in income are subject to the individual 1% earnings tax. We do not include any speculation of increased prices as a way to offset higher wages, although any such increase would result in higher sales tax revenue.

	Estimated sales tax revenue*	Estimated individual income tax revenue	Total revenue
Proposal 1	$8,738,808	$24,367,615	$33,106,423
Proposal 2	$16,302,112	$45,457,412	$61,759,524
Proposal 3	$11,712,965	$32,660,864	$44,373,829
Proposal 4	$18,528,314	$51,665,035	$70,193,348
Proposal 5	$10,434,123	$29,094,895	$39,529,018
Proposal 6	$18,380,525	$51,252,936	$69,633,462
Proposal 7	$12,920,268	$36,027,354	$48,947,623
Proposal 8	$20,397,748	$56,877,834	$77,275,582

State sales tax revenue is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average annual Missouri General Revenue sales tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 1.515%)*

Income tax is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average Missouri net individual income tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 4.523%) less an expected 6.6% reduction in collections due to the recent reduction of Missouri's top income tax bracket to 4.95%.*

V. Other downstream impacts of higher wages

Countless studies have also demonstrated the negative health impacts on adults and children of low wages as well as the negative impacts on child development, including academic achievement, of low wages. These situations often contain confounding variables that can make ascertaining cause and effect difficult, recent research using natural experiments to measure the direction of causation of the impact of public policies offers guidance for consideration. The research makes clear that “increases in parental income are found to lead to higher test scores and better educational outcomes for children, greater likelihood of employment in young

adulthood, and improved earnings⁷.” While the exact impact on state or local revenue is difficult to predict, research shows that the impact of higher wages on student academic achievement were four times higher per dollar increase as the effects found in a study of class size reductions that cost around $12,000 per student⁸.” Direct impacts on state and local revenue, especially in the short term, are difficult to predict, but the growing body of research shows definite positive long term impacts on human development resulting from wage increases.

VI. Conclusion

Overall we conclude that these petitions would generate a minimum net benefit to state general revenue of between thirty three and seventy seven million dollars with an undetermined net benefit for local revenue based on local considerations. This benefit is the direct result of the wage increases. Other savings are likely to accrue from a decrease in spending on safety net programs and a downstream benefit to the families of recipients of the wage increases. We submit this information in hopes that it can be useful in your determination of the fiscal impact of the proposed initiatives. Should you need any other information please do not hesitate to contact our office.

Chapter 290, RSMo, is amended by amending section 290.502 and enacting fifteen new sections to be known as sections 290.600, 290.603, 290.606, 290.609, 290.612, 290.615, 290.618, 290.621, 290.624, 290.627, 290.630, 290.633, 290.636, 290.639, and 290.642, to read as follows:

3. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, and notwithstanding subsection 1 of this section, effective January 1, [2019] 2025, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of not less than [$8.60] $13.50 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased each year by [$.85] $.75 per hour, effective January 1 of each of the next [four] two years, until it reaches [$12.00] $15.00 per hour, effective January 1, [2023] 2027. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased or decreased on January 1, [2024] 2028, and on January 1 of successive years, per the method set forth in subsection 2 of this section. If at any time the federal minimum wage rate is above or is thereafter increased above the minimum wage then in effect under this subsection, the minimum wage required by this subsection shall continue to be increased pursuant to this subsection 3, but the higher federal rate shall immediately become the minimum wage required by this subsection and shall be increased or decreased per the method set forth in subsection 2 for so long as it remains higher than the state minimum wage required and increased pursuant to this subsection.

(D) A grandparent, grandchild, or sibling (whether of a biological, foster, adoptive or step relationship) of the employee or the employee's spouse or domestic partner; or

(E) A person for whom the employee is responsible for providing or arranging health or safety-related care, including but not limited to helping that individual obtain diagnostic, preventative, routine, or therapeutic health treatment or ensuring the person is safe following domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking.

(8) "Health care professional," any individual licensed under federal or any state law to provide medical or emergency services, including but not limited to doctors, nurses, certified nurse midwives, mental health professionals, and emergency room personnel.

(9) "Person", any individual, partnership, association, corporation, business, business trust, legal representative, or any organized group of persons.

(10) "Retaliatory personnel action", denial of any right guaranteed under sections 290.600 through 290.642, or any threat, discharge, suspension, demotion, reduction of hours, or any other adverse action against an employee for the exercise of any right guaranteed herein. "Retaliatory personnel action" shall also include interference with or punishment for in any manner participating in or assisting an investigation, proceeding, or hearing under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

(11) "Same hourly rate", means the following:

(A) For employees paid on the basis of a single hourly rate, the same hourly rate shall be the employee's regular hourly rate.

(B) For employees who are paid multiple hourly rates of pay from the same employer, the same hourly rate shall be either:

(i) the wages the employee would have been paid for the hours absent during use of earned paid sick time if the employee had worked; or,

(ii) the weighted average of all hourly rates of pay during the previous pay period.

Whatever method the employer uses, the employer must use a consistent method for each employee throughout a year.

(C) For employees who are paid a salary, the same hourly rate shall be determined by dividing the wages the employee earns in the previous pay period by the total number of hours worked during the previous pay period. For determining total number of hours worked during the previous pay period, employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1), the Fair Labor Standards Act, shall be assumed to work 40 hours in each work week unless their normal work week is less than 40 hours, in which case earned paid sick time shall accrue and the same hourly rate shall be calculated based on the employee's normal work week. Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(D) For employees paid on a piece rate or a fee-for-service basis, the same hourly rate shall be a reasonable calculation of the wages or fees the employee would have received for the piece work, service, or part thereof, if the employee had worked. Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(E) For employees who are paid on a commission basis (whether base wage plus commission or commission only), the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the base wage or the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(F) For employees who receive and retain compensation in the form of gratuities in addition to wages, the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the employee's regular hourly rate or 100% of the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502 without deduction of any tips as a credit.

(12) "Sexual assault", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(13) "Stalking", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(14) "Year", a regular and consecutive twelve-month period as determined by the employer; except that for the purposes of section 290.615 and section 290.627, "year" shall mean a calendar year.

290.603. 1. Employees of an employer with fifteen or more employees shall accrue a minimum of one hour of earned paid sick time for every thirty hours worked, but such employees shall not be entitled to use more than fifty-six hours of earned paid sick time per year, unless the employer selects a higher limit.

2. Employees of an employer with fewer than fifteen employees shall accrue a minimum of one hour of earned paid sick time for every thirty hours worked, but such employees shall not be entitled to use more than forty hours of earned paid sick time per year, unless the employer selects a higher limit.

3. In determining the number of employees of an employer, all employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation on a full-time, part-time, or temporary basis shall be counted. In situations in which the number of employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation per week fluctuates above and below 15 employees per week over the course of a year, an employer is required to provide earned paid sick time pursuant to subsection (1) of this section if it maintained fifteen or more employees in the state on the payroll for some portion of a working day in each of twenty or more different calendar weeks, including any periods of leave, and whether or not the weeks were consecutive, in either the current or the preceding year (irrespective of whether the same individuals were in employment in each working day).

4. All employees shall accrue earned paid sick time as follows:

(A) Earned paid sick time as provided in this section shall begin to accrue at the commencement of employment or May 1, 2025, whichever is later. An employee shall be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued. An employer may provide all earned paid sick time that an employee is expected to accrue in a year at the beginning of the year.

(B) Employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1) of the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act will be assumed to work forty hours in each work week for purposes of earned paid sick time accrual unless their normal work week is less than forty hours, in which case earned paid sick time accrues based upon that normal work week.

(C) Up to 80 hours of earned paid sick time shall be carried over to the following year if the employee has any unused accrued earned paid sick time at the end of the year, but this law does not require an employer to permit an employee to use more than the applicable number of hours of earned paid sick time per year as set forth in subsection (1) and (2) of this section. Alternatively, in lieu of carryover of unused earned paid sick time from one year to the next, an employer may pay an employee for unused earned paid sick time at the end of a year which could be carried over and provide the employee with an amount of paid sick time that meets or exceeds the requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that is available for the employee's immediate use at the beginning of the subsequent year.

(D) If an employee is transferred to a separate division, entity, or location, but remains employed by the same employer, the employee is entitled to all earned paid sick time accrued at the prior division, entity, or location and is entitled to use all earned paid sick time as provided in this section. When there is a separation from employment and the employee is rehired within nine months of separation by the same employer, previously accrued earned paid sick time that had not been used shall be reinstated. Further, the employee shall be entitled to use accrued earned paid sick time and accrue additional earned paid sick time at the re-commencement of employment.

(E) When a different employer succeeds or takes the place of an existing employer, all employees of the original employer who remain employed by the successor employer are entitled to all earned paid sick time they accrued when employed by the original employer, and are entitled to use earned paid sick time previously accrued.

(F) At its discretion, an employer may loan earned paid sick time to an employee in advance of accrual by such employee.

5. Any employer with a paid leave policy, such as a paid time off policy, who makes available an amount of paid leave sufficient to meet the accrual requirements of this section that may be used for the same purposes and under the same conditions as earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642 is not required to provide additional paid sick time under this section.

6. Except as specifically provided in this section, nothing in this section shall be construed as requiring financial or other reimbursement to an employee from an employer upon the employee's termination, resignation, retirement, or other separation from employment for accrued earned paid sick time that has not been used.

7. Employees shall not accrue earned paid sick time before May 1, 2025. Employees who are employed or who commence employment on or after May 1, 2025 shall accrue earned paid sick time and be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued in accordance with sections 290.600 through 290.642. The Department may develop model posters and notices, engage in rule-making, initiate outreach programs, and engage in other activities for implementation of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 as authorized by those sections before May 1, 2025.

290.606. 1. Earned paid sick time shall be provided to an employee by an employer for:

(A) An employee's mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for preventative medical care;

(B) Care of a family member with a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs preventative medical care;

(C) Closure of the employee's place of business by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or an employee's need to care for a child whose school or place of care has been closed by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or care for oneself or a family member when it has been determined by the health authorities having jurisdiction or by a health care provider that the employee's or family member's presence in the community may jeopardize the health of others because of his or her exposure to a communicable disease, whether or not the employee or family member has actually contracted the communicable disease; or

(D) Absence necessary due to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, provided the leave is to allow the employee to obtain for the employee or the employee's family member:

(i) Medical attention needed to recover from physical or psychological injury or disability caused by domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking;

(ii) Services from a victim services organization;

(iii) Psychological or other counseling;

(iv) Relocation or taking steps to secure an existing home due to the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or

(v) Legal services, including preparing for or participating in any civil or criminal legal proceeding related to or resulting from the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking.

2. Earned paid sick time shall be provided upon the request of an employee. Such request may be made orally, in writing, by electronic means, or by any other means acceptable to the employer. When possible, the request shall include the expected duration of the absence.

3. When the use of earned paid sick time is foreseeable, the employee shall make a good faith effort to provide notice of the need for such time to the employer in advance of the use of the earned paid sick time and shall make a reasonable effort to schedule the use of earned paid sick time in a manner that does not unduly disrupt the operations of the employer. Where such need is not foreseeable, an employer may require an employee to provide notice of the need for the use of earned paid sick time as soon as practicable.

4. An employer that requires notice of the need to use earned paid sick time where the need is not foreseeable shall provide a written policy that contains procedures for the employee to provide notice. An employer that has not provided to the employee a copy of its written policy for providing such notice shall not deny earned paid sick time to the employee based on non-compliance with such a policy.

5. An employer may not require, as a condition of an employee's taking earned paid sick time, that the employee search for or find a replacement worker to cover the hours during which the employee is using earned paid sick time.

6. Earned paid sick time may be used in the smaller of hourly increments or the smallest increment that the employer's payroll system uses to account for absences or use of other time.

7. For earned paid sick time of three or more consecutive work days, an employer may require reasonable documentation that the earned paid sick time has been used for a purpose covered by subsection (1) of this section.

(A) Documentation signed by a health care professional indicating that earned paid sick time is necessary shall be considered reasonable documentation for purposes of this section.

(B) In cases of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, if the employer requests, one of the following types of documentation selected by the employee shall be considered reasonable documentation: (i) a police report indicating that the employee or the employee's family member was a victim of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, (ii) a written statement from an employee or agent of a victim service provider affirming that the employee or employee's family member is or was receiving services from a victim service provider; (iii) documentation signed by a health care professional from whom the employee or employee's family member sought assistance relating to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking or the effects thereof; (vi) a court document indicating that an employee or employee's family member is or was involved in a legal action related to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or (v) a written statement from the employee affirming that the employee or employee's family member is taking or took earned paid sick time for a qualifying purpose of subsection (1) of this section.

(C) An employer may not require that the documentation explain the nature of the illness, details of the underlying health needs, or the details of the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, unless otherwise required by law.

290.609. 1. It shall be unlawful for an employer or any other person to interfere with, restrain, or deny the exercise of, or the attempt to exercise, any right protected under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. An employer shall not take retaliatory personnel action or discriminate against an employee or former employee because the individual has exercised rights protected under sections 290.600 through 290.642. Such rights include, but are not limited to, the right to request or use earned paid sick time pursuant to sections 290.600 through 290.642; the right to file a complaint or inform any person about any employer's alleged violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642; the right to participate in any investigation, hearing, or proceeding or cooperate with or assist the Department in any investigations of alleged violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642; and the right to inform any person of his or her potential rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. It shall be unlawful for an employer's absence control policy to count earned paid sick time taken under sections 290.600 through 290.642 as an absence that may lead to or result in discipline, discharge, demotion, suspension, or any other adverse action.

4. Protections of this section shall apply to any individual who mistakenly but in good faith alleges violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

290.612. 1. Employers shall give employees a written notice about earned paid sick time within fourteen calendar days of the commencement of employment or on April 15, 2025, whichever is later, which must include the following information: (1) beginning May 1, 2025, employees accrue and are entitled to earned paid sick time at the rate one hour of earned paid sick time for every 30 hours of work, and may use earned paid sick time, subject to the limits and terms under sections 290.600 through 290.642 of Missouri law, (2) it is prohibited for an employer to take retaliatory personnel action against employees who request or use earned paid sick time as allowed by law, (3) each employee has the right to bring a civil action if earned paid sick time as required by sections 290.600 through 290.642 is denied by the employer or the employee is subjected to retaliatory personnel action by the employer for exercising the employee's rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642; and, (4) the contact information for the Department. Notice shall be provided by the Employer to the employee on a single piece of paper, at least 8.5 x 11, in no less than 14-point font.

2. Beginning April 15, 2025, employers shall display a poster that contains the information required in subsection (1) of this section in a conspicuous and accessible place in each establishment where such employees are employed, provided that such poster has been made available by the Department.

3. The Department may create and make available to employers, model notices and posters that contain the information required under subsection (1) of this section for employers' use in complying with subsections (1) and (2) of this section. Nothing in this subsection shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department to create or make available notices or posters if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.615. 1. Employers shall retain records documenting hours worked by employees and earned paid sick time taken by employees, for a period of not less than three years, and shall allow the Department access to such records, with appropriate notice and at a mutually agreeable time, to monitor compliance with the requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. To the extent permitted by law, the Director may inspect such records, and the records shall be open for inspection by the Director by appointment. Where the records required under this section are kept outside the state, the records shall be made available to the Director upon demand. Every such employer shall furnish to the Director on demand a sworn statement of time records and information upon forms prescribed or approved by the Director. All the records and information obtained by the Department are confidential and shall be disclosed only on order of a court of competent jurisdiction.

290.618. 1. The Department may, in accordance with chapter 536, promulgate rules for the implementation, enforcement, and administration of sections 290.600 through 290.642. Any rule or portion of a rule, as that term is defined in section 536.010, that is created under the authority delegated in this section shall become effective only if it complies with and is subject to all of the provisions of chapter 536 and, if applicable, section 536.028. This section and chapter 536 are nonseverable and if any of the powers vested with the general assembly pursuant to chapter 536 to review, to delay the effective date, or to disapprove and annul a rule are subsequently held unconstitutional, then the grant of rulemaking authority and any rule proposed or adopted after November 5, 2024, shall be invalid and void.

290.621. 1. The Department may investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to $500 per day of each day of a continuing violation. A final decision of the department is subject to review in accordance with the provisions of chapter 536.

2. The Department may develop and implement an outreach program to inform employees, parents, and persons who are under the care of a health care provider about the availability of earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642. This program may include the distribution of notices and other written materials to child care and elder care providers, domestic violence shelters, schools, hospitals, community health centers and other health care providers in Missouri.

3. A municipality, county, city, town, or village may adopt ordinances, rules, and regulations to investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, with respect to employers within, or employees performing work while physically present in, the geographic boundaries of the municipality, county, city, town, or village. Any such ordinance, rule, or regulation shall be consistent with this law and any Department rules or regulations and system for compliance and enforcement. The municipality, county, city, town, or village may exercise such powers as allowed by any applicable charter or ordinance, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to the maximum allowed for an ordinance violation. Before investigating or seeking to resolve any complaint between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall give notice to the Department with a copy of the complaint and, within 14 days of such notice, the Department may intervene as of right and participate in the matter to ensure that the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642 or, alternatively, the Department may institute its own proceedings in which case the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall refrain from acting on the matter so long as the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642. If the Department does not, within 14 days, intervene or instigate its own proceedings, the municipality, county, city, town, or village may, without the Department, investigate and attempt to resolve the complaint and take other additional means within its power to enforce sections 290.600 through 290.642 against the subject of the complaint. In no event shall an employer be subject to compliance proceedings arising out of a single set of facts after having already been subjected to a final compliance order by another governmental entity.

4. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department, a municipality, county, city, town, or village to conduct investigations and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, to establish and implement a system to receive or resolve complaints, to establish additional means of enforcement, or to conduct outreach and education, including the creation of notices and other written materials, concerning sections 290.600 through 290.642, if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.624. 1. Any employer who willfully violates or fails to comply with any of the provisions and requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be guilty of a class C misdemeanor; provided, however, that an employer who willfully violates the notice and posting requirements of section 290.612 shall be guilty of an infraction.

2. For purposes of this section, each day of violation or failure to comply and each employee affected shall constitute a separate offense.

290.627. 1. Any individual who claims to have been aggrieved by a failure of an employer to comply with any portion of sections 290.600 through 290.642, including but not limited to the failure to provide earned paid sick time or to allow employees to use such time consistent with sections 290.600 through 290.642, or who claims to have suffered a retaliatory personnel action, shall have a right of action and may commence a civil action in the appropriate court of jurisdiction within three years of the accrual of the cause of action, to obtain appropriate relief with respect to such unlawful violation. Such action may be brought without first filing an administrative complaint.

2. In a civil action under this section, if the court finds a violation has occurred, the court may grant as relief, as it deems appropriate and to the extent permitted by law, any permanent or temporary injunction, the full amount of any unpaid earned sick time plus any actual damages suffered as the result of the employer's violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642, an additional amount equal to twice any unpaid earned sick time as liquidated damages, costs, and reasonable attorney's fees as may be allowed by the court, and other legal or equitable relief as may be appropriate to remedy the violation, including, without limitation, reinstatement to employment and back pay.

290.630. 1. Except as otherwise required by law, an employer may not require disclosure of details relating to an employee's or an employee's family member's health information, domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking as a condition of providing earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. Unless as otherwise required by law, any health or safety information possessed by an employer regarding an employee or employee's family member must:

(A) be maintained on a separate form and in a separate file from other personnel information;

(B) be treated as confidential medical records; and

(C) not be disclosed except to the affected employee or with the express written permission of the affected employee.

290.633. 1. With respect to employees covered by a valid collective bargaining agreement in effect on November 5, 2024, no provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply until the stated expiration date in the collective bargaining agreement; however, further the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply upon any such agreement's renewal, extension, amendment, or modification in any respect after November 5, 2024.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed to interfere, impede, or otherwise diminish the right of employees to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing in order to establish earned paid sick time or other conditions of work in excess of the applicable minimum standards under the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. Any waiver by an employee of rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed contrary to public policy and shall be void.

290.636. 1. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed to discourage or prohibit an employer from the adoption or retention of an earned paid sick time policy more generous than the one required herein.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed as diminishing the obligation of an employer to comply with any contract, collective bargaining agreement, employment benefit plan, or other agreement providing more generous paid sick time to an employee than required herein. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed as diminishing the rights of public employees regarding paid sick time or use of paid sick time as provided in the laws of Missouri and ordinances of political subdivisions pertaining to public employees.

290.639. 1. Sections 290.600 through 290.642 provide minimum requirements pertaining to earned paid sick time and shall not be construed to preempt, limit, or otherwise affect the applicability of any other law, regulation, requirement, policy, or standard that provides for greater accrual or use by employees of earned paid sick time or that extends other protections to employees.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be interpreted or applied to create a power or obligation contrary to any federal law, rule, or regulation.

290.642. Except as detailed in section 290.618, all of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are severable, and if any provision, including any section, subsection, subdivision, paragraph, sentence, or clause, or the application thereof to any person or circumstance, is found by a court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted, such decision shall not affect other provisions or applications of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that can be given effect without the invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted provision or application, and to this end the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are declared severable.

Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, their office could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. However, if the enactment of this proposal were to result in substantial additional litigation, their office may be required to request additional appropriations.

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated their department has no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated no fiscal impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated this initiative petition has no impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated this petition, if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated this proposal might impact their department however, they defer to the Office of Administration to respond.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated:

This petition would amend provisions relating to the accumulation of sick time required for employees depending on how many employees are employed by the employer. It also has various requirements regarding how sick time can be used and procedures employers must use. Violations are deemed misdemeanors, and damages are allowed to be awarded in civil suits. It states that the DOLIR "may" create new notices, promulgate rules, and initiate outreach programs but that the DOLIR is not required to create notices if it requires the appropriation of funds. It also states that the DOLIR may inspect employment records and investigate complaints of noncompliance. Still, such inspection is not required if it requires the appropriation of funds, and the cost estimate would be zero.

The funding source will be from General Revenue if the DOLIR receives complaints to enforce it. Therefore the DOLIR estimates it would need two Regulatory Auditors and one Administrative Support Assistant person at an annual ongoing cost of $255,975 by 2027, plus an initial information technology (IT) component of $28,318 and office equipment of $25,011.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety indicated no impact for their department, Director's office.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated no impact anticipated by their department.

Officials from the Governor's Office indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage law does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact. The state seems excluded from section 3 and we are not included in the definition of an employer in the new sections.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their agency because it specifically exempts the state from the definition of employer.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated this initiative petition excludes the state from the requirements of the proposed new law. Therefore there is no anticipated fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage law does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated beginning January 1, 2025, the minimum wage rate would be not less than $13.50 per hour. This rate would increase by $0.75 per hour each year of the next two years until reaching $15.00 per hour by January 1, 2027.

The increase to wages would approximately have the fiscal impact below for each year:

Calendar Year	Annual Increase from the Current Wage
2025	$ 2,351.00
2026	$ 5,783.00
2027	$ 9,215.00

This is an estimated impact if not exempt.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In fiscal year (FY) 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. Their office estimates $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no fiscal impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated this petition does not apply to county governments under 290.502.4 for minimum wage and the contemplated new Section 6 for sick leave regarding the definition of an employer. Clay County provides more generous sick leave than this measure as well.

They do estimate additional costs from this petition of $2,000 a year between the Circuit Court and Prosecutor to enforce the misdemeanor and civil action provisions.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county for this initiative petition proposing to amend Chapter 290, RSMo.

Officials from St. Louis County indicated this initiative petition has no apparent fiscal impact on their county.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this amendment would have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact to their college.

Officials from St. Louis Community College indicated the petition request is generally lower than their current compensation structure and therefore its passage appears to have minimal effect on their college. That being said, increases calculated by Consumer Price Index or other indexed methods may affect them in the future and that cannot be determined at this time.

Officials from the Missouri Lottery indicated no fiscal impact to their agency. Current hourly wages are $15 or higher.

Officials from the State Tax Commission indicated this initiative petition will not have a fiscal impact on their agency.

Officials from the Missouri Veterans Commission indicated this initiative petition creates no fiscal impact to the Missouri Veterans Commission. However, given the proposed changes to section 290.502 RSMo, they would note that those changes would make it more difficult for state agencies to recruit new employees. As to the remainder of the petition, the definition for the term "employer" found in the proposed section 290.600(6) specifically excludes the state and its agencies, so the requirements of the petition would not apply to the Commission.

Officials from the Missouri Ethics Commission indicated this initiative petition does not have fiscal impact on their Commission.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Police Commissioners indicated per Section 290.600, the Kansas City, Missouri Police Department is exempt as a political subdivision of the state.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated they predict no fiscal impact from this petition.

Officials from the Board of Election Commissioners City of St. Louis indicated no fiscal impact; the lowest paid election board employee makes $15/hour.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners indicated this petition has no material fiscal impact on their operations.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated this petition has no fiscal impact to their Board.

Officials from the Children's Trust Fund indicated no impact.

Officials from the State Auditor's office indicated since this proposed initiative petition does not apply to government entities, this would have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the Missouri Gaming Commission indicated this initiative petition will not have any fiscal impact on their agency.

Lindsey Baker, Research Director, Missouri Budget Project indicated in summary, they estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state and local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue and decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy. She also provided the following information:

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Earned Sick Leave Petitions 24-025-042

We estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state & local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy.

In addition to helping employees by allowing them to address their health needs without losing their jobs or ability to pay their bills, paid sick leave has many benefits for employers, including a healthier workforce, reduced turnover, and increased productivity. The benefits of paid sick leave have been highlighted by the COVID-19 pandemic, illustrating the importance of workers being able to recover at home without lost wages and without risking spread of contagious disease in the workplace.

Several ballot measures have been filed (24-025-042) that would require employers to provide earned sick leave in Missouri. Though the measures vary slightly, each would require employers to provide a minimum of 3-7 days of paid leave to employees, depending on hours worked and size of business. If implemented, Missouri would join the seventeen states, plus the District of Columbia, who ensure employees can earn paid sick leave to care for themselves or family members.ⁱ

An estimated 211,000 Missourians and their families would benefit from the earned sick time provided through these initiatives, with low-wage workers disproportionately likely to benefit from this policy.ⁱⁱ Expanding earned sick leave in Missouri is estimated to provide a net savings to society of between $612.4-$774.1 million annually depending on the number of days provided.ⁱⁱⁱ

	3-5 Scenario*	5-7 Scenario*
Estimated Cost Savings	$1.26B	$1.29B
- Employment Related Savings	$436.73M	$466.6M
- Health Related Savings	$825.61M	$825.61M
Estimated Costs (Employer & State Admin)	$488.22M	$679.77M
Estimated Net Societal Benefit*	$774.11M	$612.44M

In the 3/5 scenario, small employers are required to offer at least three days of leave and large employers at least five days. The 5/7 scenario requires small employers to offer at least five days of paid sick leave and large employers to offer at least seven days of paid leave. A small employer defined as less than 15 employees.*

Societal Cost Savings from Earned Sick Leave in Missouri

Employment Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri's workforce would become stronger, more stable, and more productive leading to economic growth.

- Reduced Absenteeism. Access to earned sick leave allows workers to stay home, reducing the overall spread of illness in the workplace; this leads to fewer illnesses among workers and fewer overall days off work.^{iv}
- Reduced Turnover. Access to earned sick leave gives workers the ability to address their health needs and those of their families, without having to quit a job or risk being fired. Access to paid sick leave is associated with reduced job turnover, which in turn creates significant savings for businesses.^v
- Reduced Presenteeism. Employers who do not offer paid sick leave have higher rates of "presenteeism" or lost productivity due to employees working while injured or sick.^{vi} Offering paid sick leave reduces the likelihood of working at reduced capacity and allows workers to recover from illness or injury more quickly.

Health Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri would become a healthier state as workers would have the ability to care for themselves and their families, while simultaneously benefiting their communities.

- Reduced Flu Contagion in Society. Workers without paid sick leave are more likely to come to work sick, increasing the likelihood of spreading the illness.^{vii} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to stay home when ill, thus reducing the overall spread of influenza throughout the community.
- Reduced Workers Compensation Costs. Workers with access to paid leave are less likely to be injured on the job,^{viii} reducing overall workers comp claims and cost to employers.
- Reduced ER Visits. Paid sick leave is associated with fewer trips to the emergency room.^{ix} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to properly care for themselves and family members during an illness, preventing an escalation of the illness.
- Improved Nursing Home Care. Unpaid sick leave is especially problematic in nursing homes as the residents are especially vulnerable to the consequences of high turnover, absenteeism and presenteeism.^x Access to paid sick leave allows nursing home workers to take care of themselves so that they can better care for residents.

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Petitions 24-025-042

While previous estimates show a cost associated with state level administration and enforcement for earned sick leave of approximately $1 million, we also expect that earned sick leave will be associated with a significant potential for increased revenue collections & decreased spending on services associated with the cost savings outlined above.

- Increased revenue collections. A stronger and more productive workforce is associated with economic growth. Economic growth is in turn associated with growth in both state and local revenue as both sales & income tax collections rise due to increased spending and wages.
- Reductions in spending on services. When workers are able to care for themselves and their families (and others in their community) they are less likely to have minor illnesses escalate into costly health problems. This reduces the overall cost of health care, particularly among low-wage workers who are disproportionately likely to lack access to paid leave. This in turn reduces state and local spending on health other related public services.

As a result, we estimate the fiscal impact on state & local revenue of earned sick leave will be minimal as the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will offset the modest expenses associated with state level administration. While we are confident that a net savings will be realized, the size of the savings is too speculative to estimate exact fiscal impact.

Re: Proposal Related to Chapter 290, RSMo, Petition 2024-025-042

Dear Auditor Fitzpatrick:

A Better Balance is writing to submit our fact sheet titled "Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business" to accompany petition 24-025-042 and to inform the fiscal note process. We thank you for considering our submission.

A Better Balance, a national nonprofit advocacy organization with four regional offices, uses the power of the law to ensure that working individuals can care for themselves and their loved ones without jeopardizing their economic security. Through legislative advocacy, policy, direct legal services, strategic litigation, and public education, our organization works around the country to advance policies like paid sick leave, paid family and medical leave, quality childcare and eldercare, and anti-discrimination protections for pregnant workers and caregivers. From Arizona and Colorado to Duluth (MN) and beyond, our organization has worked on the growing number of paid sick leave laws now in effect.

The enclosed fact sheet summarizes research and data on the resoundingly positive effect that paid sick leave has on business. When paid sick leave policies are in place, businesses financially benefit from increased worker productivity, reduced spread of contagious illness in the workplace, and lower employee turnover. Research has also underscored that workers and the larger community also have better health outcomes overall when there is access to paid sick leave. As documented in the attached fact sheet, paid sick leave has been shown to work well for businesses and workers throughout the country.

Thank you for giving us the opportunity to submit this information. Please do not hesitate to contact A Better Balance at cgomez@abetterbalance.org if we can provide any additional assistance.

Sincerely,
A Better Balance

Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business

The research is clear: paid sick leave isn't just good for workers, it's good for business as well. Healthy workers are essential to a successful business and a strong economy. When workers have access to paid sick leave, they demonstrate increased job satisfaction, commitment, and morale, while employers—and their bottom lines—reap the benefits of increased worker performance and productivity and reduced worker turnover. And access to guaranteed paid sick leave is a vital component to keeping businesses open and safe through the COVID-19 pandemic and beyond.

Access to paid sick leave increases worker productivity and reduces the spread of contagious illness in the workplace, leading to direct savings for businesses.

- Workers with minor illnesses are less productive than their healthy co-workers.¹ Paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (when employees show up to work while sick), which costs businesses approximately $207.6 billion annually in reduced productivity.² After Washington State implemented its paid sick leave law, for example, the percentage of workers that went to work while sick decreased significantly.³
- Paid sick leave also reduces the spread of contagion between co-workers—further increasing productivity and labor in the workplace.⁴ Absenteeism caused by the introduction of flu-like illness in the workplace is estimated to cost employers up to 111 million workdays per year.⁵ Even before the pandemic, states with paid sick leave requirements saw a 40% decrease in influenza rates.⁶

Paid sick leave has proven to be particularly crucial to keeping businesses open during the COVID-19 pandemic.

- As the country with the highest cumulative number of COVID-19 cases,⁷ and the only one of the thirteen G12 countries with no paid sick leave,⁸ it is undeniable that the U.S. will need paid sick leave to end this crisis, to save lives, and to minimize disruption to businesses struggling to avoid the spread of COVID-19 in the workplace.
- Paid sick leave has been critical to keeping businesses open throughout the pandemic. One study found that states in which workers gained temporary access to paid sick leave through the federal Families First Coronavirus Response Act⁹ had around 400 fewer confirmed COVID-19 cases per day as a result.¹⁰

Employers with paid sick leave benefit from reduced worker turnover and better relationships with their employees, saving employers the cost of recruiting, interviewing, and training new hires.

- In general, worker turnover is estimated to cost employers the equivalent of 21% of a worker's annual compensation.¹¹ However, providing paid sick leave only increases labor costs by an average of 2.7 cents per hour worked¹² and workers with paid sick leave are less likely to leave their jobs,¹³ saving businesses money on turnover costs such as interviewing and training.¹⁴

- Paid sick leave also increases worker loyalty and job satisfaction—factors known to increase productivity and job retention.¹⁵ After Connecticut’s paid sick law went into effect, nearly 30% of surveyed employers reported improved employee morale, and over 20% reported increased employee motivation or loyalty.¹⁶
- Two years after paid sick leave went into effect in New York City, one employer reported that “the impact that I saw in my business was a much stronger bond between ourselves and our employees, higher productivity, and a more successful business, not a less successful business.”¹⁷

Paid sick leave also saves employers money by reducing the likelihood of workplace accidents.

- Throughout the country, direct and indirect costs associated with on-the-job injuries cost employers billions of dollars.¹⁸ Workers with paid sick leave are 28% less likely than workers without access to paid sick leave to be injured on the job.¹⁹

Lack of paid sick leave makes workers more likely to go to work while sick and puts co-workers and our communities at risk. With paid sick leave, our workplaces and communities are healthier, which improves the bottom line for employers.

- Access to sick leave will be essential to overcoming the COVID-19 pandemic, as evidenced by previous pandemics. For example, it is estimated that the lack of paid sick leave was responsible for 5 million incidents of flu-like illness during the H1N1 pandemic.²⁰
- In a simulated influenza epidemic, 72% of employees who caught the flu at work did so because of exposure to other employees attending work while sick; paid sick days would reduce flu incidences among workers by approximately 6% across all workplaces, and by over 7% in workplaces with 49 or fewer employees.²¹
- As explained above, access to paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (employees showing up to work while sick) and reduces overall contagion.²² Presenteeism is linked to the spread of harmful contagions to co-workers and customers.²³
- A study of data from the 2009 flu outbreak found that workers with paid sick leave were 30 percent more likely to be vaccinated and were more likely to seek treatment when they were sick with flu-like symptoms compared to those without paid sick leave.²⁴ This has proven true for COVID-19 as well—in June 2021, workers whose employers provided paid time off to get the vaccine or recover from any side effects were 24% more likely to have received at least one dose of the vaccine than workers whose employers provided no paid vaccine leave.²⁵
- A lack of access to paid sick days is particularly harmful for service industry workers. Nearly two-thirds of restaurant workers have cooked or served food while sick,²⁶ and in 2011, nearly one in five food service workers went to work vomiting or with diarrhea, creating dangerous health conditions.²⁷

- People without access to paid sick leave are 1.5x more likely to go to work while they have a contagious illness and are nearly twice as likely to send a sick child to school or daycare than those with access to it.²⁸
- States that have implemented paid sick leave laws had an 11% decrease of cases of flu-like illnesses in their first year after enactment.²⁹

Workers with paid sick leave are more likely to seek preventative care than workers without paid sick leave, leading to better health outcomes and less time away from work.

- People without paid sick days tend to be unable to make time for preventative health care, such as cancer screenings and flu shots, which makes it more likely that such workers will have more significant healthcare needs at later stages of an illness.³⁰
- Workers with access to paid sick days report better general health than workers without paid sick days and are less likely to delay preventive medical care for themselves or for their family.³¹

Paid sick leave has proven to work well for businesses all over the U.S., and experience shows that workers don't abuse paid sick leave.

- Business practices don't have to change to keep up with paid sick leave laws. In a survey of New York City employers after the city's paid sick law was implemented, 91% of employers reported no reduction in hiring, 97% indicated they did not reduce hours, about 94% did not raise prices, and nearly 85% of employers reported no change in their overall business costs.³²
 - In a similar survey of employers in Connecticut a year and a half after the state's paid sick law went into effect, nearly 90% of employers reported no reduction in hours, and about 85% did not raise prices.³³
- Paid sick leave laws stimulate economic growth. When San Francisco's paid sick law went into effect in 2007, the city's job growth actually exceeded that of nearby counties, despite unfounded fears that the law would cause an economic slowdown.³⁴
 - In comparison to other surrounding cities, Seattle saw greater increases in the number of employers in the city when its paid sick leave law was implemented,³⁵ and in general, job growth continued on an upward trend.³⁶
 - After New York City's paid sick days were implemented, the average wage for hourly workers increased and the average number of weekly absences declined.³⁷ On the law's first anniversary, the New York City government released a report touting its successful implementation and noting that since the law went into effect, "the city has had steady job growth and the lowest unemployment in six years."³⁸
- Workers don't abuse paid sick leave. After New York implemented its paid sick leave law, 98% of employers reported no cases of employee abuse of sick days.³⁹

- Employers know that paid sick leave laws work. Two years after New York City’s paid sick law was implemented, a staggering 86% of New York City employers polled supported the law.⁴⁰
- Studies in Washington, D.C. and Seattle also saw no negative economic effects following implementation of their paid sick leave laws in either job loss or movement of businesses out of the city. A report from the Washington D.C. Auditor, issued five years after passage of the District’s sick leave law, found that the law “did not have the economic impact of encouraging business owners to move a business from the District nor did the [law] have the economic impact of discouraging business owners to locate a business in the District of Columbia.”⁴¹ Likewise, a study of the economic impact of Seattle’s sick leave law found that a “preliminary look at available data shows no widespread negative economic impact as some opponents of the ordinance feared.”⁴²
- Recognizing the benefits of paid sick leave, San Francisco, Washington, D.C., and New York City—all among the earliest adopters of paid sick leave laws—later expanded their paid sick leave laws, underscoring how well these laws are working for workers, employers, and communities.

Richard von Glahn, Policy Director, Missouri Jobs with Justice indicated he was resubmitting the information previously submitted for initiative petitions 24-016 through 24-023 for initiative petitions 24-031 through 24-042. Petitions 24-031 through petition 24-042 all contain the language from petitions 24-016 through 24-019 in regards to the minimum wage. They do not believe the fiscal impact of petitions 24-031 through 24-042 will be different from 24-016 through 24-019, so their submission is the same. They also provided the following information:

Our analysis estimates the impact of the proposed petitions on state sales and personal income tax revenue in Missouri. Our analysis follows a process that has been used in the past to estimate the impact of minimum wage increases, with some updates. We are unable to provide calculations on local sales and income tax revenue, although it should be noted that impacted workers in Kansas City and St. Louis City are subject to a 1% earnings tax on income, so those municipalities will experience revenue gains from their constituents seeing wage increases. Local sales tax revenue will also increase, although the different taxing rates per jurisdiction made estimates overly cumbersome to predict. We also reference some economic literature on the impact of minimum wage laws on employment , social benefit spending and downstream impacts of wage increase in order to address some common claims made by opponents of similar initiatives in the past as well as provide a broader context of impact of wage increases.

As each of these petitions explicitly exclude public employers¹ from proposed increases, we do not include an analysis of payroll expenses to these employers.

I. Economic literature on the employment impact of increases in the minimum wage

With 30 states and numerous other municipalities having increased the minimum wage above the federal minimum, there is ample evidence of the impact of these increases. While opponents will undoubtedly cite individual studies that predict catastrophic job loss and resulting decline in state revenue, the most credible comprehensive review of empirical evidence comes from Hristos Doucouliagos and T.D. Stanley and shows no discernible impact on employment. Their study, “Publication Selection Bias in Minimum- Wage Research? A Meta-Regression Analysis²” combines over 1,500 estimates from 64 different studies. This peer reviewed article has the advantage of any single study in that it used a set of predetermined, objective criteria for weighing the validity of statistical findings across different studies that produced different results.

In addition to this comprehensive review, a recent publication “Are $15 Minimum Wages too High” provides an analysis of California which has gradually increased the minimum wage from $8 in 2014 to $15 in 2022. Their analysis focuses on impacts of two groups of workers most exposed to minimum wage increases- teenagers and restaurant workers and finds that “substantial and ongoing pay increases throughout the treatment period and find no significant disemployment effects, even in relatively low-wage counties.³” This is the most recent study and is analyzing a similar level of increases and time period as the proposed initiatives.

There is ample empirical and theoretical evidence that corroborates these studies. First, relative to total wage and labor costs, minimum-wage increases are small. Second, employers and workers respond to minimum wage increases in many ways that reduce the actual costs to employers.

Probably the most important economic response to a higher minimum wage is a reduction in turnover. At higher wages, employers fill vacancies faster and retain employees longer, boosting total employment and average productivity per worker while reducing direct and indirect training costs. A 2017 study by employee benefits news found that turnover costs as high as 33% of a workers annual salary⁴. Avoiding these costs provides an obvious benefit to employers and research from Dube, Lester and Reich in 2012⁵ finds “striking evidence that separations, new hires, and turnover rates for teens and restaurant workers fall substantially following a minimum wage increase.”

Based on these empirical studies we feel confident in concluding that there is no evidence that increasing the minimum wage will reduce employment. Accordingly, we do not include any projections for impact on employment and the resulting effects on revenue in our analysis.

II. Impact on state and federal spending on social safety net programs

One area where the state is likely to experience significant direct savings from an increase in the minimum wage is on state spending on social safety net programs. Research suggests that at least 44% of Missouri recipients of Medicaid, SNAP or the Federal EITC are members of working families who would be directly impacted by the proposed initiatives⁶. State and Federal spending for this share of the workers on these programs totals $2,400,000.00 dollars. While programs such as SNAP are paid entirely by the federal government, medicaid has a percentage paid by state revenue and the state EITC going into effect this year will cost the state revenue. While individual circumstances often dictate the cost of these or similar programs to the state, it holds that as workers earn higher wages at work access to these benefits will decrease, saving the state potentially tens of millions of dollars.

III. Estimate of number of workers impacted statewide and impact on wages

Number of impacted workers				Total Wage Growth
	Direct impact	Indirectly impacted	Total
Proposal 1	293,000	198,000	491,000	$576,819,000
Proposal 2	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,076,047,000
Proposal 3	331,000	194,000	525,000	$733,133,000
Proposal 4	394,000	241,000	635,000	$1,222,991,000
Proposal 5	293,000	198,000	491,000	$688,721,000
Proposal 6	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,213,236,000
Proposal 7	331,000	194,000	525,000	$852,823,000
Proposal 8	394,000	241,000	635,000	$1,346,386,000

Note: All wages in 2022 dollars

Across all eight version of the petitions estimates show a low of $576 million and a high of over $1.3 billion in wage growth for Missouri workers. These estimates include direct impacts to workers making under the minimum wage as well as secondary impacts to workers whose wages are predicted to rise as a result of the minimum wage increases.

IV. Estimate of state income and sales tax revenue

⁶ <https://laborcenter.berkeley.edu/the-public-cost-of-a-low-federal-minimum-wage/>

Based on the wage increase numbers above and the conclusion that minimum wage increases have no discernible impact on employment, we next calculate the impact of projected increases on state sales tax revenue and individual state income tax revenue for Missouri. As previously mentioned, we do not include estimates for local impacts, although we do project increased revenue there as local jurisdictions do capture sales tax revenue and in the case of the Kansas City and the City of St. Louis, increases in income are subject to the individual 1% earnings tax. We do not include any speculation of increased prices as a way to offset higher wages, although any such increase would result in higher sales tax revenue.

	Estimated sales tax revenue*	Estimated individual income tax revenue	Total revenue
Proposal 1	$8,738,808	$24,367,615	$33,106,423
Proposal 2	$16,302,112	$45,457,412	$61,759,524
Proposal 3	$11,712,965	$32,660,864	$44,373,829
Proposal 4	$18,528,314	$51,665,035	$70,193,348
Proposal 5	$10,434,123	$29,094,895	$39,529,018
Proposal 6	$18,380,525	$51,252,936	$69,633,462
Proposal 7	$12,920,268	$36,027,354	$48,947,623
Proposal 8	$20,397,748	$56,877,834	$77,275,582

State sales tax revenue is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average annual Missouri General Revenue sales tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 1.515%)*

Income tax is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average Missouri net individual income tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 4.523%) less an expected 6.6% reduction in collections due to the recent reduction of Missouri's top income tax bracket to 4.95%.*

V. Other downstream impacts of higher wages

Countless studies have also demonstrated the negative health impacts on adults and children of low wages as well as the negative impacts on child development, including academic achievement, of low wages. These situations often contain confounding variables that can make ascertaining cause and effect difficult, recent research using natural experiments to measure the direction of causation of the impact of public policies offers guidance for consideration. The research makes clear that “increases in parental income are found to lead to higher test scores and better educational outcomes for children, greater likelihood of employment in young

adulthood, and improved earnings⁷.” While the exact impact on state or local revenue is difficult to predict, research shows that the impact of higher wages on student academic achievement were four times higher per dollar increase as the effects found in a study of class size reductions that cost around $12,000 per student⁸.” Direct impacts on state and local revenue, especially in the short term, are difficult to predict, but the growing body of research shows definite positive long term impacts on human development resulting from wage increases.

VI. Conclusion

Overall we conclude that these petitions would generate a minimum net benefit to state general revenue of between thirty three and seventy seven million dollars with an undetermined net benefit for local revenue based on local considerations. This benefit is the direct result of the wage increases. Other savings are likely to accrue from a decrease in spending on safety net programs and a downstream benefit to the families of recipients of the wage increases. We submit this information in hopes that it can be useful in your determination of the fiscal impact of the proposed initiatives. Should you need any other information please do not hesitate to contact our office.

Chapter 290, RSMo, is amended by amending section 290.502 and enacting fifteen new sections to be known as sections 290.600, 290.603, 290.606, 290.609, 290.612, 290.615, 290.618, 290.621, 290.624, 290.627, 290.630, 290.633, 290.636, 290.639, and 290.642, to read as follows:

3. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, and notwithstanding subsection 1 of this section, effective January 1, [2019] 2025, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of not less than [$8.60] $13.50 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased each year by [$.85] $.75 per hour, effective January 1 of each of the next [four] two years, until it reaches [$12.00] $15.00 per hour, effective January 1, [2023] 2027. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased or decreased on January 1, [2024] 2028, and on January 1 of successive years, per the method set forth in subsection 2 of this section. If at any time the federal minimum wage rate is above or is thereafter increased above the minimum wage then in effect under this subsection, the minimum wage required by this subsection shall continue to be increased pursuant to this subsection 3, but the higher federal rate shall immediately become the minimum wage required by this subsection and shall be increased or decreased per the method set forth in subsection 2 for so long as it remains higher than the state minimum wage required and increased pursuant to this subsection.

4. For purposes of this section, the term "public employer" means an employer that is the state or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, or other political subdivision of the state. Subsection 3 of this section shall not apply to a public employer with respect to its employees. Any public employer that is subject to subsections 1 and 2 of this section shall continue to be subject to those subsections.

290.600. As used in sections 290.600 through 290.642:

(1) "Department", Department of Labor and Industrial Relations.

(2) "Director", Director of the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations.

(3) "Domestic violence", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(4) "Earned paid sick time", time that is compensated at the same hourly rate and with the same benefits, including health care benefits, as the employee normally earns during hours worked and is provided by an employer to an employee for the purposes described in section 290.606, but in no case shall this hourly amount be less than that provided under section 290.502.

(5) "Employee", any individual employed in this state by an employer, but does not include:

(A) Any individual engaged in the activities of an educational, charitable, religious, or nonprofit organization where the employer-employee relationship does not, in fact, exist or where the services rendered to the organization are on a voluntary basis;

(6) "Employer", any person acting directly or indirectly in the interest of an employer in relation to an employee; provided, however, that for the purposes of sections 290.600 through 290.642 "employer" does not include the United States Government, the state, or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, public higher education institution, or other political subdivision of the state.

(7) "Family member", any of the following individuals:

(A) Regardless of age, a biological, adopted or foster child, stepchild or legal ward, a child of a domestic partner, a child to whom the employee stands in loco parentis, or an individual to whom the employee stood in loco parentis when the individual was a minor;

(B) A biological, foster, stepparent or adoptive parent or legal guardian of an employee or an employee's spouse or domestic partner or an individual who stood in loco parentis when the employee or employee's spouse or domestic partner was a minor child;

(E) A person for whom the employee is responsible for providing or arranging health or safety-related care, including but not limited to helping that individual obtain diagnostic, preventative, routine, or therapeutic health treatment or ensuring the person is safe following domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking.

(8) "Health care professional," any individual licensed under federal or any state law to provide medical or emergency services, including but not limited to doctors, nurses, certified nurse midwives, mental health professionals, and emergency room personnel.

(9) "Person", any individual, partnership, association, corporation, business, business trust, legal representative, or any organized group of persons.

(10) "Retaliatory personnel action", denial of any right guaranteed under sections 290.600 through 290.642, or any threat, discharge, suspension, demotion, reduction of hours, or any other adverse action against an employee for the exercise of any right guaranteed herein. "Retaliatory personnel action" shall also include interference with or punishment for in any manner participating in or assisting an investigation, proceeding, or hearing under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

(11) "Same hourly rate", means the following:

(A) For employees paid on the basis of a single hourly rate, the same hourly rate shall be the employee's regular hourly rate.

(B) For employees who are paid multiple hourly rates of pay from the same employer, the same hourly rate shall be either:

(i) the wages the employee would have been paid for the hours absent during use of earned paid sick time if the employee had worked; or,

(ii) the weighted average of all hourly rates of pay during the previous pay period.

Whatever method the employer uses, the employer must use a consistent method for each employee throughout a year.

(C) For employees who are paid a salary, the same hourly rate shall be determined by dividing the wages the employee earns in the previous pay period by the total number of hours worked during the previous pay period. For determining total number of hours worked during the previous pay period, employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1), the Fair Labor Standards Act, shall be assumed to work 40 hours in each work week unless their normal work week is less than 40 hours, in which case earned paid sick time shall accrue and the same hourly rate shall be calculated based on the employee's normal work week. Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(D) For employees paid on a piece rate or a fee-for-service basis, the same hourly rate shall be a reasonable calculation of the wages or fees the employee would have received for the piece work, service, or part thereof, if the employee had worked. Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(E) For employees who are paid on a commission basis (whether base wage plus commission or commission only), the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the base wage or the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(F) For employees who receive and retain compensation in the form of gratuities in addition to wages, the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the employee's regular hourly rate or 100% of the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502 without deduction of any tips as a credit.

(12) "Sexual assault", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(13) "Stalking", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(14) "Year", a regular and consecutive twelve-month period as determined by the employer; except that for the purposes of section 290.615 and section 290.627, "year" shall mean a calendar year.

290.603. 1. Employees of an employer with fifteen or more employees shall accrue a minimum of one hour of earned paid sick time for every thirty hours worked, but such employees shall not be entitled to use more than fifty-six hours of earned paid sick time per year, unless the employer selects a higher limit.

2. Employees of an employer with fewer than fifteen employees shall accrue a minimum of one hour of earned paid sick time for every thirty hours worked, but such employees shall not be entitled to use more than forty hours of earned paid sick time per year, unless the employer selects a higher limit.

3. In determining the number of employees of an employer, all employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation on a full-time, part-time, or temporary basis shall be counted. In situations in which the number of employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation per week fluctuates above and below 15 employees per week over the course of a year, an employer is required to provide earned paid sick time pursuant to subsection (1) of this section if it maintained fifteen or more employees in the state on the payroll for some portion of a working day in each of twenty or more different calendar weeks, including any periods of leave, and whether or not the weeks were consecutive, in either the current or the preceding year (irrespective of whether the same individuals were in employment in each working day).

4. All employees shall accrue earned paid sick time as follows:

(A) Earned paid sick time as provided in this section shall begin to accrue at the commencement of employment or May 1, 2025, whichever is later. An employee shall be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued. An employer may provide all earned paid sick time that an employee is expected to accrue in a year at the beginning of the year.

(B) Employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1) of the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act will be assumed to work forty hours in each work week for purposes of earned paid sick time accrual unless their normal work week is less than forty hours, in which case earned paid sick time accrues based upon that normal work week.

(C) Up to 80 hours of earned paid sick time shall be carried over to the following year if the employee has any unused accrued earned paid sick time at the end of the year, but this law does not require an employer to permit an employee to use more than the applicable number of hours of earned paid sick time per year as set forth in subsection (1) and (2) of this section. Alternatively, in lieu of carryover of unused earned paid sick time from one year to the next, an employer may pay an employee for unused earned paid sick time at the end of a year which could be carried over and provide the employee with an amount of paid sick time that meets or exceeds the requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that is available for the employee's immediate use at the beginning of the subsequent year.

(D) If an employee is transferred to a separate division, entity, or location, but remains employed by the same employer, the employee is entitled to all earned paid sick time accrued at the prior division, entity, or location and is entitled to use all earned paid sick time as provided in this section. When there is a separation from employment and the employee is rehired within nine months of separation by the same employer, previously accrued earned paid sick time that had not been used shall be reinstated. Further, the employee shall be entitled to use accrued earned paid sick time and accrue additional earned paid sick time at the re-commencement of employment.

(E) When a different employer succeeds or takes the place of an existing employer, all employees of the original employer who remain employed by the successor employer are entitled to all earned paid sick time they accrued when employed by the original employer, and are entitled to use earned paid sick time previously accrued.

(F) At its discretion, an employer may loan earned paid sick time to an employee in advance of accrual by such employee.

5. Any employer with a paid leave policy, such as a paid time off policy, who makes available an amount of paid leave sufficient to meet the accrual requirements of this section that may be used for the same purposes and under the same conditions as earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642 is not required to provide additional paid sick time under this section.

6. Except as specifically provided in this section, nothing in this section shall be construed as requiring financial or other reimbursement to an employee from an employer upon the employee's termination, resignation, retirement, or other separation from employment for accrued earned paid sick time that has not been used.

7. Employees shall not accrue earned paid sick time before May 1, 2025. Employees who are employed or who commence employment on or after May 1, 2025 shall accrue earned paid sick time and be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued in accordance with sections 290.600 through 290.642. The Department may develop model posters and notices, engage in rule-making, initiate outreach programs, and engage in other activities for implementation of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 as authorized by those sections before May 1, 2025.

290.606. 1. Earned paid sick time shall be provided to an employee by an employer for:

(A) An employee's mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for preventative medical care;

(B) Care of a family member with a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs preventative medical care;

(C) Closure of the employee's place of business by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or an employee's need to care for a child whose school or place of care has been closed by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or care for oneself or a family member when it has been determined by the health authorities having jurisdiction or by a health care provider that the employee's or family member's presence in the community may jeopardize the health of others because of his or her exposure to a communicable disease, whether or not the employee or family member has actually contracted the communicable disease; or

(D) Absence necessary due to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, provided the leave is to allow the employee to obtain for the employee or the employee's family member:

(i) Medical attention needed to recover from physical or psychological injury or disability caused by domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking;

(ii) Services from a victim services organization;

(iii) Psychological or other counseling;

(iv) Relocation or taking steps to secure an existing home due to the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or

(v) Legal services, including preparing for or participating in any civil or criminal legal proceeding related to or resulting from the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking.

2. Earned paid sick time shall be provided upon the request of an employee. Such request may be made orally, in writing, by electronic means, or by any other means acceptable to the employer. When possible, the request shall include the expected duration of the absence.

3. When the use of earned paid sick time is foreseeable, the employee shall make a good faith effort to provide notice of the need for such time to the employer in advance of the use of the earned paid sick time and shall make a reasonable effort to schedule the use of earned paid sick time in a manner that does not unduly disrupt the operations of the employer. Where such need is not foreseeable, an employer may require an employee to provide notice of the need for the use of earned paid sick time as soon as practicable.

4. An employer that requires notice of the need to use earned paid sick time where the need is not foreseeable shall provide a written policy that contains procedures for the employee to provide notice. An employer that has not provided to the employee a copy of its written policy for providing such notice shall not deny earned paid sick time to the employee based on non-compliance with such a policy.

5. An employer may not require, as a condition of an employee's taking earned paid sick time, that the employee search for or find a replacement worker to cover the hours during which the employee is using earned paid sick time.

6. Earned paid sick time may be used in the smaller of hourly increments or the smallest increment that the employer's payroll system uses to account for absences or use of other time.

7. For earned paid sick time of three or more consecutive work days, an employer may require reasonable documentation that the earned paid sick time has been used for a purpose covered by subsection (1) of this section.

(A) Documentation signed by a health care professional indicating that earned paid sick time is necessary shall be considered reasonable documentation for purposes of this section.

(B) In cases of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, if the employer requests, one of the following types of documentation selected by the employee shall be considered reasonable documentation: (i) a police report indicating that the employee or the employee's family member was a victim of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, (ii) a written statement from an employee or agent of a victim service provider affirming that the employee or employee's family member is or was receiving services from a victim service provider; (iii) documentation signed by a health care professional from whom the employee or employee's family member sought assistance relating to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking or the effects thereof; (vi) a court document indicating that an employee or employee's family member is or was involved in a legal action related to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or (v) a written statement from the employee affirming that the employee or employee's family member is taking or took earned paid sick time for a qualifying purpose of subsection (1) of this section.

(C) An employer may not require that the documentation explain the nature of the illness, details of the underlying health needs, or the details of the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, unless otherwise required by law.

290.609. 1. It shall be unlawful for an employer or any other person to interfere with, restrain, or deny the exercise of, or the attempt to exercise, any right protected under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. An employer shall not take retaliatory personnel action or discriminate against an employee or former employee because the individual has exercised rights protected under sections 290.600 through 290.642. Such rights include, but are not limited to, the right to request or use earned paid sick time pursuant to sections 290.600 through 290.642; the right to file a complaint or inform any person about any employer's alleged violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642; the right to participate in any investigation, hearing, or proceeding or cooperate with or assist the Department in any investigations of alleged violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642; and the right to inform any person of his or her potential rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. It shall be unlawful for an employer's absence control policy to count earned paid sick time taken under sections 290.600 through 290.642 as an absence that may lead to or result in discipline, discharge, demotion, suspension, or any other adverse action.

4. Protections of this section shall apply to any individual who mistakenly but in good faith alleges violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

290.612. 1. Employers shall give employees a written notice about earned paid sick time within fourteen calendar days of the commencement of employment or on April 15, 2025, whichever is later, which must include the following information: (1) beginning May 1, 2025, employees accrue and are entitled to earned paid sick time at the rate one hour of earned paid sick time for every 30 hours of work, and may use earned paid sick time, subject to the limits and terms under sections 290.600 through 290.642 of Missouri law, (2) it is prohibited for an employer to take retaliatory personnel action against employees who request or use earned paid sick time as allowed by law, (3) each employee has the right to bring a civil action if earned paid sick time as required by sections 290.600 through 290.642 is denied by the employer or the employee is subjected to retaliatory personnel action by the employer for exercising the employee's rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642; and, (4) the contact information for the Department. Notice shall be provided by the Employer to the employee on a single piece of paper, at least 8.5 x 11, in no less than 14-point font.

2. Beginning April 15, 2025, employers shall display a poster that contains the information required in subsection (1) of this section in a conspicuous and accessible place in each establishment where such employees are employed, provided that such poster has been made available by the Department.

3. The Department may create and make available to employers, model notices and posters that contain the information required under subsection (1) of this section for employers' use in complying with subsections (1) and (2) of this section. Nothing in this subsection shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department to create or make available notices or posters if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.615. 1. Employers shall retain records documenting hours worked by employees and earned paid sick time taken by employees, for a period of not less than three years, and shall allow the Department access to such records, with appropriate notice and at a mutually agreeable time, to monitor compliance with the requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. To the extent permitted by law, the Director may inspect such records, and the records shall be open for inspection by the Director by appointment. Where the records required under this section are kept outside the state, the records shall be made available to the Director upon demand. Every such employer shall furnish to the Director on demand a sworn statement of time records and information upon forms prescribed or approved by the Director. All the records and information obtained by the Department are confidential and shall be disclosed only on order of a court of competent jurisdiction.

290.618. 1. The Department may, in accordance with chapter 536, promulgate rules for the implementation, enforcement, and administration of sections 290.600 through 290.642. Any rule or portion of a rule, as that term is defined in section 536.010, that is created under the authority delegated in this section shall become effective only if it complies with and is subject to all of the provisions of chapter 536 and, if applicable, section 536.028. This section and chapter 536 are nonseverable and if any of the powers vested with the general assembly pursuant to chapter 536 to review, to delay the effective date, or to disapprove and annul a rule are subsequently held unconstitutional, then the grant of rulemaking authority and any rule proposed or adopted after November 5, 2024, shall be invalid and void.

290.621. 1. The Department may investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to $500 per day of each day of a continuing violation. A final decision of the department is subject to review in accordance with the provisions of chapter 536.

2. The Department may develop and implement an outreach program to inform employees, parents, and persons who are under the care of a health care provider about the availability of earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642. This program may include the distribution of notices and other written materials to child care and elder care providers, domestic violence shelters, schools, hospitals, community health centers and other health care providers in Missouri.

3. A municipality, county, city, town, or village may adopt ordinances, rules, and regulations to investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, with respect to employers within, or employees performing work while physically present in, the geographic boundaries of the municipality, county, city, town, or village. Any such ordinance, rule, or regulation shall be consistent with this law and any Department rules or regulations and system for compliance and enforcement. The municipality, county, city, town, or village may exercise such powers as allowed by any applicable charter or ordinance, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to the maximum allowed for an ordinance violation. Before investigating or seeking to resolve any complaint between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall give notice to the Department with a copy of the complaint and, within 14 days of such notice, the Department may intervene as of right and participate in the matter to ensure that the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642 or, alternatively, the Department may institute its own proceedings in which case the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall refrain from acting on the matter so long as the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642. If the Department does not, within 14 days, intervene or instigate its own proceedings, the municipality, county, city, town, or village may, without the Department, investigate and attempt to resolve the complaint and take other additional means within its power to enforce sections 290.600 through 290.642 against the subject of the complaint. In no event shall an employer be subject to compliance proceedings arising out of a single set of facts after having already been subjected to a final compliance order by another governmental entity.

4. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department, a municipality, county, city, town, or village to conduct investigations and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, to establish and implement a system to receive or resolve complaints, to establish additional means of enforcement, or to conduct outreach and education, including the creation of notices and other written materials, concerning sections 290.600 through 290.642, if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.624. 1. Any employer who willfully violates or fails to comply with any of the provisions and requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be guilty of a class C misdemeanor; provided, however, that an employer who willfully violates the notice and posting requirements of section 290.612 shall be guilty of an infraction.

2. For purposes of this section, each day of violation or failure to comply and each employee affected shall constitute a separate offense.

290.627. 1. Any individual who claims to have been aggrieved by a failure of an employer to comply with any portion of sections 290.600 through 290.642, including but not limited to the failure to provide earned paid sick time or to allow employees to use such time consistent with sections 290.600 through 290.642, or who claims to have suffered a retaliatory personnel action, shall have a right of action and may commence a civil action in the appropriate court of jurisdiction within three years of the accrual of the cause of action, to obtain appropriate relief with respect to such unlawful violation. Such action may be brought without first filing an administrative complaint.

2. In a civil action under this section, if the court finds a violation has occurred, the court may grant as relief, as it deems appropriate and to the extent permitted by law, any permanent or temporary injunction, the full amount of any unpaid earned sick time plus any actual damages suffered as the result of the employer's violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642, an additional amount equal to twice any unpaid earned sick time as liquidated damages, costs, and reasonable attorney's fees as may be allowed by the court, and other legal or equitable relief as may be appropriate to remedy the violation, including, without limitation, reinstatement to employment and back pay.

290.630. 1. Except as otherwise required by law, an employer may not require disclosure of details relating to an employee's or an employee's family member's health information, domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking as a condition of providing earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. Unless as otherwise required by law, any health or safety information possessed by an employer regarding an employee or employee's family member must:

(A) be maintained on a separate form and in a separate file from other personnel information;

(B) be treated as confidential medical records; and

(C) not be disclosed except to the affected employee or with the express written permission of the affected employee.

290.633. 1. With respect to employees covered by a valid collective bargaining agreement in effect on November 5, 2024, no provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply until the stated expiration date in the collective bargaining agreement; however, further the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply upon any such agreement's renewal, extension, amendment, or modification in any respect after November 5, 2024.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed to interfere, impede, or otherwise diminish the right of employees to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing in order to establish earned paid sick time or other conditions of work in excess of the applicable minimum standards under the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. All or any portion of the earned paid sick time requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall not apply to employees covered by a bona fide collective bargaining agreement to the extent that such requirements are expressly waived in the collective bargaining agreement in clear and unambiguous terms.

4. With the exception noted in subsection 3, any waiver by an employee of rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed contrary to public policy and shall be void.

290.636. 1. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed to discourage or prohibit an employer from the adoption or retention of an earned paid sick time policy more generous than the one required herein.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed as diminishing the obligation of an employer to comply with any contract, collective bargaining agreement, employment benefit plan, or other agreement providing more generous paid sick time to an employee than required herein. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed as diminishing the rights of public employees regarding paid sick time or use of paid sick time as provided in the laws of Missouri and ordinances of political subdivisions pertaining to public employees.

290.639. 1. Sections 290.600 through 290.642 provide minimum requirements pertaining to earned paid sick time and shall not be construed to preempt, limit, or otherwise affect the applicability of any other law, regulation, requirement, policy, or standard that provides for greater accrual or use by employees of earned paid sick time or that extends other protections to employees.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be interpreted or applied to create a power or obligation contrary to any federal law, rule, or regulation.

290.642. Except as detailed in section 290.618, all of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are severable, and if any provision, including any section, subsection, subdivision, paragraph, sentence, or clause, or the application thereof to any person or circumstance, is found by a court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted, such decision shall not affect other provisions or applications of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that can be given effect without the invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted provision or application, and to this end the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are declared severable.

Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, their office could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. However, if the enactment of this proposal were to result in substantial additional litigation, their office may be required to request additional appropriations.

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated their department has no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated no fiscal impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated this initiative petition has no impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated this petition, if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated they assume no direct fiscal impact from the proposed statutory amendment to Chapter 290 as government employees are exempt from its provisions. However, employees of providers that receive DMH funding would be impacted, which would include all contracted DMH providers.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated this proposal might impact their department however, they defer to the Office of Administration to respond.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated:

This petition would amend provisions relating to the accumulation of sick time required for employees depending on how many employees are employed by the employer. It also has various requirements regarding how sick time can be used and procedures employers must use. Violations are deemed misdemeanors, and damages are allowed to be awarded in civil suits. It states that the DOLIR "may" create new notices, promulgate rules, and initiate outreach programs but that the DOLIR is not required to create notices if it requires the appropriation of funds. It also states that the DOLIR may inspect employment records and investigate complaints of noncompliance. Still, such inspection is not required if it requires the appropriation of funds, and the cost estimate would be zero.

The funding source will be from General Revenue if the DOLIR receives complaints to enforce it. Therefore the DOLIR estimates it would need two Regulatory Auditors and one Administrative Support Assistant person at an annual ongoing cost of $255,975 by 2027, plus an initial information technology (IT) component of $28,318 and office equipment of $25,011.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety indicated no impact for their department, Director's office.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated no impact anticipated by their department.

Officials from the Governor's Office indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage law does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact. The state seems excluded from section 3 and we are not included in the definition of an employer in the new sections.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their agency because it specifically exempts the state from the definition of employer.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated this initiative petition excludes the state from the requirements of the proposed new law. Therefore there is no anticipated fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage law does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated beginning January 1, 2025, the minimum wage rate would be not less than $13.50 per hour. This rate would increase by $0.75 per hour each year of the next two years until reaching $15.00 per hour by January 1, 2027.

The increase to wages would approximately have the fiscal impact below for each year:

Calendar Year	Annual Increase from the Current Wage
2025	$ 2,351.00
2026	$ 5,783.00
2027	$ 9,215.00

This is an estimated impact if not exempt.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In fiscal year (FY) 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. Their office estimates $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no fiscal impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated this petition does not apply to county governments under 290.502.4 for minimum wage and the contemplated new Section 6 for sick leave regarding the definition of an employer. Clay County provides more generous sick leave than this measure as well.

They do estimate additional costs from this petition of $2,000 a year between the Circuit Court and Prosecutor to enforce the misdemeanor and civil action provisions.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county for this initiative petition proposing to amend Chapter 290, RSMo.

Officials from St. Louis County indicated this initiative petition has no apparent fiscal impact on their county.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this amendment would have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact to their college.

Officials from St. Louis Community College indicated the petition request is generally lower than their current compensation structure and therefore its passage appears to have minimal effect on their college. That being said, increases calculated by Consumer Price Index or other indexed methods may affect them in the future and that cannot be determined at this time.

Officials from the Missouri Lottery indicated no fiscal impact to their agency. Current hourly wages are $15 or higher.

Officials from the State Tax Commission indicated this initiative petition will not have a fiscal impact on their agency.

Officials from the Missouri Veterans Commission indicated this initiative petition creates no fiscal impact to the Missouri Veterans Commission. However, given the proposed changes to section 290.502 RSMo, they would note that those changes would make it more difficult for state agencies to recruit new employees. As to the remainder of the petition, the definition for the term "employer" found in the proposed section 290.600(6) specifically excludes the state and its agencies, so the requirements of the petition would not apply to the Commission.

Officials from the Missouri Ethics Commission indicated this initiative petition does not have fiscal impact on their Commission.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Police Commissioners indicated per Section 290.600, the Kansas City, Missouri Police Department is exempt as a political subdivision of the state.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated they predict no fiscal impact from this petition.

Officials from the Board of Election Commissioners City of St. Louis indicated no fiscal impact; the lowest paid election board employee makes $15/hour.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated this petition has no fiscal impact to their Board.

Officials from the Children's Trust Fund indicated no impact.

Officials from the State Auditor's office indicated since this proposed initiative petition does not apply to government entities, this would have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the Missouri Gaming Commission indicated this initiative petition will not have any fiscal impact on their agency.

Lindsey Baker, Research Director, Missouri Budget Project indicated in summary, they estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state and local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue and decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy. She also provided the following information:

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Earned Sick Leave Petitions 24-025-042

We estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state & local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy.

In addition to helping employees by allowing them to address their health needs without losing their jobs or ability to pay their bills, paid sick leave has many benefits for employers, including a healthier workforce, reduced turnover, and increased productivity. The benefits of paid sick leave have been highlighted by the COVID-19 pandemic, illustrating the importance of workers being able to recover at home without lost wages and without risking spread of contagious disease in the workplace.

Several ballot measures have been filed (24-025-042) that would require employers to provide earned sick leave in Missouri. Though the measures vary slightly, each would require employers to provide a minimum of 3-7 days of paid leave to employees, depending on hours worked and size of business. If implemented, Missouri would join the seventeen states, plus the District of Columbia, who ensure employees can earn paid sick leave to care for themselves or family members.ⁱ

An estimated 211,000 Missourians and their families would benefit from the earned sick time provided through these initiatives, with low-wage workers disproportionately likely to benefit from this policy.ⁱⁱ Expanding earned sick leave in Missouri is estimated to provide a net savings to society of between $612.4-$774.1 million annually depending on the number of days provided.ⁱⁱⁱ

	3-5 Scenario*	5-7 Scenario*
Estimated Cost Savings	$1.26B	$1.29B
- Employment Related Savings	$436.73M	$466.6M
- Health Related Savings	$825.61M	$825.61M
Estimated Costs (Employer & State Admin)	$488.22M	$679.77M
Estimated Net Societal Benefit*	$774.11M	$612.44M

In the 3/5 scenario, small employers are required to offer at least three days of leave and large employers at least five days. The 5/7 scenario requires small employers to offer at least five days of paid sick leave and large employers to offer at least seven days of paid leave. A small employer defined as less than 15 employees.*

Societal Cost Savings from Earned Sick Leave in Missouri

Employment Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri's workforce would become stronger, more stable, and more productive leading to economic growth.

- Reduced Absenteeism. Access to earned sick leave allows workers to stay home, reducing the overall spread of illness in the workplace; this leads to fewer illnesses among workers and fewer overall days off work.^{iv}
- Reduced Turnover. Access to earned sick leave gives workers the ability to address their health needs and those of their families, without having to quit a job or risk being fired. Access to paid sick leave is associated with reduced job turnover, which in turn creates significant savings for businesses.^v
- Reduced Presenteeism. Employers who do not offer paid sick leave have higher rates of "presenteeism" or lost productivity due to employees working while injured or sick.^{vi} Offering paid sick leave reduces the likelihood of working at reduced capacity and allows workers to recover from illness or injury more quickly.

Health Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri would become a healthier state as workers would have the ability to care for themselves and their families, while simultaneously benefiting their communities.

- Reduced Flu Contagion in Society. Workers without paid sick leave are more likely to come to work sick, increasing the likelihood of spreading the illness.^{vii} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to stay home when ill, thus reducing the overall spread of influenza throughout the community.
- Reduced Workers Compensation Costs. Workers with access to paid leave are less likely to be injured on the job,^{viii} reducing overall workers comp claims and cost to employers.
- Reduced ER Visits. Paid sick leave is associated with fewer trips to the emergency room.^{ix} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to properly care for themselves and family members during an illness, preventing an escalation of the illness.
- Improved Nursing Home Care. Unpaid sick leave is especially problematic in nursing homes as the residents are especially vulnerable to the consequences of high turnover, absenteeism and presenteeism.^x Access to paid sick leave allows nursing home workers to take care of themselves so that they can better care for residents.

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Petitions 24-025-042

While previous estimates show a cost associated with state level administration and enforcement for earned sick leave of approximately $1 million, we also expect that earned sick leave will be associated with a significant potential for increased revenue collections & decreased spending on services associated with the cost savings outlined above.

- Increased revenue collections. A stronger and more productive workforce is associated with economic growth. Economic growth is in turn associated with growth in both state and local revenue as both sales & income tax collections rise due to increased spending and wages.
- Reductions in spending on services. When workers are able to care for themselves and their families (and others in their community) they are less likely to have minor illnesses escalate into costly health problems. This reduces the overall cost of health care, particularly among low-wage workers who are disproportionately likely to lack access to paid leave. This in turn reduces state and local spending on health other related public services.

As a result, we estimate the fiscal impact on state & local revenue of earned sick leave will be minimal as the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will offset the modest expenses associated with state level administration. While we are confident that a net savings will be realized, the size of the savings is too speculative to estimate exact fiscal impact.

Re: Proposal Related to Chapter 290, RSMo, Petition 2024-025-042

Dear Auditor Fitzpatrick:

A Better Balance is writing to submit our fact sheet titled "Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business" to accompany petition 24-025-042 and to inform the fiscal note process. We thank you for considering our submission.

A Better Balance, a national nonprofit advocacy organization with four regional offices, uses the power of the law to ensure that working individuals can care for themselves and their loved ones without jeopardizing their economic security. Through legislative advocacy, policy, direct legal services, strategic litigation, and public education, our organization works around the country to advance policies like paid sick leave, paid family and medical leave, quality childcare and eldercare, and anti-discrimination protections for pregnant workers and caregivers. From Arizona and Colorado to Duluth (MN) and beyond, our organization has worked on the growing number of paid sick leave laws now in effect.

The enclosed fact sheet summarizes research and data on the resoundingly positive effect that paid sick leave has on business. When paid sick leave policies are in place, businesses financially benefit from increased worker productivity, reduced spread of contagious illness in the workplace, and lower employee turnover. Research has also underscored that workers and the larger community also have better health outcomes overall when there is access to paid sick leave. As documented in the attached fact sheet, paid sick leave has been shown to work well for businesses and workers throughout the country.

Thank you for giving us the opportunity to submit this information. Please do not hesitate to contact A Better Balance at cgomez@abetterbalance.org if we can provide any additional assistance.

Sincerely,
A Better Balance

Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business

The research is clear: paid sick leave isn't just good for workers, it's good for business as well. Healthy workers are essential to a successful business and a strong economy. When workers have access to paid sick leave, they demonstrate increased job satisfaction, commitment, and morale, while employers—and their bottom lines—reap the benefits of increased worker performance and productivity and reduced worker turnover. And access to guaranteed paid sick leave is a vital component to keeping businesses open and safe through the COVID-19 pandemic and beyond.

Access to paid sick leave increases worker productivity and reduces the spread of contagious illness in the workplace, leading to direct savings for businesses.

- Workers with minor illnesses are less productive than their healthy co-workers.¹ Paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (when employees show up to work while sick), which costs businesses approximately $207.6 billion annually in reduced productivity.² After Washington State implemented its paid sick leave law, for example, the percentage of workers that went to work while sick decreased significantly.³
- Paid sick leave also reduces the spread of contagion between co-workers—further increasing productivity and labor in the workplace.⁴ Absenteeism caused by the introduction of flu-like illness in the workplace is estimated to cost employers up to 111 million workdays per year.⁵ Even before the pandemic, states with paid sick leave requirements saw a 40% decrease in influenza rates.⁶

Paid sick leave has proven to be particularly crucial to keeping businesses open during the COVID-19 pandemic.

- As the country with the highest cumulative number of COVID-19 cases,⁷ and the only one of the thirteen G12 countries with no paid sick leave,⁸ it is undeniable that the U.S. will need paid sick leave to end this crisis, to save lives, and to minimize disruption to businesses struggling to avoid the spread of COVID-19 in the workplace.
- Paid sick leave has been critical to keeping businesses open throughout the pandemic. One study found that states in which workers gained temporary access to paid sick leave through the federal Families First Coronavirus Response Act⁹ had around 400 fewer confirmed COVID-19 cases per day as a result.¹⁰

Employers with paid sick leave benefit from reduced worker turnover and better relationships with their employees, saving employers the cost of recruiting, interviewing, and training new hires.

- In general, worker turnover is estimated to cost employers the equivalent of 21% of a worker's annual compensation.¹¹ However, providing paid sick leave only increases labor costs by an average of 2.7 cents per hour worked¹² and workers with paid sick leave are less likely to leave their jobs,¹³ saving businesses money on turnover costs such as interviewing and training.¹⁴

- Paid sick leave also increases worker loyalty and job satisfaction—factors known to increase productivity and job retention.¹⁵ After Connecticut’s paid sick law went into effect, nearly 30% of surveyed employers reported improved employee morale, and over 20% reported increased employee motivation or loyalty.¹⁶
- Two years after paid sick leave went into effect in New York City, one employer reported that “the impact that I saw in my business was a much stronger bond between ourselves and our employees, higher productivity, and a more successful business, not a less successful business.”¹⁷

Paid sick leave also saves employers money by reducing the likelihood of workplace accidents.

- Throughout the country, direct and indirect costs associated with on-the-job injuries cost employers billions of dollars.¹⁸ Workers with paid sick leave are 28% less likely than workers without access to paid sick leave to be injured on the job.¹⁹

Lack of paid sick leave makes workers more likely to go to work while sick and puts co-workers and our communities at risk. With paid sick leave, our workplaces and communities are healthier, which improves the bottom line for employers.

- Access to sick leave will be essential to overcoming the COVID-19 pandemic, as evidenced by previous pandemics. For example, it is estimated that the lack of paid sick leave was responsible for 5 million incidents of flu-like illness during the H1N1 pandemic.²⁰
- In a simulated influenza epidemic, 72% of employees who caught the flu at work did so because of exposure to other employees attending work while sick; paid sick days would reduce flu incidences among workers by approximately 6% across all workplaces, and by over 7% in workplaces with 49 or fewer employees.²¹
- As explained above, access to paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (employees showing up to work while sick) and reduces overall contagion.²² Presenteeism is linked to the spread of harmful contagions to co-workers and customers.²³
- A study of data from the 2009 flu outbreak found that workers with paid sick leave were 30 percent more likely to be vaccinated and were more likely to seek treatment when they were sick with flu-like symptoms compared to those without paid sick leave.²⁴ This has proven true for COVID-19 as well—in June 2021, workers whose employers provided paid time off to get the vaccine or recover from any side effects were 24% more likely to have received at least one dose of the vaccine than workers whose employers provided no paid vaccine leave.²⁵
- A lack of access to paid sick days is particularly harmful for service industry workers. Nearly two-thirds of restaurant workers have cooked or served food while sick,²⁶ and in 2011, nearly one in five food service workers went to work vomiting or with diarrhea, creating dangerous health conditions.²⁷

- People without access to paid sick leave are 1.5x more likely to go to work while they have a contagious illness and are nearly twice as likely to send a sick child to school or daycare than those with access to it.²⁸
- States that have implemented paid sick leave laws had an 11% decrease of cases of flu-like illnesses in their first year after enactment.²⁹

Workers with paid sick leave are more likely to seek preventative care than workers without paid sick leave, leading to better health outcomes and less time away from work.

- People without paid sick days tend to be unable to make time for preventative health care, such as cancer screenings and flu shots, which makes it more likely that such workers will have more significant healthcare needs at later stages of an illness.³⁰
- Workers with access to paid sick days report better general health than workers without paid sick days and are less likely to delay preventive medical care for themselves or for their family.³¹

Paid sick leave has proven to work well for businesses all over the U.S., and experience shows that workers don't abuse paid sick leave.

- Business practices don't have to change to keep up with paid sick leave laws. In a survey of New York City employers after the city's paid sick law was implemented, 91% of employers reported no reduction in hiring, 97% indicated they did not reduce hours, about 94% did not raise prices, and nearly 85% of employers reported no change in their overall business costs.³²
 - In a similar survey of employers in Connecticut a year and a half after the state's paid sick law went into effect, nearly 90% of employers reported no reduction in hours, and about 85% did not raise prices.³³
- Paid sick leave laws stimulate economic growth. When San Francisco's paid sick law went into effect in 2007, the city's job growth actually exceeded that of nearby counties, despite unfounded fears that the law would cause an economic slowdown.³⁴
 - In comparison to other surrounding cities, Seattle saw greater increases in the number of employers in the city when its paid sick leave law was implemented,³⁵ and in general, job growth continued on an upward trend.³⁶
 - After New York City's paid sick days were implemented, the average wage for hourly workers increased and the average number of weekly absences declined.³⁷ On the law's first anniversary, the New York City government released a report touting its successful implementation and noting that since the law went into effect, "the city has had steady job growth and the lowest unemployment in six years."³⁸
- Workers don't abuse paid sick leave. After New York implemented its paid sick leave law, 98% of employers reported no cases of employee abuse of sick days.³⁹

- Employers know that paid sick leave laws work. Two years after New York City’s paid sick law was implemented, a staggering 86% of New York City employers polled supported the law.⁴⁰
- Studies in Washington, D.C. and Seattle also saw no negative economic effects following implementation of their paid sick leave laws in either job loss or movement of businesses out of the city. A report from the Washington D.C. Auditor, issued five years after passage of the District’s sick leave law, found that the law “did not have the economic impact of encouraging business owners to move a business from the District nor did the [law] have the economic impact of discouraging business owners to locate a business in the District of Columbia.”⁴¹ Likewise, a study of the economic impact of Seattle’s sick leave law found that a “preliminary look at available data shows no widespread negative economic impact as some opponents of the ordinance feared.”⁴²
- Recognizing the benefits of paid sick leave, San Francisco, Washington, D.C., and New York City—all among the earliest adopters of paid sick leave laws—later expanded their paid sick leave laws, underscoring how well these laws are working for workers, employers, and communities.

Richard von Glahn, Policy Director, Missouri Jobs with Justice indicated he was resubmitting the information previously submitted for initiative petitions 24-016 through 24-023 for initiative petitions 24-031 through 24-042. Petitions 24-031 through petition 24-042 all contain the language from petitions 24-016 through 24-019 in regards to the minimum wage. They do not believe the fiscal impact of petitions 24-031 through 24-042 will be different from 24-016 through 24-019, so their submission is the same. They also provided the following information:

Our analysis estimates the impact of the proposed petitions on state sales and personal income tax revenue in Missouri. Our analysis follows a process that has been used in the past to estimate the impact of minimum wage increases, with some updates. We are unable to provide calculations on local sales and income tax revenue, although it should be noted that impacted workers in Kansas City and St. Louis City are subject to a 1% earnings tax on income, so those municipalities will experience revenue gains from their constituents seeing wage increases. Local sales tax revenue will also increase, although the different taxing rates per jurisdiction made estimates overly cumbersome to predict. We also reference some economic literature on the impact of minimum wage laws on employment , social benefit spending and downstream impacts of wage increase in order to address some common claims made by opponents of similar initiatives in the past as well as provide a broader context of impact of wage increases.

As each of these petitions explicitly exclude public employers¹ from proposed increases, we do not include an analysis of payroll expenses to these employers.

I. Economic literature on the employment impact of increases in the minimum wage

With 30 states and numerous other municipalities having increased the minimum wage above the federal minimum, there is ample evidence of the impact of these increases. While opponents will undoubtedly cite individual studies that predict catastrophic job loss and resulting decline in state revenue, the most credible comprehensive review of empirical evidence comes from Hristos Doucouliagos and T.D. Stanley and shows no discernible impact on employment. Their study, “Publication Selection Bias in Minimum- Wage Research? A Meta-Regression Analysis²” combines over 1,500 estimates from 64 different studies. This peer reviewed article has the advantage of any single study in that it used a set of predetermined, objective criteria for weighing the validity of statistical findings across different studies that produced different results.

In addition to this comprehensive review, a recent publication “Are $15 Minimum Wages too High” provides an analysis of California which has gradually increased the minimum wage from $8 in 2014 to $15 in 2022. Their analysis focuses on impacts of two groups of workers most exposed to minimum wage increases- teenagers and restaurant workers and finds that “substantial and ongoing pay increases throughout the treatment period and find no significant disemployment effects, even in relatively low-wage counties.³” This is the most recent study and is analyzing a similar level of increases and time period as the proposed initiatives.

There is ample empirical and theoretical evidence that corroborates these studies. First, relative to total wage and labor costs, minimum-wage increases are small. Second, employers and workers respond to minimum wage increases in many ways that reduce the actual costs to employers.

Probably the most important economic response to a higher minimum wage is a reduction in turnover. At higher wages, employers fill vacancies faster and retain employees longer, boosting total employment and average productivity per worker while reducing direct and indirect training costs. A 2017 study by employee benefits news found that turnover costs as high as 33% of a workers annual salary⁴. Avoiding these costs provides an obvious benefit to employers and research from Dube, Lester and Reich in 2012⁵ finds “striking evidence that separations, new hires, and turnover rates for teens and restaurant workers fall substantially following a minimum wage increase.”

Based on these empirical studies we feel confident in concluding that there is no evidence that increasing the minimum wage will reduce employment. Accordingly, we do not include any projections for impact on employment and the resulting effects on revenue in our analysis.

II. Impact on state and federal spending on social safety net programs

One area where the state is likely to experience significant direct savings from an increase in the minimum wage is on state spending on social safety net programs. Research suggests that at least 44% of Missouri recipients of Medicaid, SNAP or the Federal EITC are members of working families who would be directly impacted by the proposed initiatives⁶. State and Federal spending for this share of the workers on these programs totals $2,400,000.00 dollars. While programs such as SNAP are paid entirely by the federal government, medicaid has a percentage paid by state revenue and the state EITC going into effect this year will cost the state revenue. While individual circumstances often dictate the cost of these or similar programs to the state, it holds that as workers earn higher wages at work access to these benefits will decrease, saving the state potentially tens of millions of dollars.

III. Estimate of number of workers impacted statewide and impact on wages

Number of impacted workers				Total Wage Growth
	Direct impact	Indirectly impacted	Total
Proposal 1	293,000	198,000	491,000	$576,819,000
Proposal 2	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,076,047,000
Proposal 3	331,000	194,000	525,000	$733,133,000
Proposal 4	394,000	241,000	635,000	$1,222,991,000
Proposal 5	293,000	198,000	491,000	$688,721,000
Proposal 6	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,213,236,000
Proposal 7	331,000	194,000	525,000	$852,823,000
Proposal 8	394,000	241,000	635,000	$1,346,386,000

Note: All wages in 2022 dollars

Across all eight version of the petitions estimates show a low of $576 million and a high of over $1.3 billion in wage growth for Missouri workers. These estimates include direct impacts to workers making under the minimum wage as well as secondary impacts to workers whose wages are predicted to rise as a result of the minimum wage increases.

IV. Estimate of state income and sales tax revenue

⁶ <https://laborcenter.berkeley.edu/the-public-cost-of-a-low-federal-minimum-wage/>

Based on the wage increase numbers above and the conclusion that minimum wage increases have no discernible impact on employment, we next calculate the impact of projected increases on state sales tax revenue and individual state income tax revenue for Missouri. As previously mentioned, we do not include estimates for local impacts, although we do project increased revenue there as local jurisdictions do capture sales tax revenue and in the case of the Kansas City and the City of St. Louis, increases in income are subject to the individual 1% earnings tax. We do not include any speculation of increased prices as a way to offset higher wages, although any such increase would result in higher sales tax revenue.

	Estimated sales tax revenue*	Estimated individual income tax revenue	Total revenue
Proposal 1	$8,738,808	$24,367,615	$33,106,423
Proposal 2	$16,302,112	$45,457,412	$61,759,524
Proposal 3	$11,712,965	$32,660,864	$44,373,829
Proposal 4	$18,528,314	$51,665,035	$70,193,348
Proposal 5	$10,434,123	$29,094,895	$39,529,018
Proposal 6	$18,380,525	$51,252,936	$69,633,462
Proposal 7	$12,920,268	$36,027,354	$48,947,623
Proposal 8	$20,397,748	$56,877,834	$77,275,582

State sales tax revenue is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average annual Missouri General Revenue sales tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 1.515%)*

Income tax is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average Missouri net individual income tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 4.523%) less an expected 6.6% reduction in collections due to the recent reduction of Missouri's top income tax bracket to 4.95%.*

V. Other downstream impacts of higher wages

Countless studies have also demonstrated the negative health impacts on adults and children of low wages as well as the negative impacts on child development, including academic achievement, of low wages. These situations often contain confounding variables that can make ascertaining cause and effect difficult, recent research using natural experiments to measure the direction of causation of the impact of public policies offers guidance for consideration. The research makes clear that “increases in parental income are found to lead to higher test scores and better educational outcomes for children, greater likelihood of employment in young

adulthood, and improved earnings⁷.” While the exact impact on state or local revenue is difficult to predict, research shows that the impact of higher wages on student academic achievement were four times higher per dollar increase as the effects found in a study of class size reductions that cost around $12,000 per student⁸.” Direct impacts on state and local revenue, especially in the short term, are difficult to predict, but the growing body of research shows definite positive long term impacts on human development resulting from wage increases.

VI. Conclusion

Overall we conclude that these petitions would generate a minimum net benefit to state general revenue of between thirty three and seventy seven million dollars with an undetermined net benefit for local revenue based on local considerations. This benefit is the direct result of the wage increases. Other savings are likely to accrue from a decrease in spending on safety net programs and a downstream benefit to the families of recipients of the wage increases. We submit this information in hopes that it can be useful in your determination of the fiscal impact of the proposed initiatives. Should you need any other information please do not hesitate to contact our office.

(11) "Person", any individual, partnership, association, corporation, business, business trust, legal representative, or any organized group of persons.

(12) "Retaliatory personnel action", denial of any right guaranteed under sections 290.600 through 290.642, or any threat, discharge, suspension, demotion, reduction of hours, or any other adverse action against an employee for the exercise of any right guaranteed herein. "Retaliatory personnel action" shall also include interference with or punishment for in any manner participating in or assisting an investigation, proceeding, or hearing under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

(13) "Same hourly rate", means the following:

(A) For employees paid on the basis of a single hourly rate, the same hourly rate shall be the employee's regular hourly rate.

(B) For employees who are paid multiple hourly rates of pay from the same employer, the same hourly rate shall be either:

(i) the wages the employee would have been paid for the hours absent during use of earned paid sick time if the employee had worked; or,

(ii) the weighted average of all hourly rates of pay during the previous pay period.

Whatever method the employer uses, the employer must use a consistent method for each employee throughout a year.

(C) For employees who are paid a salary, the same hourly rate shall be determined by dividing the wages the employee earns in the previous pay period by the total number of hours worked during the previous pay period. For determining total number of hours worked during the previous pay period, employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1), the Fair Labor Standards Act, shall be assumed to work 40 hours in each work week unless their normal work week is less than 40 hours, in which case earned paid sick time shall accrue and the same hourly rate shall be calculated based on the employee's normal work week. Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(D) For employees paid on a piece rate or a fee-for-service basis, the same hourly rate shall be a reasonable calculation of the wages or fees the employee would have received for the piece work, service, or part thereof, if the employee had worked. Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(E) For employees who are paid on a commission basis (whether base wage plus commission or commission only), the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the base wage or the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(F) For employees who receive and retain compensation in the form of gratuities in addition to wages, the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the employee's regular hourly rate or 100% of the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502 without deduction of any tips as a credit.

(14) "Sexual assault", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(15) "Stalking", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(16) "Year", a regular and consecutive twelve-month period as determined by the employer; except that for the purposes of section 290.615 and section 290.627, "year" shall mean a calendar year.

290.603. 1. Employees of an employer with fifteen or more employees shall accrue a minimum of one hour of earned paid sick time for every thirty hours worked, but such employees shall not be entitled to use more than forty hours of earned paid sick time per year, unless the employer selects a higher limit.

2. Employees of an employer with fewer than fifteen employees shall accrue a minimum of one hour of earned paid sick time for every thirty hours worked, but such employees shall not be entitled to use more than twenty-four hours of earned paid sick time per year, unless the employer selects a higher limit.

3. In determining the number of employees of an employer, all employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation on a full-time, part-time, or temporary basis shall be counted. In situations in which the number of employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation per week fluctuates above and below 15 employees per week over the course of a year, an employer is required to provide earned paid sick time pursuant to subsection (1) of this section if it maintained fifteen or more employees in the state on the payroll for some portion of a working day in each of twenty or more different calendar weeks, including any periods of leave, and whether or not the weeks were consecutive, in either the current or the preceding year (irrespective of whether the same individuals were in employment in each working day).

4. All employees shall accrue earned paid sick time as follows:

(A) Earned paid sick time as provided in this section shall begin to accrue at the commencement of employment or May 1, 2025, whichever is later. An employee shall be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued. An employer may provide all earned paid sick time that an employee is expected to accrue in a year at the beginning of the year.

(B) Employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1) of the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act will be assumed to work forty hours in each work week for purposes of earned paid sick time accrual unless their normal work week is less than forty hours, in which case earned paid sick time accrues based upon that normal work week.

(C) Up to 80 hours of earned paid sick time shall be carried over to the following year if the employee has any unused accrued earned paid sick time at the end of the year, but this law does not require an employer to permit an employee to use more than the applicable number of hours of earned paid sick time per year as set forth in subsection (1) and (2) of this section. Alternatively, in lieu of carryover of unused earned paid sick time from one year to the next, an employer may pay an employee for unused earned paid sick time at the end of a year which could be carried over and provide the employee with an amount of paid sick time that meets or exceeds the requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that is available for the employee's immediate use at the beginning of the subsequent year.

(D) If an employee is transferred to a separate division, entity, or location, but remains employed by the same employer, the employee is entitled to all earned paid sick time accrued at the prior division, entity, or location and is entitled to use all earned paid sick time as provided in this section. When there is a separation from employment and the employee is rehired within nine months of separation by the same employer, previously accrued earned paid sick time that had not been used shall be reinstated. Further, the employee shall be entitled to use accrued earned paid sick time and accrue additional earned paid sick time at the re-commencement of employment.

(E) When a different employer succeeds or takes the place of an existing employer, all employees of the original employer who remain employed by the successor employer are entitled to all earned paid sick time they accrued when employed by the original employer, and are entitled to use earned paid sick time previously accrued.

(F) At its discretion, an employer may loan earned paid sick time to an employee in advance of accrual by such employee.

5. Any employer with a paid leave policy, such as a paid time off policy, who makes available an amount of paid leave sufficient to meet the accrual requirements of this section that may be used for the same purposes and under the same conditions as earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642 is not required to provide additional paid sick time under this section.

6. Except as specifically provided in this section, nothing in this section shall be construed as requiring financial or other reimbursement to an employee from an employer upon the employee's termination, resignation, retirement, or other separation from employment for accrued earned paid sick time that has not been used.

7. Employees shall not accrue earned paid sick time before May 1, 2025. Employees who are employed or who commence employment on or after May 1, 2025 shall accrue earned paid sick time and be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued in accordance with sections 290.600 through 290.642. The Department may develop model posters and notices, engage in rule-making, initiate outreach programs, and engage in other activities for implementation of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 as authorized by those sections before May 1, 2025.

290.606. 1. Earned paid sick time shall be provided to an employee by an employer for:

(A) An employee's mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for preventative medical care;

(B) Care of a family member with a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs preventative medical care;

(C) Closure of the employee's place of business by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or an employee's need to care for a child whose school or place of care has been closed by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or care for oneself or a family member when it has been determined by the health authorities having jurisdiction or by a health care provider that the employee's or family member's presence in the community may jeopardize the health of others because of his or her exposure to a communicable disease, whether or not the employee or family member has actually contracted the communicable disease; or

(D) Absence necessary due to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, provided the leave is to allow the employee to obtain for the employee or the employee's family member:

- (i) Medical attention needed to recover from physical or psychological injury or disability caused by domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking;
- (ii) Services from a victim services organization;
- (iii) Psychological or other counseling;
- (iv) Relocation or taking steps to secure an existing home due to the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or
- (v) Legal services, including preparing for or participating in any civil or criminal legal proceeding related to or resulting from the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking.

2. Earned paid sick time shall be provided upon the request of an employee. Such request may be made orally, in writing, by electronic means, or by any other means acceptable to the employer. When possible, the request shall include the expected duration of the absence.

3. When the use of earned paid sick time is foreseeable, the employee shall make a good faith effort to provide notice of the need for such time to the employer in advance of the use of the earned paid sick time and shall make a reasonable effort to schedule the use of earned paid sick time in a manner that does not unduly disrupt the operations of the employer. Where such need is not foreseeable, an employer may require an employee to provide notice of the need for the use of earned paid sick time as soon as practicable.

4. An employer that requires notice of the need to use earned paid sick time where the need is not foreseeable shall provide a written policy that contains procedures for the employee to provide notice. An employer that has not provided to the employee a copy of its written policy for providing such notice shall not deny earned paid sick time to the employee based on non-compliance with such a policy.

5. An employer may not require, as a condition of an employee's taking earned paid sick time, that the employee search for or find a replacement worker to cover the hours during which the employee is using earned paid sick time.

6. Earned paid sick time may be used in the smaller of hourly increments or the smallest increment that the employer's payroll system uses to account for absences or use of other time.

7. For earned paid sick time of three or more consecutive work days, an employer may require reasonable documentation that the earned paid sick time has been used for a purpose covered by subsection (1) of this section.

(A) Documentation signed by a health care professional indicating that earned paid sick time is necessary shall be considered reasonable documentation for purposes of this section.

(B) In cases of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, if the employer requests, one of the following types of documentation selected by the employee shall be considered reasonable documentation: (i) a police report indicating that the employee or the employee's family member was a victim of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, (ii) a written statement from an employee or agent of a victim service provider affirming that the employee or employee's family member is or was receiving services from a victim service provider; (iii) documentation signed by a health care professional from whom the employee or employee's family member sought assistance relating to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking or the effects thereof; (vi) a court document indicating that an employee or employee's family member is or was involved in a legal action related to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or (v) a written statement from the employee affirming that the employee or employee's family member is taking or took earned paid sick time for a qualifying purpose of subsection (1) of this section.

(C) An employer may not require that the documentation explain the nature of the illness, details of the underlying health needs, or the details of the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, unless otherwise required by law.

290.609. 1. It shall be unlawful for an employer or any other person to interfere with, restrain, or deny the exercise of, or the attempt to exercise, any right protected under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. An employer shall not take retaliatory personnel action or discriminate against an employee or former employee because the individual has exercised rights protected under sections 290.600 through 290.642. Such rights include, but are not limited to, the right to request or use earned paid sick time pursuant to sections 290.600 through 290.642; the right to file a complaint or inform any person about any employer's alleged violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642; the right to participate in any investigation, hearing, or proceeding or cooperate with or assist the Department in any investigations of alleged violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642; and the right to inform any person of his or her potential rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. It shall be unlawful for an employer's absence control policy to count earned paid sick time taken under sections 290.600 through 290.642 as an absence that may lead to or result in discipline, discharge, demotion, suspension, or any other adverse action.

4. Protections of this section shall apply to any individual who mistakenly but in good faith alleges violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

290.612. 1. Employers shall give employees a written notice about earned paid sick time within fourteen calendar days of the commencement of employment or on April 15, 2025, whichever is later, which must include the following information: (1) beginning May 1, 2025, employees accrue and are entitled to earned paid sick time at the rate one hour of earned paid sick time for every 30 hours of work, and may use earned paid sick time, subject to the limits and terms under sections 290.600 through 290.642 of Missouri law, (2) it is prohibited for an employer to take retaliatory personnel action against employees who request or use earned paid sick time as allowed by law, (3) each employee has the right to bring a civil action if earned paid sick time as required by sections 290.600 through 290.642 is denied by the employer or the employee is subjected to retaliatory personnel action by the employer for exercising the employee's rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642; and, (4) the contact information for the Department. Notice shall be provided by the Employer to the employee on a single piece of paper, at least 8.5 x 11, in no less than 14-point font.

2. Beginning April 15, 2025, employers shall display a poster that contains the information required in subsection (1) of this section in a conspicuous and accessible place in each establishment where such employees are employed, provided that such poster has been made available by the Department.

3. The Department may create and make available to employers, model notices and posters that contain the information required under subsection (1) of this section for employers' use in complying with subsections (1) and (2) of this section. Nothing in this subsection shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department to create or make available notices or posters if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.615. 1. Employers shall retain records documenting hours worked by employees and earned paid sick time taken by employees, for a period of not less than three years, and shall allow the Department access to such records, with appropriate notice and at a mutually agreeable time, to monitor compliance with the requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. To the extent permitted by law, the Director may inspect such records, and the records shall be open for inspection by the Director by appointment. Where the records required under this section are kept outside the state, the records shall be made available to the Director upon demand. Every such employer shall furnish to the Director on demand a sworn statement of time records and information upon forms prescribed or approved by the Director. All the records and information obtained by the Department are confidential and shall be disclosed only on order of a court of competent jurisdiction.

3. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department or Director to access or inspect records or to create forms relating to the inspection of records if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.618. 1. The Department may, in accordance with chapter 536, promulgate rules for the implementation, enforcement, and administration of sections 290.600 through 290.642. Any rule or portion of a rule, as that term is defined in section 536.010, that is created under the authority delegated in this section shall become effective only if it complies with and is subject to all of the provisions of chapter 536 and, if applicable, section 536.028. This section and chapter 536 are nonseverable and if any of the powers vested with the general assembly pursuant to chapter 536 to review, to delay the effective date, or to disapprove and annul a rule are subsequently held unconstitutional, then the grant of rulemaking authority and any rule proposed or adopted after November 5, 2024, shall be invalid and void.

290.621. 1. The Department may investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to $500 per day of each day of a continuing violation. A final decision of the department is subject to review in accordance with the provisions of chapter 536.

2. The Department may develop and implement an outreach program to inform employees, parents, and persons who are under the care of a health care provider about the availability of earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642. This program may include the distribution of notices and other written materials to child care and elder care providers, domestic violence shelters, schools, hospitals, community health centers and other health care providers in Missouri.

3. A municipality, county, city, town, or village may adopt ordinances, rules, and regulations to investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, with respect to employers within, or employees performing work while physically present in, the geographic boundaries of the municipality, county, city, town, or village. Any such ordinance, rule, or regulation shall be consistent with this law and any Department rules or regulations and system for compliance and enforcement. The municipality, county, city, town, or village may exercise such powers as allowed by any applicable charter or ordinance, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to the maximum allowed for an ordinance violation. Before investigating or seeking to resolve any complaint between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall give notice to the Department with a copy of the complaint and, within 14 days of such notice, the Department may intervene as of right and participate in the matter to ensure that the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642 or, alternatively, the Department may institute its own proceedings in which case the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall refrain from acting on the matter so long as the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642. If the Department does not, within 14 days, intervene or instigate its own proceedings, the municipality, county, city, town, or village may, without the Department, investigate and attempt to resolve the complaint and take other additional means within its power to enforce sections 290.600 through 290.642 against the subject of the complaint. In no event shall an employer be subject to compliance proceedings arising out of a single set of facts after having already been subjected to a final compliance order by another governmental entity.

4. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department, a municipality, county, city, town, or village to conduct investigations and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, to establish and implement a system to receive or resolve complaints, to establish additional means of enforcement, or to conduct outreach and education, including the creation of notices and other written materials, concerning sections 290.600 through 290.642, if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.624. 1. Any employer who willfully violates or fails to comply with any of the provisions and requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be guilty of a class C misdemeanor; provided, however, that an employer who willfully violates the notice and posting requirements of section 290.612 shall be guilty of an infraction.

2. For purposes of this section, each day of violation or failure to comply and each employee affected shall constitute a separate offense.

290.627. 1. Any individual who claims to have been aggrieved by a failure of an employer to comply with any portion of sections 290.600 through 290.642, including but not limited to the failure to provide earned paid sick time or to allow employees to use such time consistent with sections 290.600 through 290.642, or who claims to have suffered a retaliatory personnel action, shall have a right of action and may commence a civil action in the appropriate court of jurisdiction within three years of the accrual of the cause of action, to obtain appropriate relief with respect to such unlawful violation. Such action may be brought without first filing an administrative complaint.

2. In a civil action under this section, if the court finds a violation has occurred, the court may grant as relief, as it deems appropriate and to the extent permitted by law, any permanent or temporary injunction, the full amount of any unpaid earned sick time plus any actual damages suffered as the result of the employer's violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642, an additional amount equal to twice any unpaid earned sick time as liquidated damages, costs, and reasonable attorney's fees as may be allowed by the court, and other legal or equitable relief as may be appropriate to remedy the violation, including, without limitation, reinstatement to employment and back pay.

290.630. 1. Except as otherwise required by law, an employer may not require disclosure of details relating to an employee's or an employee's family member's health information, domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking as a condition of providing earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. Unless as otherwise required by law, any health or safety information possessed by an employer regarding an employee or employee's family member must:

(A) be maintained on a separate form and in a separate file from other personnel information;

(B) be treated as confidential medical records; and

(C) not be disclosed except to the affected employee or with the express written permission of the affected employee.

290.633. 1. With respect to employees covered by a valid collective bargaining agreement in effect on November 5, 2024, no provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply until the stated expiration date in the collective bargaining agreement; however, further the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply upon any such agreement's renewal, extension, amendment, or modification in any respect after November 5, 2024.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed to interfere, impede, or otherwise diminish the right of employees to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing in order to establish earned paid sick time or other conditions of work in excess of the applicable minimum standards under the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. Any waiver by an employee of rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed contrary to public policy and shall be void.

290.636. 1. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed to discourage or prohibit an employer from the adoption or retention of an earned paid sick time policy more generous than the one required herein.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed as diminishing the obligation of an employer to comply with any contract, collective bargaining agreement, employment benefit plan, or other agreement providing more generous paid sick time to an employee than required herein. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed as diminishing the rights of public employees regarding paid sick time or use of paid sick time as provided in the laws of Missouri and ordinances of political subdivisions pertaining to public employees.

290.639. 1. Sections 290.600 through 290.642 provide minimum requirements pertaining to earned paid sick time and shall not be construed to preempt, limit, or otherwise affect the applicability of any other law, regulation, requirement, policy, or standard that provides for greater accrual or use by employees of earned paid sick time or that extends other protections to employees.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be interpreted or applied to create a power or obligation contrary to any federal law, rule, or regulation.

290.642. Except as detailed in section 290.618, all of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are severable, and if any provision, including any section, subsection, subdivision, paragraph, sentence, or clause, or the application thereof to any person or circumstance, is found by a court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted, such decision shall not affect other provisions or applications of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that can be given effect without the invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted provision or application, and to this end the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are declared severable.

Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, their office could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. However, if the enactment of this proposal were to result in substantial additional litigation, their office may be required to request additional appropriations.

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated no fiscal impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated no impact on their agency.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated this initiative petition has no impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated this petition, if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated this proposal creates no direct obligations or requirements to their department that would result in a fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated this proposal could potentially fiscally impact their department however, at this time, there is no way to estimate said impact.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated:

This petition would amend provisions relating to the accumulation of sick time required for employees depending on how many employees are employed by the employer. It also has various requirements regarding how sick time can be used and procedures employers must use. Violations are deemed misdemeanors, and damages are allowed to be awarded in civil suits. It states that the DOLIR "may" create new notices, promulgate rules, and initiate outreach programs but that the DOLIR is not required to create notices if it requires the appropriation of funds. It also states that the DOLIR may inspect employment records and investigate complaints of noncompliance. Still, such inspection is not required if it requires the appropriation of funds, and the cost estimate would be zero.

The funding source will be from General Revenue if the DOLIR receives complaints to enforce it. Therefore the DOLIR estimates it would need two Regulatory Auditors and one Administrative Support Assistant person at an annual ongoing cost of $255,975 by 2027, plus an initial information technology (IT) component of $28,318 and office equipment of $25,011.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety indicated no impact for their department, Director's office.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated no impact anticipated by their department.

Officials from the Governor's Office indicated this proposal relating to employee leave does not financially impact their office as the proposal excludes government entities.

Officials from the House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact, as the state is not included in the definition of an employer.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated because this initiative petition exempts the state, any agency or commission of the state, etc., from the definition of employer, their department does not anticipate any fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated this initiative petition excludes the state from the requirements of the proposed new law. Therefore there is no anticipated fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to employee leave does not financially impact their office due to an exemption for government entities in the initiative petition.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated there is no fiscal impact on the courts.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In fiscal year (FY) 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. Their office estimates $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated the proposed initiative petition creates a new offense under section 290.624 which could result in additional cases eligible for State Public Defender (SPD) representation. The number of additional cases is unknown and as a result the fiscal impact is unknown. However, if the offenses, which are classified as misdemeanors, were class D misdemeanors, jail time would not be a possible sentence and the offense therefore would not be eligible for SPD representation.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no fiscal impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated this petition does not apply to county governments under Section 6 for the definition of an employer. Clay County provides more generous sick leave than this measure as well.

They do estimate additional costs from this petition of $2,000 a year between the Circuit Court and Prosecutor to enforce the misdemeanor and civil action provisions.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county for this initiative petition proposing to amend Chapter 290, RSMo.

Officials from St. Louis County indicated this initiative petition has no apparent fiscal impact on their county.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this has no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact to their college.

Officials from St. Louis Community College indicated their college appears to offer benefits that exceed the petition and therefore they do not see a cost or cost savings with regard to the petition.

Officials from the Missouri Lottery indicated no fiscal impact to their agency.

Officials from the State Tax Commission indicated this initiative petition will not have a fiscal impact on their agency.

Officials from the Missouri Veterans Commission indicated this initiative petition creates no fiscal impact to their Commission. The definition of the term "employer" in the proposed section 290.600(6) specifically excludes the state and its agencies, so the requirements of the petition would not apply to the Commission.

Officials from the Missouri Ethics Commission indicated this initiative petition does not have fiscal impact on their Commission.

Officials from the Kansas Board of Police Commissioners indicated they are exempt as a political subdivision of the state.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated they predict no fiscal impact from this petition.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated this petition has no fiscal impact to their board.

Officials from the Children's Trust Fund indicated no impact.

Officials from the State Auditor's office indicated since this proposed initiative petition does not apply to government entities, this would have no fiscal impact on their office.

Lindsey Baker, Research Director, Missouri Budget Project indicated in summary, they estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state and local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue and decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy. She also provided the following information:

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Earned Sick Leave Petitions 24-025-042

We estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state & local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy.

In addition to helping employees by allowing them to address their health needs without losing their jobs or ability to pay their bills, paid sick leave has many benefits for employers, including a healthier workforce, reduced turnover, and increased productivity. The benefits of paid sick leave have been highlighted by the COVID-19 pandemic, illustrating the importance of workers being able to recover at home without lost wages and without risking spread of contagious disease in the workplace.

Several ballot measures have been filed (24-025-042) that would require employers to provide earned sick leave in Missouri. Though the measures vary slightly, each would require employers to provide a minimum of 3-7 days of paid leave to employees, depending on hours worked and size of business. If implemented, Missouri would join the seventeen states, plus the District of Columbia, who ensure employees can earn paid sick leave to care for themselves or family members.ⁱ

An estimated 211,000 Missourians and their families would benefit from the earned sick time provided through these initiatives, with low-wage workers disproportionately likely to benefit from this policy.ⁱⁱ Expanding earned sick leave in Missouri is estimated to provide a net savings to society of between $612.4-$774.1 million annually depending on the number of days provided.ⁱⁱⁱ

	3-5 Scenario*	5-7 Scenario*
Estimated Cost Savings	$1.26B	$1.29B
- Employment Related Savings	$436.73M	$466.6M
- Health Related Savings	$825.61M	$825.61M
Estimated Costs (Employer & State Admin)	$488.22M	$679.77M
Estimated Net Societal Benefit*	$774.11M	$612.44M

In the 3/5 scenario, small employers are required to offer at least three days of leave and large employers at least five days. The 5/7 scenario requires small employers to offer at least five days of paid sick leave and large employers to offer at least seven days of paid leave. A small employer defined as less than 15 employees.*

Societal Cost Savings from Earned Sick Leave in Missouri

Employment Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri's workforce would become stronger, more stable, and more productive leading to economic growth.

- Reduced Absenteeism. Access to earned sick leave allows workers to stay home, reducing the overall spread of illness in the workplace; this leads to fewer illnesses among workers and fewer overall days off work.^{iv}
- Reduced Turnover. Access to earned sick leave gives workers the ability to address their health needs and those of their families, without having to quit a job or risk being fired. Access to paid sick leave is associated with reduced job turnover, which in turn creates significant savings for businesses.^v
- Reduced Presenteeism. Employers who do not offer paid sick leave have higher rates of "presenteeism" or lost productivity due to employees working while injured or sick.^{vi} Offering paid sick leave reduces the likelihood of working at reduced capacity and allows workers to recover from illness or injury more quickly.

Health Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri would become a healthier state as workers would have the ability to care for themselves and their families, while simultaneously benefiting their communities.

- Reduced Flu Contagion in Society. Workers without paid sick leave are more likely to come to work sick, increasing the likelihood of spreading the illness.^{vii} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to stay home when ill, thus reducing the overall spread of influenza throughout the community.
- Reduced Workers Compensation Costs. Workers with access to paid leave are less likely to be injured on the job,^{viii} reducing overall workers comp claims and cost to employers.
- Reduced ER Visits. Paid sick leave is associated with fewer trips to the emergency room.^{ix} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to properly care for themselves and family members during an illness, preventing an escalation of the illness.
- Improved Nursing Home Care. Unpaid sick leave is especially problematic in nursing homes as the residents are especially vulnerable to the consequences of high turnover, absenteeism and presenteeism.^x Access to paid sick leave allows nursing home workers to take care of themselves so that they can better care for residents.

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Petitions 24-025-042

While previous estimates show a cost associated with state level administration and enforcement for earned sick leave of approximately $1 million, we also expect that earned sick leave will be associated with a significant potential for increased revenue collections & decreased spending on services associated with the cost savings outlined above.

- Increased revenue collections. A stronger and more productive workforce is associated with economic growth. Economic growth is in turn associated with growth in both state and local revenue as both sales & income tax collections rise due to increased spending and wages.
- Reductions in spending on services. When workers are able to care for themselves and their families (and others in their community) they are less likely to have minor illnesses escalate into costly health problems. This reduces the overall cost of health care, particularly among low-wage workers who are disproportionately likely to lack access to paid leave. This in turn reduces state and local spending on health other related public services.

As a result, we estimate the fiscal impact on state & local revenue of earned sick leave will be minimal as the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will offset the modest expenses associated with state level administration. While we are confident that a net savings will be realized, the size of the savings is too speculative to estimate exact fiscal impact.

Re: Proposal Related to Chapter 290, RSMo, Petition 2024-025-042

Dear Auditor Fitzpatrick:

A Better Balance is writing to submit our fact sheet titled "Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business" to accompany petition 24-025-042 and to inform the fiscal note process. We thank you for considering our submission.

A Better Balance, a national nonprofit advocacy organization with four regional offices, uses the power of the law to ensure that working individuals can care for themselves and their loved ones without jeopardizing their economic security. Through legislative advocacy, policy, direct legal services, strategic litigation, and public education, our organization works around the country to advance policies like paid sick leave, paid family and medical leave, quality childcare and eldercare, and anti-discrimination protections for pregnant workers and caregivers. From Arizona and Colorado to Duluth (MN) and beyond, our organization has worked on the growing number of paid sick leave laws now in effect.

The enclosed fact sheet summarizes research and data on the resoundingly positive effect that paid sick leave has on business. When paid sick leave policies are in place, businesses financially benefit from increased worker productivity, reduced spread of contagious illness in the workplace, and lower employee turnover. Research has also underscored that workers and the larger community also have better health outcomes overall when there is access to paid sick leave. As documented in the attached fact sheet, paid sick leave has been shown to work well for businesses and workers throughout the country.

Thank you for giving us the opportunity to submit this information. Please do not hesitate to contact A Better Balance at cgomez@abetterbalance.org if we can provide any additional assistance.

Sincerely,
A Better Balance

Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business

The research is clear: paid sick leave isn't just good for workers, it's good for business as well. Healthy workers are essential to a successful business and a strong economy. When workers have access to paid sick leave, they demonstrate increased job satisfaction, commitment, and morale, while employers—and their bottom lines—reap the benefits of increased worker performance and productivity and reduced worker turnover. And access to guaranteed paid sick leave is a vital component to keeping businesses open and safe through the COVID-19 pandemic and beyond.

Access to paid sick leave increases worker productivity and reduces the spread of contagious illness in the workplace, leading to direct savings for businesses.

- Workers with minor illnesses are less productive than their healthy co-workers.¹ Paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (when employees show up to work while sick), which costs businesses approximately $207.6 billion annually in reduced productivity.² After Washington State implemented its paid sick leave law, for example, the percentage of workers that went to work while sick decreased significantly.³
- Paid sick leave also reduces the spread of contagion between co-workers—further increasing productivity and labor in the workplace.⁴ Absenteeism caused by the introduction of flu-like illness in the workplace is estimated to cost employers up to 111 million workdays per year.⁵ Even before the pandemic, states with paid sick leave requirements saw a 40% decrease in influenza rates.⁶

Paid sick leave has proven to be particularly crucial to keeping businesses open during the COVID-19 pandemic.

- As the country with the highest cumulative number of COVID-19 cases,⁷ and the only one of the thirteen G12 countries with no paid sick leave,⁸ it is undeniable that the U.S. will need paid sick leave to end this crisis, to save lives, and to minimize disruption to businesses struggling to avoid the spread of COVID-19 in the workplace.
- Paid sick leave has been critical to keeping businesses open throughout the pandemic. One study found that states in which workers gained temporary access to paid sick leave through the federal Families First Coronavirus Response Act⁹ had around 400 fewer confirmed COVID-19 cases per day as a result.¹⁰

Employers with paid sick leave benefit from reduced worker turnover and better relationships with their employees, saving employers the cost of recruiting, interviewing, and training new hires.

- In general, worker turnover is estimated to cost employers the equivalent of 21% of a worker's annual compensation.¹¹ However, providing paid sick leave only increases labor costs by an average of 2.7 cents per hour worked¹² and workers with paid sick leave are less likely to leave their jobs,¹³ saving businesses money on turnover costs such as interviewing and training.¹⁴

- Paid sick leave also increases worker loyalty and job satisfaction—factors known to increase productivity and job retention.¹⁵ After Connecticut’s paid sick law went into effect, nearly 30% of surveyed employers reported improved employee morale, and over 20% reported increased employee motivation or loyalty.¹⁶
- Two years after paid sick leave went into effect in New York City, one employer reported that “the impact that I saw in my business was a much stronger bond between ourselves and our employees, higher productivity, and a more successful business, not a less successful business.”¹⁷

Paid sick leave also saves employers money by reducing the likelihood of workplace accidents.

- Throughout the country, direct and indirect costs associated with on-the-job injuries cost employers billions of dollars.¹⁸ Workers with paid sick leave are 28% less likely than workers without access to paid sick leave to be injured on the job.¹⁹

Lack of paid sick leave makes workers more likely to go to work while sick and puts co-workers and our communities at risk. With paid sick leave, our workplaces and communities are healthier, which improves the bottom line for employers.

- Access to sick leave will be essential to overcoming the COVID-19 pandemic, as evidenced by previous pandemics. For example, it is estimated that the lack of paid sick leave was responsible for 5 million incidents of flu-like illness during the H1N1 pandemic.²⁰
- In a simulated influenza epidemic, 72% of employees who caught the flu at work did so because of exposure to other employees attending work while sick; paid sick days would reduce flu incidences among workers by approximately 6% across all workplaces, and by over 7% in workplaces with 49 or fewer employees.²¹
- As explained above, access to paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (employees showing up to work while sick) and reduces overall contagion.²² Presenteeism is linked to the spread of harmful contagions to co-workers and customers.²³
- A study of data from the 2009 flu outbreak found that workers with paid sick leave were 30 percent more likely to be vaccinated and were more likely to seek treatment when they were sick with flu-like symptoms compared to those without paid sick leave.²⁴ This has proven true for COVID-19 as well—in June 2021, workers whose employers provided paid time off to get the vaccine or recover from any side effects were 24% more likely to have received at least one dose of the vaccine than workers whose employers provided no paid vaccine leave.²⁵
- A lack of access to paid sick days is particularly harmful for service industry workers. Nearly two-thirds of restaurant workers have cooked or served food while sick,²⁶ and in 2011, nearly one in five food service workers went to work vomiting or with diarrhea, creating dangerous health conditions.²⁷

- People without access to paid sick leave are 1.5x more likely to go to work while they have a contagious illness and are nearly twice as likely to send a sick child to school or daycare than those with access to it.²⁸
- States that have implemented paid sick leave laws had an 11% decrease of cases of flu-like illnesses in their first year after enactment.²⁹

Workers with paid sick leave are more likely to seek preventative care than workers without paid sick leave, leading to better health outcomes and less time away from work.

- People without paid sick days tend to be unable to make time for preventative health care, such as cancer screenings and flu shots, which makes it more likely that such workers will have more significant healthcare needs at later stages of an illness.³⁰
- Workers with access to paid sick days report better general health than workers without paid sick days and are less likely to delay preventive medical care for themselves or for their family.³¹

Paid sick leave has proven to work well for businesses all over the U.S., and experience shows that workers don't abuse paid sick leave.

- Business practices don't have to change to keep up with paid sick leave laws. In a survey of New York City employers after the city's paid sick law was implemented, 91% of employers reported no reduction in hiring, 97% indicated they did not reduce hours, about 94% did not raise prices, and nearly 85% of employers reported no change in their overall business costs.³²
 - In a similar survey of employers in Connecticut a year and a half after the state's paid sick law went into effect, nearly 90% of employers reported no reduction in hours, and about 85% did not raise prices.³³
- Paid sick leave laws stimulate economic growth. When San Francisco's paid sick law went into effect in 2007, the city's job growth actually exceeded that of nearby counties, despite unfounded fears that the law would cause an economic slowdown.³⁴
 - In comparison to other surrounding cities, Seattle saw greater increases in the number of employers in the city when its paid sick leave law was implemented,³⁵ and in general, job growth continued on an upward trend.³⁶
 - After New York City's paid sick days were implemented, the average wage for hourly workers increased and the average number of weekly absences declined.³⁷ On the law's first anniversary, the New York City government released a report touting its successful implementation and noting that since the law went into effect, "the city has had steady job growth and the lowest unemployment in six years."³⁸
- Workers don't abuse paid sick leave. After New York implemented its paid sick leave law, 98% of employers reported no cases of employee abuse of sick days.³⁹

- Employers know that paid sick leave laws work. Two years after New York City’s paid sick law was implemented, a staggering 86% of New York City employers polled supported the law.⁴⁰
- Studies in Washington, D.C. and Seattle also saw no negative economic effects following implementation of their paid sick leave laws in either job loss or movement of businesses out of the city. A report from the Washington D.C. Auditor, issued five years after passage of the District’s sick leave law, found that the law “did not have the economic impact of encouraging business owners to move a business from the District nor did the [law] have the economic impact of discouraging business owners to locate a business in the District of Columbia.”⁴¹ Likewise, a study of the economic impact of Seattle’s sick leave law found that a “preliminary look at available data shows no widespread negative economic impact as some opponents of the ordinance feared.”⁴²
- Recognizing the benefits of paid sick leave, San Francisco, Washington, D.C., and New York City—all among the earliest adopters of paid sick leave laws—later expanded their paid sick leave laws, underscoring how well these laws are working for workers, employers, and communities.

(11) “Same hourly rate”, means the following:

(A) For employees paid on the basis of a single hourly rate, the same hourly rate shall be the employee’s regular hourly rate.

(B) For employees who are paid multiple hourly rates of pay from the same employer, the same hourly rate shall be either:

(i) the wages the employee would have been paid for the hours absent during use of earned paid sick time if the employee had worked; or,

(ii) the weighted average of all hourly rates of pay during the previous pay period.

Whatever method the employer uses, the employer must use a consistent method for each employee throughout a year.

(C) For employees who are paid a salary, the same hourly rate shall be determined by dividing the wages the employee earns in the previous pay period by the total number of hours worked during the previous pay period. For determining total number of hours worked during the previous pay period, employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1), the Fair Labor Standards Act, shall be assumed to work 40 hours in each work week unless their normal work week is less than 40 hours, in which case earned paid sick time shall accrue and the same hourly rate shall be calculated based on the employee’s normal work week. Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(D) For employees paid on a piece rate or a fee-for-service basis, the same hourly rate shall be a reasonable calculation of the wages or fees the employee would have received for the piece work, service, or part thereof, if the employee had worked. Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(E) For employees who are paid on a commission basis (whether base wage plus commission or commission only), the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the base wage or the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(F) For employees who receive and retain compensation in the form of gratuities in addition to wages, the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the employee’s regular hourly rate or 100% of the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502 without deduction of any tips as a credit.

(12) “Sexual assault”, as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(13) “Stalking”, as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(14) “Year”, a regular and consecutive twelve-month period as determined by the employer; except that for the purposes of section 290.615 and section 290.627, “year” shall mean a calendar year.

290.603. 1. Employees of an employer with fifteen or more employees shall accrue a minimum of one hour of earned paid sick time for every thirty hours worked, but such employees shall not be entitled to use more than forty hours of earned paid sick time per year, unless the employer selects a higher limit.

2. Employees of an employer with fewer than fifteen employees shall accrue a minimum of one hour of earned paid sick time for every thirty hours worked, but such employees shall not be entitled to use more than twenty-four hours of earned paid sick time per year, unless the employer selects a higher limit.

3. In determining the number of employees of an employer, all employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation on a full-time, part-time, or temporary basis shall be counted. In situations in which the number of employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation per week fluctuates above and below 15 employees per week over the course of a year, an employer is required to provide earned paid sick time pursuant to subsection (1) of this section if it maintained fifteen or more employees in the state on the payroll for some portion of a working day in each of twenty or more different calendar weeks, including any periods of leave, and whether or not the weeks were consecutive, in either the current or the preceding year (irrespective of whether the same individuals were in employment in each working day).

4. All employees shall accrue earned paid sick time as follows:

(A) Earned paid sick time as provided in this section shall begin to accrue at the commencement of employment or May 1, 2025, whichever is later. An employee shall be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued. An employer may provide all earned paid sick time that an employee is expected to accrue in a year at the beginning of the year.

(B) Employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1) of the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act will be assumed to work forty hours in each work week for purposes of earned paid sick time accrual unless their normal work week is less than forty hours, in which case earned paid sick time accrues based upon that normal work week.

(C) Up to 80 hours of earned paid sick time shall be carried over to the following year if the employee has any unused accrued earned paid sick time at the end of the year, but this law does not require an employer to permit an employee to use more than the applicable number of hours of earned paid sick time per year as set forth in subsection (1) and (2) of this section. Alternatively, in lieu of carryover of unused earned paid sick time from one year to the next, an employer may pay an employee for unused earned paid sick time at the end of a year which could be carried over and provide the employee with an amount of paid sick time that meets or exceeds the requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that is available for the employee's immediate use at the beginning of the subsequent year.

(D) If an employee is transferred to a separate division, entity, or location, but remains employed by the same employer, the employee is entitled to all earned paid sick time accrued at the prior division, entity, or location and is entitled to use all earned paid sick time as provided in this section. When there is a separation from employment and the employee is rehired within nine months of separation by the same employer, previously accrued earned paid sick time that had not been used shall be reinstated. Further, the employee shall be entitled to use accrued earned paid sick time and accrue additional earned paid sick time at the re-commencement of employment.

(E) When a different employer succeeds or takes the place of an existing employer, all employees of the original employer who remain employed by the successor employer are entitled to all earned paid sick time they accrued when employed by the original employer, and are entitled to use earned paid sick time previously accrued.

(F) At its discretion, an employer may loan earned paid sick time to an employee in advance of accrual by such employee.

5. Any employer with a paid leave policy, such as a paid time off policy, who makes available an amount of paid leave sufficient to meet the accrual requirements of this section that may be used for the same purposes and under the same conditions as earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642 is not required to provide additional paid sick time under this section.

6. Except as specifically provided in this section, nothing in this section shall be construed as requiring financial or other reimbursement to an employee from an employer upon the employee's termination, resignation, retirement, or other separation from employment for accrued earned paid sick time that has not been used.

7. Employees shall not accrue earned paid sick time before May 1, 2025. Employees who are employed or who commence employment on or after May 1, 2025 shall accrue earned paid sick time and be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued in accordance with sections 290.600 through 290.642. The Department may develop model posters and notices, engage in rule-making, initiate outreach programs, and engage in other activities for implementation of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 as authorized by those sections before May 1, 2025.

290.606. 1. Earned paid sick time shall be provided to an employee by an employer for:

(A) An employee's mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for preventative medical care;

(B) Care of a family member with a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs preventative medical care;

(C) Closure of the employee's place of business by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or an employee's need to care for a child whose school or place of care has been closed by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or care for oneself or a family member when it has been determined by the health authorities having jurisdiction or by a health care provider that the employee's or family member's presence in the community may jeopardize the health of others because of his or her exposure to a communicable disease, whether or not the employee or family member has actually contracted the communicable disease; or

(D) Absence necessary due to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, provided the leave is to allow the employee to obtain for the employee or the employee's family member:

(i) Medical attention needed to recover from physical or psychological injury or disability caused by domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking;

(ii) Services from a victim services organization;

(iii) Psychological or other counseling;

(iv) Relocation or taking steps to secure an existing home due to the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or

(v) Legal services, including preparing for or participating in any civil or criminal legal proceeding related to or resulting from the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking.

2. Earned paid sick time shall be provided upon the request of an employee. Such request may be made orally, in writing, by electronic means, or by any other means acceptable to the employer. When possible, the request shall include the expected duration of the absence.

3. When the use of earned paid sick time is foreseeable, the employee shall make a good faith effort to provide notice of the need for such time to the employer in advance of the use of the earned paid sick time and shall make a reasonable effort to schedule the use of earned paid sick time in a manner that does not unduly disrupt the operations of the employer. Where such need is not foreseeable, an employer may require an employee to provide notice of the need for the use of earned paid sick time as soon as practicable.

4. An employer that requires notice of the need to use earned paid sick time where the need is not foreseeable shall provide a written policy that contains procedures for the employee to provide notice. An employer that has not provided to the employee a copy of its written policy for providing such notice shall not deny earned paid sick time to the employee based on non-compliance with such a policy.

5. An employer may not require, as a condition of an employee's taking earned paid sick time, that the employee search for or find a replacement worker to cover the hours during which the employee is using earned paid sick time.

6. Earned paid sick time may be used in the smaller of hourly increments or the smallest increment that the employer's payroll system uses to account for absences or use of other time.

7. For earned paid sick time of three or more consecutive work days, an employer may require reasonable documentation that the earned paid sick time has been used for a purpose covered by subsection (1) of this section.

(A) Documentation signed by a health care professional indicating that earned paid sick time is necessary shall be considered reasonable documentation for purposes of this section.

(B) In cases of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, if the employer requests, one of the following types of documentation selected by the employee shall be considered reasonable documentation: (i) a police report indicating that the employee or the employee's family member was a victim of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; (ii) a written statement from an employee or agent of a victim service provider affirming that the employee or employee's family member is or was receiving services from a victim service provider; (iii) documentation signed by a health care professional from whom the employee or employee's family member sought assistance relating to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking or the effects thereof; (vi) a court document indicating that an employee or employee's family member is or was involved in a legal action related to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or (v) a written statement from the employee affirming that the employee or employee's family member is taking or took earned paid sick time for a qualifying purpose of subsection (1) of this section.

(C) An employer may not require that the documentation explain the nature of the illness, details of the underlying health needs, or the details of the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, unless otherwise required by law.

290.609. 1. It shall be unlawful for an employer or any other person to interfere with, restrain, or deny the exercise of, or the attempt to exercise, any right protected under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. An employer shall not take retaliatory personnel action or discriminate against an employee or former employee because the individual has exercised rights protected under sections 290.600 through 290.642. Such rights include, but are not limited to, the right to request or use earned paid sick time pursuant to sections 290.600 through 290.642; the right to file a complaint or inform any person about any employer's alleged violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642; the right to participate in any investigation, hearing, or proceeding or cooperate with or assist the Department in any investigations of alleged violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642; and the right to inform any person of his or her potential rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. It shall be unlawful for an employer's absence control policy to count earned paid sick time taken under sections 290.600 through 290.642 as an absence that may lead to or result in discipline, discharge, demotion, suspension, or any other adverse action.

4. Protections of this section shall apply to any individual who mistakenly but in good faith alleges violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

290.612. 1. Employers shall give employees a written notice about earned paid sick time within fourteen calendar days of the commencement of employment or on April 15, 2025, whichever is later, which must include the following information: (1) beginning May 1, 2025, employees accrue and are entitled to earned paid sick time at the rate one hour of earned paid sick time for every 30 hours of work, and may use earned paid sick time, subject to the limits and terms under sections 290.600 through 290.642 of Missouri law, (2) it is prohibited for an employer to take retaliatory personnel action against employees who request or use earned paid sick time as allowed by law, (3) each employee has the right to bring a civil action if earned paid sick time as required by sections 290.600 through 290.642 is denied by the employer or the employee is subjected to retaliatory personnel action by the employer for exercising the employee's rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642; and, (4) the contact information for the Department. Notice shall be provided by the Employer to the employee on a single piece of paper, at least 8.5 x 11, in no less than 14-point font.

2. Beginning April 15, 2025, employers shall display a poster that contains the information required in subsection (1) of this section in a conspicuous and accessible place in each establishment where such employees are employed, provided that such poster has been made available by the Department.

3. The Department may create and make available to employers, model notices and posters that contain the information required under subsection (1) of this section for employers' use in complying with subsections (1) and (2) of this section. Nothing in this subsection shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department to create or make available notices or posters if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.615. 1. Employers shall retain records documenting hours worked by employees and earned paid sick time taken by employees, for a period of not less than three years, and shall allow the Department access to such records, with appropriate notice and at a mutually agreeable time, to monitor compliance with the requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. To the extent permitted by law, the Director may inspect such records, and the records shall be open for inspection by the Director by appointment. Where the records required under this section are kept outside the state, the records shall be made available to the Director upon demand. Every such employer shall furnish to the Director on demand a sworn statement of time records and information upon forms prescribed or approved by the Director. All the records and information obtained by the Department are confidential and shall be disclosed only on order of a court of competent jurisdiction.

3. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department or Director to access or inspect records or to create forms relating to the inspection of records if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.618. 1. The Department may, in accordance with chapter 536, promulgate rules for the implementation, enforcement, and administration of sections 290.600 through 290.642. Any rule or portion of a rule, as that term is defined in section 536.010, that is created under the authority delegated in this section shall become effective only if it complies with and is subject to all of the provisions of chapter 536 and, if applicable, section 536.028. This section and chapter 536 are nonseverable and if any of the powers vested with the general assembly pursuant to chapter 536 to review, to delay the effective date, or to disapprove and annul a rule are subsequently held unconstitutional, then the grant of rulemaking authority and any rule proposed or adopted after November 5, 2024, shall be invalid and void.

290.621. 1. The Department may investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to $500 per day of each day of a continuing violation. A final decision of the department is subject to review in accordance with the provisions of chapter 536.

2. The Department may develop and implement an outreach program to inform employees, parents, and persons who are under the care of a health care provider about the availability of earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642. This program may include the distribution of notices and other written materials to child care and elder care providers, domestic violence shelters, schools, hospitals, community health centers and other health care providers in Missouri.

3. A municipality, county, city, town, or village may adopt ordinances, rules, and regulations to investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, with respect to employers within, or employees performing work while physically present in, the geographic boundaries of the municipality, county, city, town, or village. Any such ordinance, rule, or regulation shall be consistent with this law and any Department rules or regulations and system for compliance and enforcement. The municipality, county, city, town, or village may exercise such powers as allowed by any applicable charter or ordinance, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to the maximum allowed for an ordinance violation. Before investigating or seeking to resolve any complaint between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall give notice to the Department with a copy of the complaint and, within 14 days of such notice, the Department may intervene as of right and participate in the matter to ensure that the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642 or, alternatively, the Department may institute its own proceedings in which case the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall refrain from acting on the matter so long as the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642. If the Department does not, within 14 days, intervene or instigate its own proceedings, the municipality, county, city, town, or village may, without the Department, investigate and attempt to resolve the complaint and take other additional means within its power to enforce sections 290.600 through 290.642 against the subject of the complaint. In no event shall an employer be subject to compliance proceedings arising out of a single set of facts after having already been subjected to a final compliance order by another governmental entity.

4. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department, a municipality, county, city, town, or village to conduct investigations and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, to establish and implement a system to receive or resolve complaints, to establish additional means of enforcement, or to conduct outreach and education, including the creation of notices and other written materials, concerning sections 290.600 through 290.642, if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.624. 1. Any employer who willfully violates or fails to comply with any of the provisions and requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be guilty of a class C misdemeanor; provided, however, that an employer who willfully violates the notice and posting requirements of section 290.612 shall be guilty of an infraction.

2. For purposes of this section, each day of violation or failure to comply and each employee affected shall constitute a separate offense.

290.627. 1. Any individual who claims to have been aggrieved by a failure of an employer to comply with any portion of sections 290.600 through 290.642, including but not limited to the failure to provide earned paid sick time or to allow employees to use such time consistent with sections 290.600 through 290.642, or who claims to have suffered a retaliatory personnel action, shall have a right of action and may commence a civil action in the appropriate court of jurisdiction within three years of the accrual of the cause of action, to obtain appropriate relief with respect to such unlawful violation. Such action may be brought without first filing an administrative complaint.

2. In a civil action under this section, if the court finds a violation has occurred, the court may grant as relief, as it deems appropriate and to the extent permitted by law, any permanent or temporary injunction, the full amount of any unpaid earned sick time plus any actual damages suffered as the result of the employer's violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642, an additional amount equal to twice any unpaid earned sick time as liquidated damages, costs, and reasonable attorney's fees as may be allowed by the court, and other legal or equitable relief as may be appropriate to remedy the violation, including, without limitation, reinstatement to employment and back pay.

290.630. 1. Except as otherwise required by law, an employer may not require disclosure of details relating to an employee's or an employee's family member's health information, domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking as a condition of providing earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. Unless as otherwise required by law, any health or safety information possessed by an employer regarding an employee or employee's family member must:

(A) be maintained on a separate form and in a separate file from other personnel information;

(B) be treated as confidential medical records; and

(C) not be disclosed except to the affected employee or with the express written permission of the affected employee.

290.633. 1. With respect to employees covered by a valid collective bargaining agreement in effect on November 5, 2024, no provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply until the stated expiration date in the collective bargaining agreement; however, further the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply upon any such agreement's renewal, extension, amendment, or modification in any respect after November 5, 2024.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed to interfere, impede, or otherwise diminish the right of employees to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing in order to establish earned paid sick time or other conditions of work in excess of the applicable minimum standards under the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. Any waiver by an employee of rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed contrary to public policy and shall be void.

290.636. 1. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed to discourage or prohibit an employer from the adoption or retention of an earned paid sick time policy more generous than the one required herein.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed as diminishing the obligation of an employer to comply with any contract, collective bargaining agreement, employment benefit plan, or other agreement providing more generous paid sick time to an employee than required herein. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed as diminishing the rights of public employees regarding paid sick time or use of paid sick time as provided in the laws of Missouri and ordinances of political subdivisions pertaining to public employees.

290.639. 1. Sections 290.600 through 290.642 provide minimum requirements pertaining to earned paid sick time and shall not be construed to preempt, limit, or otherwise affect the applicability of any other law, regulation, requirement, policy, or standard that provides for greater accrual or use by employees of earned paid sick time or that extends other protections to employees.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be interpreted or applied to create a power or obligation contrary to any federal law, rule, or regulation.

290.642. Except as detailed in section 290.618, all of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are severable, and if any provision, including any section, subsection, subdivision, paragraph, sentence, or clause, or the application thereof to any person or circumstance, is found by a court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted, such decision shall not affect other provisions or applications of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that can be given effect without the invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted provision or application, and to this end the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are declared severable.

Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, their office could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. However, if the enactment of this proposal were to result in substantial additional litigation, their office may be required to request additional appropriations.

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated no fiscal impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated no impact on their agency.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated this initiative petition has no impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated this petition, if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated this proposal creates no direct obligations or requirements to their department that would result in a fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated this proposal could potentially fiscally impact their department however, at this time, there is no way to estimate said impact.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated:

This petition would amend provisions relating to the accumulation of sick time required for employees depending on how many employees are employed by the employer. It also has various requirements regarding how sick time can be used and procedures employers must use. Violations are deemed misdemeanors, and damages are allowed to be awarded in civil suits. It states that the DOLIR "may" create new notices, promulgate rules, and initiate outreach programs but that the DOLIR is not required to create notices if it requires the appropriation of funds. It also states that the DOLIR may inspect employment records and investigate complaints of noncompliance. Still, such inspection is not required if it requires the appropriation of funds, and the cost estimate would be zero.

The funding source will be from General Revenue if the DOLIR receives complaints to enforce it. Therefore the DOLIR estimates it would need two Regulatory Auditors and one Administrative Support Assistant person at an annual ongoing cost of $255,975 by 2027, plus an initial information technology (IT) component of $28,318 and office equipment of $25,011.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety indicated no impact for their department, Director's office.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated no impact anticipated by their department.

Officials from the Governor's Office indicated this proposal relating to employee leave does not financially impact their office as the proposal excludes government entities.

Officials from the House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact, as the state is not included in the definition of an employer.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated because this initiative petition exempts the state, any agency or commission of the state, etc., from the definition of employer, their department does not anticipate any fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated this initiative petition excludes the state from the requirements of the proposed new law. Therefore there is no anticipated fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to employee leave does not financially impact their office due to an exemption for government entities in the initiative petition.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated there is no fiscal impact on the courts.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In fiscal year (FY) 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. Their office estimates $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated the proposed initiative petition creates a new offense under section 290.624 which could result in additional cases eligible for State Public Defender (SPD) representation. The number of additional cases is unknown and as a result the fiscal impact is unknown. However, if the offenses, which are classified as misdemeanors, were class D misdemeanors, jail time would not be a possible sentence and the offense therefore would not be eligible for SPD representation.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no fiscal impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated this petition does not apply to county governments under Section 6 for the definition of an employer. Clay County provides more generous sick leave than this measure as well.

They do estimate additional costs from this petition of $2,000 a year between the Circuit Court and Prosecutor to enforce the misdemeanor and civil action provisions.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county for this initiative petition proposing to amend Chapter 290, RSMo.

Officials from St. Louis County indicated this initiative petition has no apparent fiscal impact on their county.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this would have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact to their college.

Officials from St. Louis Community College indicated their college appears to offer benefits that exceed the petition and therefore they do not see a cost or cost savings with regard to the petition.

Officials from the Missouri Lottery indicated no fiscal impact to their agency.

Officials from the State Tax Commission indicated this initiative petition will not have a fiscal impact on their agency.

Officials from the Missouri Veterans Commission indicated this initiative petition creates no fiscal impact to their Commission. The definition of the term "employer" in the proposed section 290.600(6) specifically excludes the state and its agencies, so the requirements of the petition would not apply to the Commission.

Officials from the Missouri Ethics Commission indicated this initiative petition does not have fiscal impact on their Commission.

Officials from the Kansas Board of Police Commissioners indicated they are exempt as a political subdivision of the state.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated they predict no fiscal impact from this petition.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated this petition has no fiscal impact to their board.

Officials from the Children's Trust Fund indicated no impact.

Officials from the State Auditor's office indicated since this proposed initiative petition does not apply to government entities, this would have no fiscal impact on their office.

Lindsey Baker, Research Director, Missouri Budget Project indicated in summary, they estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state and local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue and decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy. She also provided the following information:

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Earned Sick Leave Petitions 24-025-042

We estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state & local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy.

In addition to helping employees by allowing them to address their health needs without losing their jobs or ability to pay their bills, paid sick leave has many benefits for employers, including a healthier workforce, reduced turnover, and increased productivity. The benefits of paid sick leave have been highlighted by the COVID-19 pandemic, illustrating the importance of workers being able to recover at home without lost wages and without risking spread of contagious disease in the workplace.

Several ballot measures have been filed (24-025-042) that would require employers to provide earned sick leave in Missouri. Though the measures vary slightly, each would require employers to provide a minimum of 3-7 days of paid leave to employees, depending on hours worked and size of business. If implemented, Missouri would join the seventeen states, plus the District of Columbia, who ensure employees can earn paid sick leave to care for themselves or family members.ⁱ

An estimated 211,000 Missourians and their families would benefit from the earned sick time provided through these initiatives, with low-wage workers disproportionately likely to benefit from this policy.ⁱⁱ Expanding earned sick leave in Missouri is estimated to provide a net savings to society of between $612.4-$774.1 million annually depending on the number of days provided.ⁱⁱⁱ

Estimated Cost Savings	$1.26B	$1.29B
- Employment Related Savings	$436.73M	$466.6M

In the 3/5 scenario, small employers are required to offer at least three days of leave and large employers at least five days. The 5/7 scenario requires small employers to offer at least five days of paid sick leave and large employers to offer at least seven days of paid leave. A small employer defined as less than 15 employees.*

Societal Cost Savings from Earned Sick Leave in Missouri

Employment Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri's workforce would become stronger, more stable, and more productive leading to economic growth.

- Reduced Absenteeism. Access to earned sick leave allows workers to stay home, reducing the overall spread of illness in the workplace; this leads to fewer illnesses among workers and fewer overall days off work.^{iv}
- Reduced Turnover. Access to earned sick leave gives workers the ability to address their health needs and those of their families, without having to quit a job or risk being fired. Access to paid sick leave is associated with reduced job turnover, which in turn creates significant savings for businesses.^v
- Reduced Presenteeism. Employers who do not offer paid sick leave have higher rates of "presenteeism" or lost productivity due to employees working while injured or sick.^{vi} Offering paid sick leave reduces the likelihood of working at reduced capacity and allows workers to recover from illness or injury more quickly.

Health Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri would become a healthier state as workers would have the ability to care for themselves and their families, while simultaneously benefiting their communities.

- Reduced Flu Contagion in Society. Workers without paid sick leave are more likely to come to work sick, increasing the likelihood of spreading the illness.^{vii} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to stay home when ill, thus reducing the overall spread of influenza throughout the community.
- Reduced Workers Compensation Costs. Workers with access to paid leave are less likely to be injured on the job,^{viii} reducing overall workers comp claims and cost to employers.
- Reduced ER Visits. Paid sick leave is associated with fewer trips to the emergency room.^{ix} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to properly care for themselves and family members during an illness, preventing an escalation of the illness.
- Improved Nursing Home Care. Unpaid sick leave is especially problematic in nursing homes as the residents are especially vulnerable to the consequences of high turnover, absenteeism and presenteeism.^x Access to paid sick leave allows nursing home workers to take care of themselves so that they can better care for residents.

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Petitions 24-025-042

While previous estimates show a cost associated with state level administration and enforcement for earned sick leave of approximately $1 million, we also expect that earned sick leave will be associated with a significant potential for increased revenue collections & decreased spending on services associated with the cost savings outlined above.

- Increased revenue collections. A stronger and more productive workforce is associated with economic growth. Economic growth is in turn associated with growth in both state and local revenue as both sales & income tax collections rise due to increased spending and wages.
- Reductions in spending on services. When workers are able to care for themselves and their families (and others in their community) they are less likely to have minor illnesses escalate into costly health problems. This reduces the overall cost of health care, particularly among low-wage workers who are disproportionately likely to lack access to paid leave. This in turn reduces state and local spending on health other related public services.

As a result, we estimate the fiscal impact on state & local revenue of earned sick leave will be minimal as the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will offset the modest expenses associated with state level administration. While we are confident that a net savings will be realized, the size of the savings is too speculative to estimate exact fiscal impact.

Re: Proposal Related to Chapter 290, RSMo, Petition 2024-025-042

Dear Auditor Fitzpatrick:

A Better Balance is writing to submit our fact sheet titled "Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business" to accompany petition 24-025-042 and to inform the fiscal note process. We thank you for considering our submission.

A Better Balance, a national nonprofit advocacy organization with four regional offices, uses the power of the law to ensure that working individuals can care for themselves and their loved ones without jeopardizing their economic security. Through legislative advocacy, policy, direct legal services, strategic litigation, and public education, our organization works around the country to advance policies like paid sick leave, paid family and medical leave, quality childcare and eldercare, and anti-discrimination protections for pregnant workers and caregivers. From Arizona and Colorado to Duluth (MN) and beyond, our organization has worked on the growing number of paid sick leave laws now in effect.

The enclosed fact sheet summarizes research and data on the resoundingly positive effect that paid sick leave has on business. When paid sick leave policies are in place, businesses financially benefit from increased worker productivity, reduced spread of contagious illness in the workplace, and lower employee turnover. Research has also underscored that workers and the larger community also have better health outcomes overall when there is access to paid sick leave. As documented in the attached fact sheet, paid sick leave has been shown to work well for businesses and workers throughout the country.

Thank you for giving us the opportunity to submit this information. Please do not hesitate to contact A Better Balance at cgomez@abetterbalance.org if we can provide any additional assistance.

Sincerely,
A Better Balance

Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business

The research is clear: paid sick leave isn't just good for workers, it's good for business as well. Healthy workers are essential to a successful business and a strong economy. When workers have access to paid sick leave, they demonstrate increased job satisfaction, commitment, and morale, while employers—and their bottom lines—reap the benefits of increased worker performance and productivity and reduced worker turnover. And access to guaranteed paid sick leave is a vital component to keeping businesses open and safe through the COVID-19 pandemic and beyond.

Access to paid sick leave increases worker productivity and reduces the spread of contagious illness in the workplace, leading to direct savings for businesses.

- Workers with minor illnesses are less productive than their healthy co-workers.¹ Paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (when employees show up to work while sick), which costs businesses approximately $207.6 billion annually in reduced productivity.² After Washington State implemented its paid sick leave law, for example, the percentage of workers that went to work while sick decreased significantly.³
- Paid sick leave also reduces the spread of contagion between co-workers—further increasing productivity and labor in the workplace.⁴ Absenteeism caused by the introduction of flu-like illness in the workplace is estimated to cost employers up to 111 million workdays per year.⁵ Even before the pandemic, states with paid sick leave requirements saw a 40% decrease in influenza rates.⁶

Paid sick leave has proven to be particularly crucial to keeping businesses open during the COVID-19 pandemic.

- As the country with the highest cumulative number of COVID-19 cases,⁷ and the only one of the thirteen G12 countries with no paid sick leave,⁸ it is undeniable that the U.S. will need paid sick leave to end this crisis, to save lives, and to minimize disruption to businesses struggling to avoid the spread of COVID-19 in the workplace.
- Paid sick leave has been critical to keeping businesses open throughout the pandemic. One study found that states in which workers gained temporary access to paid sick leave through the federal Families First Coronavirus Response Act⁹ had around 400 fewer confirmed COVID-19 cases per day as a result.¹⁰

Employers with paid sick leave benefit from reduced worker turnover and better relationships with their employees, saving employers the cost of recruiting, interviewing, and training new hires.

- In general, worker turnover is estimated to cost employers the equivalent of 21% of a worker's annual compensation.¹¹ However, providing paid sick leave only increases labor costs by an average of 2.7 cents per hour worked¹² and workers with paid sick leave are less likely to leave their jobs,¹³ saving businesses money on turnover costs such as interviewing and training.¹⁴

- Paid sick leave also increases worker loyalty and job satisfaction—factors known to increase productivity and job retention.¹⁵ After Connecticut’s paid sick law went into effect, nearly 30% of surveyed employers reported improved employee morale, and over 20% reported increased employee motivation or loyalty.¹⁶
- Two years after paid sick leave went into effect in New York City, one employer reported that “the impact that I saw in my business was a much stronger bond between ourselves and our employees, higher productivity, and a more successful business, not a less successful business.”¹⁷

Paid sick leave also saves employers money by reducing the likelihood of workplace accidents.

- Throughout the country, direct and indirect costs associated with on-the-job injuries cost employers billions of dollars.¹⁸ Workers with paid sick leave are 28% less likely than workers without access to paid sick leave to be injured on the job.¹⁹

Lack of paid sick leave makes workers more likely to go to work while sick and puts co-workers and our communities at risk. With paid sick leave, our workplaces and communities are healthier, which improves the bottom line for employers.

- Access to sick leave will be essential to overcoming the COVID-19 pandemic, as evidenced by previous pandemics. For example, it is estimated that the lack of paid sick leave was responsible for 5 million incidents of flu-like illness during the H1N1 pandemic.²⁰
- In a simulated influenza epidemic, 72% of employees who caught the flu at work did so because of exposure to other employees attending work while sick; paid sick days would reduce flu incidences among workers by approximately 6% across all workplaces, and by over 7% in workplaces with 49 or fewer employees.²¹
- As explained above, access to paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (employees showing up to work while sick) and reduces overall contagion.²² Presenteeism is linked to the spread of harmful contagions to co-workers and customers.²³
- A study of data from the 2009 flu outbreak found that workers with paid sick leave were 30 percent more likely to be vaccinated and were more likely to seek treatment when they were sick with flu-like symptoms compared to those without paid sick leave.²⁴ This has proven true for COVID-19 as well—in June 2021, workers whose employers provided paid time off to get the vaccine or recover from any side effects were 24% more likely to have received at least one dose of the vaccine than workers whose employers provided no paid vaccine leave.²⁵
- A lack of access to paid sick days is particularly harmful for service industry workers. Nearly two-thirds of restaurant workers have cooked or served food while sick,²⁶ and in 2011, nearly one in five food service workers went to work vomiting or with diarrhea, creating dangerous health conditions.²⁷

- People without access to paid sick leave are 1.5x more likely to go to work while they have a contagious illness and are nearly twice as likely to send a sick child to school or daycare than those with access to it.²⁸
- States that have implemented paid sick leave laws had an 11% decrease of cases of flu-like illnesses in their first year after enactment.²⁹

Workers with paid sick leave are more likely to seek preventative care than workers without paid sick leave, leading to better health outcomes and less time away from work.

- People without paid sick days tend to be unable to make time for preventative health care, such as cancer screenings and flu shots, which makes it more likely that such workers will have more significant healthcare needs at later stages of an illness.³⁰
- Workers with access to paid sick days report better general health than workers without paid sick days and are less likely to delay preventive medical care for themselves or for their family.³¹

Paid sick leave has proven to work well for businesses all over the U.S., and experience shows that workers don't abuse paid sick leave.

- Business practices don't have to change to keep up with paid sick leave laws. In a survey of New York City employers after the city's paid sick law was implemented, 91% of employers reported no reduction in hiring, 97% indicated they did not reduce hours, about 94% did not raise prices, and nearly 85% of employers reported no change in their overall business costs.³²
 - In a similar survey of employers in Connecticut a year and a half after the state's paid sick law went into effect, nearly 90% of employers reported no reduction in hours, and about 85% did not raise prices.³³
- Paid sick leave laws stimulate economic growth. When San Francisco's paid sick law went into effect in 2007, the city's job growth actually exceeded that of nearby counties, despite unfounded fears that the law would cause an economic slowdown.³⁴
 - In comparison to other surrounding cities, Seattle saw greater increases in the number of employers in the city when its paid sick leave law was implemented,³⁵ and in general, job growth continued on an upward trend.³⁶
 - After New York City's paid sick days were implemented, the average wage for hourly workers increased and the average number of weekly absences declined.³⁷ On the law's first anniversary, the New York City government released a report touting its successful implementation and noting that since the law went into effect, "the city has had steady job growth and the lowest unemployment in six years."³⁸
- Workers don't abuse paid sick leave. After New York implemented its paid sick leave law, 98% of employers reported no cases of employee abuse of sick days.³⁹

- Employers know that paid sick leave laws work. Two years after New York City’s paid sick law was implemented, a staggering 86% of New York City employers polled supported the law.⁴⁰
- Studies in Washington, D.C. and Seattle also saw no negative economic effects following implementation of their paid sick leave laws in either job loss or movement of businesses out of the city. A report from the Washington D.C. Auditor, issued five years after passage of the District’s sick leave law, found that the law “did not have the economic impact of encouraging business owners to move a business from the District nor did the [law] have the economic impact of discouraging business owners to locate a business in the District of Columbia.”⁴¹ Likewise, a study of the economic impact of Seattle’s sick leave law found that a “preliminary look at available data shows no widespread negative economic impact as some opponents of the ordinance feared.”⁴²
- Recognizing the benefits of paid sick leave, San Francisco, Washington, D.C., and New York City—all among the earliest adopters of paid sick leave laws—later expanded their paid sick leave laws, underscoring how well these laws are working for workers, employers, and communities.

Fifteen new sections to be known as sections 290.600, 290.603, 290.606, 290.609, 290.612, 290.615, 290.618, 290.621, 290.624, 290.627, 290.630, 290.633, 290.636, 290.639, and 290.642 are enacted to read as follows:

290.600. As used in sections 290.600 through 290.642:

(3) “Domestic violence”, as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(4) “Earned paid sick time”, time that is compensated at the same hourly rate and with the same benefits, including health care benefits, as the employee normally earns during hours worked and is provided by an employer to an employee for the purposes described in section 290.606, but in no case shall this hourly amount be less than that provided under section 290.502.

(5) “Employee”, any individual employed in this state by an employer, but does not include:

(D) Any individual engaged in the activities of an educational organization where employment by the organization is in lieu of the requirement that the individual pay the cost of tuition, housing or other educational fees of the organization or where earnings of the individual employed by the organization are credited toward the payment of the cost of tuition, housing or other educational fees of the organization;

(E) Any individual employed on or about a private residence on an occasional basis for six hours or less on each occasion;

(H) Any individual employed on a casual or intermittent basis as a golf caddy, newsboy, or in a similar occupation;

(I) Any individual who is employed in any government position defined in 29 U.S.C. §§ 203(e)(2)(C)(i)-(ii);

(J) Any individual employed by a retail or service business whose annual gross volume sales made or business done is less than five hundred thousand dollars;

(K) Any individual who is an offender, as defined in section 217.010, who is incarcerated in any correctional facility operated by the department of corrections, including offenders who provide labor or services on the grounds of such correctional facility pursuant to section 217.550; or,

(L) Any individual described by the provisions of section 29 U.S.C. 213(a)(8).

(6) “Employer”, any person acting directly or indirectly in the interest of an employer in relation to an employee; provided, however, that for the purposes of sections 290.600 through 290.642 “employer” does not include the United States Government, the state, or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, public higher education institution, or other political subdivision of the state.

(7) “Family member”, any of the following individuals:

(A) Regardless of age, a biological, adopted or foster child, stepchild or legal ward, a child of a domestic partner, a child to whom the employee stands in loco parentis, or an individual to whom the employee stood in loco parentis when the individual was a minor;

(B) A biological, foster, stepparent or adoptive parent or legal guardian of an employee or an employee’s spouse or domestic partner or an individual who stood in loco parentis when the employee or employee’s spouse or domestic partner was a minor child;

(D) A grandparent, grandchild, or sibling (whether of a biological, foster, adoptive or step relationship) of the employee or the employee’s spouse or domestic partner; or

(E) A person for whom the employee is responsible for providing or arranging health or safety-related care, including but not limited to helping that individual obtain diagnostic, preventative, routine, or therapeutic health treatment or ensuring the person is safe following domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking.

(8) “Health care professional,” any individual licensed under federal or any state law to provide medical or emergency services, including but not limited to doctors, nurses, certified nurse midwives, mental health professionals, and emergency room personnel.

(9) “Person”, any individual, partnership, association, corporation, business, business trust, legal representative, or any organized group of persons.

(10) “Retaliatory personnel action”, denial of any right guaranteed under sections 290.600 through 290.642, or any threat, discharge, suspension, demotion, reduction of hours, or any other adverse action against an employee for the exercise of any right guaranteed herein. “Retaliatory personnel action” shall also include interference with or punishment for in any manner participating in or assisting an investigation, proceeding, or hearing under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

(11) “Same hourly rate”, means the following:

(A) For employees paid on the basis of a single hourly rate, the same hourly rate shall be the employee’s regular hourly rate.

(B) For employees who are paid multiple hourly rates of pay from the same employer, the same hourly rate shall be either:

(i) the wages the employee would have been paid for the hours absent during use of earned paid sick time if the employee had worked; or,

(ii) the weighted average of all hourly rates of pay during the previous pay period.

Whatever method the employer uses, the employer must use a consistent method for each employee throughout a year.

(C) For employees who are paid a salary, the same hourly rate shall be determined by dividing the wages the employee earns in the previous pay period by the total number of hours worked during the previous pay period. For determining total number of hours worked during the previous pay period, employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1), the Fair Labor Standards Act, shall be assumed to work 40 hours in each work week unless their normal work week is less than 40 hours, in which case earned paid sick time shall accrue and the same hourly rate shall be calculated based on the employee’s normal work week. Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(D) For employees paid on a piece rate or a fee-for-service basis, the same hourly rate shall be a reasonable calculation of the wages or fees the employee would have received for the piece work, service, or part thereof, if the employee had worked. Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(E) For employees who are paid on a commission basis (whether base wage plus commission or commission only), the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the base wage or the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(F) For employees who receive and retain compensation in the form of gratuities in addition to wages, the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the employee’s regular hourly rate or 100% of the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502 without deduction of any tips as a credit.

(12) “Sexual assault”, as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(13) “Stalking”, as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(14) “Year”, a regular and consecutive twelve-month period as determined by the employer; except that for the purposes of section 290.615 and section 290.627, “year” shall mean a calendar year.

290.603. 1. Employees of an employer with fifteen or more employees shall accrue a minimum of one hour of earned paid sick time for every thirty hours worked, but such employees shall not be entitled to use more than forty hours of earned paid sick time per year, unless the employer selects a higher limit.

2. Employees of an employer with fewer than fifteen employees shall accrue a minimum of one hour of earned paid sick time for every thirty hours worked, but such employees shall not be entitled to use more than twenty-four hours of earned paid sick time per year, unless the employer selects a higher limit.

3. In determining the number of employees of an employer, all employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation on a full-time, part-time, or temporary basis shall be counted. In situations in which the number of employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation per week fluctuates above and below 15 employees per week over the course of a year, an employer is required to provide earned paid sick time pursuant to subsection (1) of this section if it maintained fifteen or more employees in the state on the payroll for some portion of a working day in each of twenty or more different calendar weeks, including any periods of leave, and whether or not the weeks were consecutive, in either the current or the preceding year (irrespective of whether the same individuals were in employment in each working day).

4. All employees shall accrue earned paid sick time as follows:

(A) Earned paid sick time as provided in this section shall begin to accrue at the commencement of employment or May 1, 2025, whichever is later. An employee shall be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued. An employer may provide all earned paid sick time that an employee is expected to accrue in a year at the beginning of the year.

(B) Employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1) of the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act will be assumed to work forty hours in each work week for purposes of earned paid sick time accrual unless their normal work week is less than forty hours, in which case earned paid sick time accrues based upon that normal work week.

(C) Up to 80 hours of earned paid sick time shall be carried over to the following year if the employee has any unused accrued earned paid sick time at the end of the year, but this law does not require an employer to permit an employee to use more than the applicable number of hours of earned paid sick time per year as set forth in subsection (1) and (2) of this section. Alternatively, in lieu of carryover of unused earned paid sick time from one year to the next, an employer may pay an employee for unused earned paid sick time at the end of a year which could be carried over and provide the employee with an amount of paid sick time that meets or exceeds the requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that is available for the employee's immediate use at the beginning of the subsequent year.

(D) If an employee is transferred to a separate division, entity, or location, but remains employed by the same employer, the employee is entitled to all earned paid sick time accrued at the prior division, entity, or location and is entitled to use all earned paid sick time as provided in this section. When there is a separation from employment and the employee is rehired within nine months of separation by the same employer, previously accrued earned paid sick time that had not been used shall be reinstated. Further, the employee shall be entitled to use accrued earned paid sick time and accrue additional earned paid sick time at the re-commencement of employment.

(E) When a different employer succeeds or takes the place of an existing employer, all employees of the original employer who remain employed by the successor employer are entitled to all earned paid sick time they accrued when employed by the original employer, and are entitled to use earned paid sick time previously accrued.

(F) At its discretion, an employer may loan earned paid sick time to an employee in advance of accrual by such employee.

5. Any employer with a paid leave policy, such as a paid time off policy, who makes available an amount of paid leave sufficient to meet the accrual requirements of this section that may be used for the same purposes and under the same conditions as earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642 is not required to provide additional paid sick time under this section.

6. Except as specifically provided in this section, nothing in this section shall be construed as requiring financial or other reimbursement to an employee from an employer upon the employee's termination, resignation, retirement, or other separation from employment for accrued earned paid sick time that has not been used.

7. Employees shall not accrue earned paid sick time before May 1, 2025. Employees who are employed or who commence employment on or after May 1, 2025 shall accrue earned paid sick time and be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued in accordance with sections 290.600 through 290.642. The Department may develop model posters and notices, engage in rule-making, initiate outreach programs, and engage in other activities for implementation of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 as authorized by those sections before May 1, 2025.

290.606. 1. Earned paid sick time shall be provided to an employee by an employer for:

(A) An employee's mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for preventative medical care;

(B) Care of a family member with a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs preventative medical care;

(C) Closure of the employee's place of business by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or an employee's need to care for a child whose school or place of care has been closed by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or care for oneself or a family member when it has been determined by the health authorities having jurisdiction or by a health care provider that the employee's or family member's presence in the community may jeopardize the health of others because of his or her exposure to a communicable disease, whether or not the employee or family member has actually contracted the communicable disease; or

(D) Absence necessary due to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, provided the leave is to allow the employee to obtain for the employee or the employee's family member:

(i) Medical attention needed to recover from physical or psychological injury or disability caused by domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking;

(ii) Services from a victim services organization;

(iii) Psychological or other counseling;

(iv) Relocation or taking steps to secure an existing home due to the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or

(v) Legal services, including preparing for or participating in any civil or criminal legal proceeding related to or resulting from the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking.

2. Earned paid sick time shall be provided upon the request of an employee. Such request may be made orally, in writing, by electronic means, or by any other means acceptable to the employer. When possible, the request shall include the expected duration of the absence.

3. When the use of earned paid sick time is foreseeable, the employee shall make a good faith effort to provide notice of the need for such time to the employer in advance of the use of the earned paid sick time and shall make a reasonable effort to schedule the use of earned paid sick time in a manner that does not unduly disrupt the operations of the employer. Where such need is not foreseeable, an employer may require an employee to provide notice of the need for the use of earned paid sick time as soon as practicable.

4. An employer that requires notice of the need to use earned paid sick time where the need is not foreseeable shall provide a written policy that contains procedures for the employee to provide notice. An employer that has not provided to the employee a copy of its written policy for providing such notice shall not deny earned paid sick time to the employee based on non-compliance with such a policy.

5. An employer may not require, as a condition of an employee's taking earned paid sick time, that the employee search for or find a replacement worker to cover the hours during which the employee is using earned paid sick time.

6. Earned paid sick time may be used in the smaller of hourly increments or the smallest increment that the employer's payroll system uses to account for absences or use of other time.

7. For earned paid sick time of three or more consecutive work days, an employer may require reasonable documentation that the earned paid sick time has been used for a purpose covered by subsection (1) of this section.

(A) Documentation signed by a health care professional indicating that earned paid sick time is necessary shall be considered reasonable documentation for purposes of this section.

(B) In cases of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, if the employer requests, one of the following types of documentation selected by the employee shall be considered reasonable documentation: (i) a police report indicating that the employee or the employee's family member was a victim of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; (ii) a written statement from an employee or agent of a victim service provider affirming that the employee or employee's family member is or was receiving services from a victim service provider; (iii) documentation signed by a health care professional from whom the employee or employee's family member sought assistance relating to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking or the effects thereof; (vi) a court document indicating that an employee or employee's family member is or was involved in a legal action related to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or (v) a written statement from the employee affirming that the employee or employee's family member is taking or took earned paid sick time for a qualifying purpose of subsection (1) of this section.

(C) An employer may not require that the documentation explain the nature of the illness, details of the underlying health needs, or the details of the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, unless otherwise required by law.

290.609. 1. It shall be unlawful for an employer or any other person to interfere with, restrain, or deny the exercise of, or the attempt to exercise, any right protected under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. An employer shall not take retaliatory personnel action or discriminate against an employee or former employee because the individual has exercised rights protected under sections 290.600 through 290.642. Such rights include, but are not limited to, the right to request or use earned paid sick time pursuant to sections 290.600 through 290.642; the right to file a complaint or inform any person about any employer's alleged violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642; the right to participate in any investigation, hearing, or proceeding or cooperate with or assist the Department in any investigations of alleged violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642; and the right to inform any person of his or her potential rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. It shall be unlawful for an employer's absence control policy to count earned paid sick time taken under sections 290.600 through 290.642 as an absence that may lead to or result in discipline, discharge, demotion, suspension, or any other adverse action.

4. Protections of this section shall apply to any individual who mistakenly but in good faith alleges violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

290.612. 1. Employers shall give employees a written notice about earned paid sick time within fourteen calendar days of the commencement of employment or on April 15, 2025, whichever is later, which must include the following information: (1) beginning May 1, 2025, employees accrue and are entitled to earned paid sick time at the rate one hour of earned paid sick time for every 30 hours of work, and may use earned paid sick time, subject to the limits and terms under sections 290.600 through 290.642 of Missouri law, (2) it is prohibited for an employer to take retaliatory personnel action against employees who request or use earned paid sick time as allowed by law, (3) each employee has the right to bring a civil action if earned paid sick time as required by sections 290.600 through 290.642 is denied by the employer or the employee is subjected to retaliatory personnel action by the employer for exercising the employee's rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642; and, (4) the contact information for the Department. Notice shall be provided by the Employer to the employee on a single piece of paper, at least 8.5 x 11, in no less than 14-point font.

2. Beginning April 15, 2025, employers shall display a poster that contains the information required in subsection (1) of this section in a conspicuous and accessible place in each establishment where such employees are employed, provided that such poster has been made available by the Department.

3. The Department may create and make available to employers, model notices and posters that contain the information required under subsection (1) of this section for employers' use in complying with subsections (1) and (2) of this section. Nothing in this subsection shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department to create or make available notices or posters if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.615. 1. Employers shall retain records documenting hours worked by employees and earned paid sick time taken by employees, for a period of not less than three years, and shall allow the Department access to such records, with appropriate notice and at a mutually agreeable time, to monitor compliance with the requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. To the extent permitted by law, the Director may inspect such records, and the records shall be open for inspection by the Director by appointment. Where the records required under this section are kept outside the state, the records shall be made available to the Director upon demand. Every such employer shall furnish to the Director on demand a sworn statement of time records and information upon forms prescribed or approved by the Director. All the records and information obtained by the Department are confidential and shall be disclosed only on order of a court of competent jurisdiction.

3. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department or Director to access or inspect records or to create forms relating to the inspection of records if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.618. 1. The Department may, in accordance with chapter 536, promulgate rules for the implementation, enforcement, and administration of sections 290.600 through 290.642. Any rule or portion of a rule, as that term is defined in section 536.010, that is created under the authority delegated in this section shall become effective only if it complies with and is subject to all of the provisions of chapter 536 and, if applicable, section 536.028. This section and chapter 536 are nonseverable and if any of the powers vested with the general assembly pursuant to chapter 536 to review, to delay the effective date, or to disapprove and annul a rule are subsequently held unconstitutional, then the grant of rulemaking authority and any rule proposed or adopted after November 5, 2024, shall be invalid and void.

290.621. 1. The Department may investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to $500 per day of each day of a continuing violation. A final decision of the department is subject to review in accordance with the provisions of chapter 536.

2. The Department may develop and implement an outreach program to inform employees, parents, and persons who are under the care of a health care provider about the availability of earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642. This program may include the distribution of notices and other written materials to child care and elder care providers, domestic violence shelters, schools, hospitals, community health centers and other health care providers in Missouri.

3. A municipality, county, city, town, or village may adopt ordinances, rules, and regulations to investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, with respect to employers within, or employees performing work while physically present in, the geographic boundaries of the municipality, county, city, town, or village. Any such ordinance, rule, or regulation shall be consistent with this law and any Department rules or regulations and system for compliance and enforcement. The municipality, county, city, town, or village may exercise such powers as allowed by any applicable charter or ordinance, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to the maximum allowed for an ordinance violation. Before investigating or seeking to resolve any complaint between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall give notice to the Department with a copy of the complaint and, within 14 days of such notice, the Department may intervene as of right and participate in the matter to ensure that the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642 or, alternatively, the Department may institute its own proceedings in which case the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall refrain from acting on the matter so long as the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642. If the Department does not, within 14 days, intervene or instigate its own proceedings, the municipality, county, city, town, or village may, without the Department, investigate and attempt to resolve the complaint and take other additional means within its power to enforce sections 290.600 through 290.642 against the subject of the complaint. In no event shall an employer be subject to compliance proceedings arising out of a single set of facts after having already been subjected to a final compliance order by another governmental entity.

4. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department, a municipality, county, city, town, or village to conduct investigations and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, to establish and implement a system to receive or resolve complaints, to establish additional means of enforcement, or to conduct outreach and education, including the creation of notices and other written materials, concerning sections 290.600 through 290.642, if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.624. 1. Any employer who willfully violates or fails to comply with any of the provisions and requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be guilty of a class C misdemeanor; provided, however, that an employer who willfully violates the notice and posting requirements of section 290.612 shall be guilty of an infraction.

2. For purposes of this section, each day of violation or failure to comply and each employee affected shall constitute a separate offense.

290.627. 1. Any individual who claims to have been aggrieved by a failure of an employer to comply with any portion of sections 290.600 through 290.642, including but not limited to the failure to provide earned paid sick time or to allow employees to use such time consistent with sections 290.600 through 290.642, or who claims to have suffered a retaliatory personnel action, shall have a right of action and may commence a civil action in the appropriate court of jurisdiction within three years of the accrual of the cause of action, to obtain appropriate relief with respect to such unlawful violation. Such action may be brought without first filing an administrative complaint.

2. In a civil action under this section, if the court finds a violation has occurred, the court may grant as relief, as it deems appropriate and to the extent permitted by law, any permanent or temporary injunction, the full amount of any unpaid earned sick time plus any actual damages suffered as the result of the employer's violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642, an additional amount equal to twice any unpaid earned sick time as liquidated damages, costs, and reasonable attorney's fees as may be allowed by the court, and other legal or equitable relief as may be appropriate to remedy the violation, including, without limitation, reinstatement to employment and back pay.

290.630. 1. Except as otherwise required by law, an employer may not require disclosure of details relating to an employee's or an employee's family member's health information, domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking as a condition of providing earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. Unless as otherwise required by law, any health or safety information possessed by an employer regarding an employee or employee's family member must:

(A) be maintained on a separate form and in a separate file from other personnel information;

(B) be treated as confidential medical records; and

(C) not be disclosed except to the affected employee or with the express written permission of the affected employee.

290.633. 1. With respect to employees covered by a valid collective bargaining agreement in effect on November 5, 2024, no provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply until the stated expiration date in the collective bargaining agreement; however, further the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply upon any such agreement's renewal, extension, amendment, or modification in any respect after November 5, 2024.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed to interfere, impede, or otherwise diminish the right of employees to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing in order to establish earned paid sick time or other conditions of work in excess of the applicable minimum standards under the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. All or any portion of the earned paid sick time requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall not apply to employees covered by a bona fide collective bargaining agreement to the extent that such requirements are expressly waived in the collective bargaining agreement in clear and unambiguous terms.

4. With the exception noted in subsection 3, any waiver by an employee of rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed contrary to public policy and shall be void.

290.636. 1. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed to discourage or prohibit an employer from the adoption or retention of an earned paid sick time policy more generous than the one required herein.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed as diminishing the obligation of an employer to comply with any contract, collective bargaining agreement, employment benefit plan, or other agreement providing more generous paid sick time to an employee than required herein. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed as diminishing the rights of public employees regarding paid sick time or use of paid sick time as provided in the laws of Missouri and ordinances of political subdivisions pertaining to public employees.

290.639. 1. Sections 290.600 through 290.642 provide minimum requirements pertaining to earned paid sick time and shall not be construed to preempt, limit, or otherwise affect the applicability of any other law, regulation, requirement, policy, or standard that provides for greater accrual or use by employees of earned paid sick time or that extends other protections to employees.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be interpreted or applied to create a power or obligation contrary to any federal law, rule, or regulation.

290.642. Except as detailed in section 290.618, all of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are severable, and if any provision, including any section, subsection, subdivision, paragraph, sentence, or clause, or the application thereof to any person or circumstance, is found by a court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted, such decision shall not affect other provisions or applications of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that can be given effect without the invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted provision or application, and to this end the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are declared severable.

Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, their office could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. However, if the enactment of this proposal were to result in substantial additional litigation, their office may be required to request additional appropriations.

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated no fiscal impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated no impact on their agency.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated this initiative petition has no impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated this petition, if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated this proposal creates no direct obligations or requirements to their department that would result in a fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated this proposal could potentially fiscally impact their department however, at this time, there is no way to estimate said impact.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated:

This petition would amend provisions relating to the accumulation of sick time required for employees depending on how many employees are employed by the employer. It also has various requirements regarding how sick time can be used and procedures employers must use. Violations are deemed misdemeanors, and damages are allowed to be awarded in civil suits. It states that the DOLIR "may" create new notices, promulgate rules, and initiate outreach programs but that the DOLIR is not required to create notices if it requires the appropriation of funds. It also states that the DOLIR may inspect employment records and investigate complaints of noncompliance. Still, such inspection is not required if it requires the appropriation of funds, and the cost estimate would be zero.

The funding source will be from General Revenue if the DOLIR receives complaints to enforce it. Therefore the DOLIR estimates it would need two Regulatory Auditors and one Administrative Support Assistant person at an annual ongoing cost of $255,975 by 2027, plus an initial information technology (IT) component of $28,318 and office equipment of $25,011.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety indicated no impact for their department, Director's office.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated no impact anticipated by their department.

Officials from the Governor's Office indicated this proposal relating to employee leave does not financially impact their office as the proposal excludes government entities.

Officials from the House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact, as it excludes the state from the definition of an employer.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated because this initiative petition exempts the state, any agency or commission of the state, etc., from the definition of employer, their department does not anticipate any fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated this initiative petition excludes the state from the requirements of the proposed new law. Therefore there is no anticipated fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to employee leave does not financially impact their office due to an exemption for government entities in the initiative petition.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated there is no fiscal impact on the courts.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In fiscal year (FY) 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. Their office estimates $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated the proposed initiative petition creates a new offense under section 290.624 which could result in additional cases eligible for State Public Defender (SPD) representation. The number of additional cases is unknown and as a result the fiscal impact is unknown. However, if the offenses, which are classified as misdemeanors, were class D misdemeanors, jail time would not be a possible sentence and the offense therefore would not be eligible for SPD representation.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no fiscal impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated this petition does not apply to county governments under Section 6 for the definition of an employer. Clay County provides more generous sick leave than this measure as well.

They do estimate additional costs from this petition of $2,000 a year between the Circuit Court and Prosecutor to enforce the misdemeanor and civil action provisions.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county for this initiative petition proposing to amend Chapter 290, RSMo.

Officials from St. Louis County indicated this initiative petition has no apparent fiscal impact on their county.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this would have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact to their college.

Officials from St. Louis Community College indicated their college appears to offer benefits that exceed the petition and therefore they do not see a cost or cost savings with regard to the petition.

Officials from the Missouri Lottery indicated no fiscal impact to their agency.

Officials from the State Tax Commission indicated this initiative petition will not have a fiscal impact on their agency.

Officials from the Missouri Veterans Commission indicated this initiative petition creates no fiscal impact to their Commission. The definition of the term "employer" in the proposed section 290.600(6) specifically excludes the state and its agencies, so the requirements of the petition would not apply to the Commission.

Officials from the Missouri Ethics Commission indicated this initiative petition does not have fiscal impact on their Commission.

Officials from the Kansas Board of Police Commissioners indicated they are exempt as a political subdivision of the state.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated they predict no fiscal impact from this petition.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated this petition has no fiscal impact to their board.

Officials from the Children's Trust Fund indicated no impact.

Officials from the State Auditor's office indicated since this proposed initiative petition does not apply to government entities, this would have no fiscal impact on their office.

Lindsey Baker, Research Director, Missouri Budget Project indicated in summary, they estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state and local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue and decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy. She also provided the following information:

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Earned Sick Leave Petitions 24-025-042

We estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state & local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy.

In addition to helping employees by allowing them to address their health needs without losing their jobs or ability to pay their bills, paid sick leave has many benefits for employers, including a healthier workforce, reduced turnover, and increased productivity. The benefits of paid sick leave have been highlighted by the COVID-19 pandemic, illustrating the importance of workers being able to recover at home without lost wages and without risking spread of contagious disease in the workplace.

Several ballot measures have been filed (24-025-042) that would require employers to provide earned sick leave in Missouri. Though the measures vary slightly, each would require employers to provide a minimum of 3-7 days of paid leave to employees, depending on hours worked and size of business. If implemented, Missouri would join the seventeen states, plus the District of Columbia, who ensure employees can earn paid sick leave to care for themselves or family members.ⁱ

An estimated 211,000 Missourians and their families would benefit from the earned sick time provided through these initiatives, with low-wage workers disproportionately likely to benefit from this policy.ⁱⁱ Expanding earned sick leave in Missouri is estimated to provide a net savings to society of between $612.4-$774.1 million annually depending on the number of days provided.ⁱⁱⁱ

	3-5 Scenario*	5-7 Scenario*
Estimated Cost Savings	$1.26B	$1.29B
- Employment Related Savings	$436.73M	$466.6M
- Health Related Savings	$825.61M	$825.61M
Estimated Costs (Employer & State Admin)	$488.22M	$679.77M
Estimated Net Societal Benefit*	$774.11M	$612.44M

In the 3/5 scenario, small employers are required to offer at least three days of leave and large employers at least five days. The 5/7 scenario requires small employers to offer at least five days of paid sick leave and large employers to offer at least seven days of paid leave. A small employer defined as less than 15 employees.*

Societal Cost Savings from Earned Sick Leave in Missouri

Employment Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri's workforce would become stronger, more stable, and more productive leading to economic growth.

- Reduced Absenteeism. Access to earned sick leave allows workers to stay home, reducing the overall spread of illness in the workplace; this leads to fewer illnesses among workers and fewer overall days off work.^{iv}
- Reduced Turnover. Access to earned sick leave gives workers the ability to address their health needs and those of their families, without having to quit a job or risk being fired. Access to paid sick leave is associated with reduced job turnover, which in turn creates significant savings for businesses.^v
- Reduced Presenteeism. Employers who do not offer paid sick leave have higher rates of "presenteeism" or lost productivity due to employees working while injured or sick.^{vi} Offering paid sick leave reduces the likelihood of working at reduced capacity and allows workers to recover from illness or injury more quickly.

Health Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri would become a healthier state as workers would have the ability to care for themselves and their families, while simultaneously benefiting their communities.

- Reduced Flu Contagion in Society. Workers without paid sick leave are more likely to come to work sick, increasing the likelihood of spreading the illness.^{vii} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to stay home when ill, thus reducing the overall spread of influenza throughout the community.
- Reduced Workers Compensation Costs. Workers with access to paid leave are less likely to be injured on the job,^{viii} reducing overall workers comp claims and cost to employers.
- Reduced ER Visits. Paid sick leave is associated with fewer trips to the emergency room.^{ix} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to properly care for themselves and family members during an illness, preventing an escalation of the illness.
- Improved Nursing Home Care. Unpaid sick leave is especially problematic in nursing homes as the residents are especially vulnerable to the consequences of high turnover, absenteeism and presenteeism.^x Access to paid sick leave allows nursing home workers to take care of themselves so that they can better care for residents.

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Petitions 24-025-042

While previous estimates show a cost associated with state level administration and enforcement for earned sick leave of approximately $1 million, we also expect that earned sick leave will be associated with a significant potential for increased revenue collections & decreased spending on services associated with the cost savings outlined above.

- Increased revenue collections. A stronger and more productive workforce is associated with economic growth. Economic growth is in turn associated with growth in both state and local revenue as both sales & income tax collections rise due to increased spending and wages.
- Reductions in spending on services. When workers are able to care for themselves and their families (and others in their community) they are less likely to have minor illnesses escalate into costly health problems. This reduces the overall cost of health care, particularly among low-wage workers who are disproportionately likely to lack access to paid leave. This in turn reduces state and local spending on health other related public services.

As a result, we estimate the fiscal impact on state & local revenue of earned sick leave will be minimal as the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will offset the modest expenses associated with state level administration. While we are confident that a net savings will be realized, the size of the savings is too speculative to estimate exact fiscal impact.

Re: Proposal Related to Chapter 290, RSMo, Petition 2024-025-042

Dear Auditor Fitzpatrick:

A Better Balance is writing to submit our fact sheet titled "Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business" to accompany petition 24-025-042 and to inform the fiscal note process. We thank you for considering our submission.

A Better Balance, a national nonprofit advocacy organization with four regional offices, uses the power of the law to ensure that working individuals can care for themselves and their loved ones without jeopardizing their economic security. Through legislative advocacy, policy, direct legal services, strategic litigation, and public education, our organization works around the country to advance policies like paid sick leave, paid family and medical leave, quality childcare and eldercare, and anti-discrimination protections for pregnant workers and caregivers. From Arizona and Colorado to Duluth (MN) and beyond, our organization has worked on the growing number of paid sick leave laws now in effect.

The enclosed fact sheet summarizes research and data on the resoundingly positive effect that paid sick leave has on business. When paid sick leave policies are in place, businesses financially benefit from increased worker productivity, reduced spread of contagious illness in the workplace, and lower employee turnover. Research has also underscored that workers and the larger community also have better health outcomes overall when there is access to paid sick leave. As documented in the attached fact sheet, paid sick leave has been shown to work well for businesses and workers throughout the country.

Thank you for giving us the opportunity to submit this information. Please do not hesitate to contact A Better Balance at cgomez@abetterbalance.org if we can provide any additional assistance.

Sincerely,
A Better Balance

Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business

The research is clear: paid sick leave isn't just good for workers, it's good for business as well. Healthy workers are essential to a successful business and a strong economy. When workers have access to paid sick leave, they demonstrate increased job satisfaction, commitment, and morale, while employers—and their bottom lines—reap the benefits of increased worker performance and productivity and reduced worker turnover. And access to guaranteed paid sick leave is a vital component to keeping businesses open and safe through the COVID-19 pandemic and beyond.

Access to paid sick leave increases worker productivity and reduces the spread of contagious illness in the workplace, leading to direct savings for businesses.

- Workers with minor illnesses are less productive than their healthy co-workers.¹ Paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (when employees show up to work while sick), which costs businesses approximately $207.6 billion annually in reduced productivity.² After Washington State implemented its paid sick leave law, for example, the percentage of workers that went to work while sick decreased significantly.³
- Paid sick leave also reduces the spread of contagion between co-workers—further increasing productivity and labor in the workplace.⁴ Absenteeism caused by the introduction of flu-like illness in the workplace is estimated to cost employers up to 111 million workdays per year.⁵ Even before the pandemic, states with paid sick leave requirements saw a 40% decrease in influenza rates.⁶

Paid sick leave has proven to be particularly crucial to keeping businesses open during the COVID-19 pandemic.

- As the country with the highest cumulative number of COVID-19 cases,⁷ and the only one of the thirteen G12 countries with no paid sick leave,⁸ it is undeniable that the U.S. will need paid sick leave to end this crisis, to save lives, and to minimize disruption to businesses struggling to avoid the spread of COVID-19 in the workplace.
- Paid sick leave has been critical to keeping businesses open throughout the pandemic. One study found that states in which workers gained temporary access to paid sick leave through the federal Families First Coronavirus Response Act⁹ had around 400 fewer confirmed COVID-19 cases per day as a result.¹⁰

Employers with paid sick leave benefit from reduced worker turnover and better relationships with their employees, saving employers the cost of recruiting, interviewing, and training new hires.

- In general, worker turnover is estimated to cost employers the equivalent of 21% of a worker's annual compensation.¹¹ However, providing paid sick leave only increases labor costs by an average of 2.7 cents per hour worked¹² and workers with paid sick leave are less likely to leave their jobs,¹³ saving businesses money on turnover costs such as interviewing and training.¹⁴

- Paid sick leave also increases worker loyalty and job satisfaction—factors known to increase productivity and job retention.¹⁵ After Connecticut’s paid sick law went into effect, nearly 30% of surveyed employers reported improved employee morale, and over 20% reported increased employee motivation or loyalty.¹⁶
- Two years after paid sick leave went into effect in New York City, one employer reported that “the impact that I saw in my business was a much stronger bond between ourselves and our employees, higher productivity, and a more successful business, not a less successful business.”¹⁷

Paid sick leave also saves employers money by reducing the likelihood of workplace accidents.

- Throughout the country, direct and indirect costs associated with on-the-job injuries cost employers billions of dollars.¹⁸ Workers with paid sick leave are 28% less likely than workers without access to paid sick leave to be injured on the job.¹⁹

Lack of paid sick leave makes workers more likely to go to work while sick and puts co-workers and our communities at risk. With paid sick leave, our workplaces and communities are healthier, which improves the bottom line for employers.

- Access to sick leave will be essential to overcoming the COVID-19 pandemic, as evidenced by previous pandemics. For example, it is estimated that the lack of paid sick leave was responsible for 5 million incidents of flu-like illness during the H1N1 pandemic.²⁰
- In a simulated influenza epidemic, 72% of employees who caught the flu at work did so because of exposure to other employees attending work while sick; paid sick days would reduce flu incidences among workers by approximately 6% across all workplaces, and by over 7% in workplaces with 49 or fewer employees.²¹
- As explained above, access to paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (employees showing up to work while sick) and reduces overall contagion.²² Presenteeism is linked to the spread of harmful contagions to co-workers and customers.²³
- A study of data from the 2009 flu outbreak found that workers with paid sick leave were 30 percent more likely to be vaccinated and were more likely to seek treatment when they were sick with flu-like symptoms compared to those without paid sick leave.²⁴ This has proven true for COVID-19 as well—in June 2021, workers whose employers provided paid time off to get the vaccine or recover from any side effects were 24% more likely to have received at least one dose of the vaccine than workers whose employers provided no paid vaccine leave.²⁵
- A lack of access to paid sick days is particularly harmful for service industry workers. Nearly two-thirds of restaurant workers have cooked or served food while sick,²⁶ and in 2011, nearly one in five food service workers went to work vomiting or with diarrhea, creating dangerous health conditions.²⁷

- People without access to paid sick leave are 1.5x more likely to go to work while they have a contagious illness and are nearly twice as likely to send a sick child to school or daycare than those with access to it.²⁸
- States that have implemented paid sick leave laws had an 11% decrease of cases of flu-like illnesses in their first year after enactment.²⁹

Workers with paid sick leave are more likely to seek preventative care than workers without paid sick leave, leading to better health outcomes and less time away from work.

- People without paid sick days tend to be unable to make time for preventative health care, such as cancer screenings and flu shots, which makes it more likely that such workers will have more significant healthcare needs at later stages of an illness.³⁰
- Workers with access to paid sick days report better general health than workers without paid sick days and are less likely to delay preventive medical care for themselves or for their family.³¹

Paid sick leave has proven to work well for businesses all over the U.S., and experience shows that workers don't abuse paid sick leave.

- Business practices don't have to change to keep up with paid sick leave laws. In a survey of New York City employers after the city's paid sick law was implemented, 91% of employers reported no reduction in hiring, 97% indicated they did not reduce hours, about 94% did not raise prices, and nearly 85% of employers reported no change in their overall business costs.³²
 - In a similar survey of employers in Connecticut a year and a half after the state's paid sick law went into effect, nearly 90% of employers reported no reduction in hours, and about 85% did not raise prices.³³
- Paid sick leave laws stimulate economic growth. When San Francisco's paid sick law went into effect in 2007, the city's job growth actually exceeded that of nearby counties, despite unfounded fears that the law would cause an economic slowdown.³⁴
 - In comparison to other surrounding cities, Seattle saw greater increases in the number of employers in the city when its paid sick leave law was implemented,³⁵ and in general, job growth continued on an upward trend.³⁶
 - After New York City's paid sick days were implemented, the average wage for hourly workers increased and the average number of weekly absences declined.³⁷ On the law's first anniversary, the New York City government released a report touting its successful implementation and noting that since the law went into effect, "the city has had steady job growth and the lowest unemployment in six years."³⁸
- Workers don't abuse paid sick leave. After New York implemented its paid sick leave law, 98% of employers reported no cases of employee abuse of sick days.³⁹

- Employers know that paid sick leave laws work. Two years after New York City’s paid sick law was implemented, a staggering 86% of New York City employers polled supported the law.⁴⁰
- Studies in Washington, D.C. and Seattle also saw no negative economic effects following implementation of their paid sick leave laws in either job loss or movement of businesses out of the city. A report from the Washington D.C. Auditor, issued five years after passage of the District’s sick leave law, found that the law “did not have the economic impact of encouraging business owners to move a business from the District nor did the [law] have the economic impact of discouraging business owners to locate a business in the District of Columbia.”⁴¹ Likewise, a study of the economic impact of Seattle’s sick leave law found that a “preliminary look at available data shows no widespread negative economic impact as some opponents of the ordinance feared.”⁴²
- Recognizing the benefits of paid sick leave, San Francisco, Washington, D.C., and New York City—all among the earliest adopters of paid sick leave laws—later expanded their paid sick leave laws, underscoring how well these laws are working for workers, employers, and communities.

(11) “Same hourly rate”, means the following:

(A) For employees paid on the basis of a single hourly rate, the same hourly rate shall be the employee’s regular hourly rate.

(B) For employees who are paid multiple hourly rates of pay from the same employer, the same hourly rate shall be either:

(i) the wages the employee would have been paid for the hours absent during use of earned paid sick time if the employee had worked; or,

(ii) the weighted average of all hourly rates of pay during the previous pay period.

Whatever method the employer uses, the employer must use a consistent method for each employee throughout a year.

(C) For employees who are paid a salary, the same hourly rate shall be determined by dividing the wages the employee earns in the previous pay period by the total number of hours worked during the previous pay period. For determining total number of hours worked during the previous pay period, employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1), the Fair Labor Standards Act, shall be assumed to work 40 hours in each work week unless their normal work week is less than 40 hours, in which case earned paid sick time shall accrue and the same hourly rate shall be calculated based on the employee’s normal work week. Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(D) For employees paid on a piece rate or a fee-for-service basis, the same hourly rate shall be a reasonable calculation of the wages or fees the employee would have received for the piece work, service, or part thereof, if the employee had worked. Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(E) For employees who are paid on a commission basis (whether base wage plus commission or commission only), the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the base wage or the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(F) For employees who receive and retain compensation in the form of gratuities in addition to wages, the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the employee’s regular hourly rate or 100% of the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502 without deduction of any tips as a credit.

(12) “Sexual assault”, as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(13) “Stalking”, as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(14) “Year”, a regular and consecutive twelve-month period as determined by the employer; except that for the purposes of section 290.615 and section 290.627, “year” shall mean a calendar year.

290.603. 1. Employees of an employer with fifteen or more employees shall accrue a minimum of one hour of earned paid sick time for every thirty hours worked, but such employees shall not be entitled to use more than fifty-six hours of earned paid sick time per year, unless the employer selects a higher limit.

2. Employees of an employer with fewer than fifteen employees shall accrue a minimum of one hour of earned paid sick time for every thirty hours worked, but such employees shall not be entitled to use more than forty hours of earned paid sick time per year, unless the employer selects a higher limit.

3. In determining the number of employees of an employer, all employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation on a full-time, part-time, or temporary basis shall be counted. In situations in which the number of employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation per week fluctuates above and below 15 employees per week over the course of a year, an employer is required to provide earned paid sick time pursuant to subsection (1) of this section if it maintained fifteen or more employees in the state on the payroll for some portion of a working day in each of twenty or more different calendar weeks, including any periods of leave, and whether or not the weeks were consecutive, in either the current or the preceding year (irrespective of whether the same individuals were in employment in each working day).

4. All employees shall accrue earned paid sick time as follows:

(A) Earned paid sick time as provided in this section shall begin to accrue at the commencement of employment or May 1, 2025, whichever is later. An employee shall be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued. An employer may provide all earned paid sick time that an employee is expected to accrue in a year at the beginning of the year.

(B) Employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1) of the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act will be assumed to work forty hours in each work week for purposes of earned paid sick time accrual unless their normal work week is less than forty hours, in which case earned paid sick time accrues based upon that normal work week.

(C) Up to 80 hours of earned paid sick time shall be carried over to the following year if the employee has any unused accrued earned paid sick time at the end of the year, but this law does not require an employer to permit an employee to use more than the applicable number of hours of earned paid sick time per year as set forth in subsection (1) and (2) of this section. Alternatively, in lieu of carryover of unused earned paid sick time from one year to the next, an employer may pay an employee for unused earned paid sick time at the end of a year which could be carried over and provide the employee with an amount of paid sick time that meets or exceeds the requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that is available for the employee's immediate use at the beginning of the subsequent year.

(D) If an employee is transferred to a separate division, entity, or location, but remains employed by the same employer, the employee is entitled to all earned paid sick time accrued at the prior division, entity, or location and is entitled to use all earned paid sick time as provided in this section. When there is a separation from employment and the employee is rehired within nine months of separation by the same employer, previously accrued earned paid sick time that had not been used shall be reinstated. Further, the employee shall be entitled to use accrued earned paid sick time and accrue additional earned paid sick time at the re-commencement of employment.

(E) When a different employer succeeds or takes the place of an existing employer, all employees of the original employer who remain employed by the successor employer are entitled to all earned paid sick time they accrued when employed by the original employer, and are entitled to use earned paid sick time previously accrued.

(F) At its discretion, an employer may loan earned paid sick time to an employee in advance of accrual by such employee.

5. Any employer with a paid leave policy, such as a paid time off policy, who makes available an amount of paid leave sufficient to meet the accrual requirements of this section that may be used for the same purposes and under the same conditions as earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642 is not required to provide additional paid sick time under this section.

6. Except as specifically provided in this section, nothing in this section shall be construed as requiring financial or other reimbursement to an employee from an employer upon the employee's termination, resignation, retirement, or other separation from employment for accrued earned paid sick time that has not been used.

7. Employees shall not accrue earned paid sick time before May 1, 2025. Employees who are employed or who commence employment on or after May 1, 2025 shall accrue earned paid sick time and be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued in accordance with sections 290.600 through 290.642. The Department may develop model posters and notices, engage in rule-making, initiate outreach programs, and engage in other activities for implementation of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 as authorized by those sections before May 1, 2025.

290.606. 1. Earned paid sick time shall be provided to an employee by an employer for:

(A) An employee's mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for preventative medical care;

(B) Care of a family member with a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs preventative medical care;

(C) Closure of the employee's place of business by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or an employee's need to care for a child whose school or place of care has been closed by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or care for oneself or a family member when it has been determined by the health authorities having jurisdiction or by a health care provider that the employee's or family member's presence in the community may jeopardize the health of others because of his or her exposure to a communicable disease, whether or not the employee or family member has actually contracted the communicable disease; or

(D) Absence necessary due to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, provided the leave is to allow the employee to obtain for the employee or the employee's family member:

(i) Medical attention needed to recover from physical or psychological injury or disability caused by domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking;

(ii) Services from a victim services organization;

(iii) Psychological or other counseling;

(iv) Relocation or taking steps to secure an existing home due to the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or

(v) Legal services, including preparing for or participating in any civil or criminal legal proceeding related to or resulting from the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking.

2. Earned paid sick time shall be provided upon the request of an employee. Such request may be made orally, in writing, by electronic means, or by any other means acceptable to the employer. When possible, the request shall include the expected duration of the absence.

3. When the use of earned paid sick time is foreseeable, the employee shall make a good faith effort to provide notice of the need for such time to the employer in advance of the use of the earned paid sick time and shall make a reasonable effort to schedule the use of earned paid sick time in a manner that does not unduly disrupt the operations of the employer. Where such need is not foreseeable, an employer may require an employee to provide notice of the need for the use of earned paid sick time as soon as practicable.

4. An employer that requires notice of the need to use earned paid sick time where the need is not foreseeable shall provide a written policy that contains procedures for the employee to provide notice. An employer that has not provided to the employee a copy of its written policy for providing such notice shall not deny earned paid sick time to the employee based on non-compliance with such a policy.

5. An employer may not require, as a condition of an employee's taking earned paid sick time, that the employee search for or find a replacement worker to cover the hours during which the employee is using earned paid sick time.

6. Earned paid sick time may be used in the smaller of hourly increments or the smallest increment that the employer's payroll system uses to account for absences or use of other time.

7. For earned paid sick time of three or more consecutive work days, an employer may require reasonable documentation that the earned paid sick time has been used for a purpose covered by subsection (1) of this section.

(A) Documentation signed by a health care professional indicating that earned paid sick time is necessary shall be considered reasonable documentation for purposes of this section.

(B) In cases of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, if the employer requests, one of the following types of documentation selected by the employee shall be considered reasonable documentation: (i) a police report indicating that the employee or the employee's family member was a victim of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; (ii) a written statement from an employee or agent of a victim service provider affirming that the employee or employee's family member is or was receiving services from a victim service provider; (iii) documentation signed by a health care professional from whom the employee or employee's family member sought assistance relating to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking or the effects thereof; (vi) a court document indicating that an employee or employee's family member is or was involved in a legal action related to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or (v) a written statement from the employee affirming that the employee or employee's family member is taking or took earned paid sick time for a qualifying purpose of subsection (1) of this section.

(C) An employer may not require that the documentation explain the nature of the illness, details of the underlying health needs, or the details of the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, unless otherwise required by law.

290.609. 1. It shall be unlawful for an employer or any other person to interfere with, restrain, or deny the exercise of, or the attempt to exercise, any right protected under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. An employer shall not take retaliatory personnel action or discriminate against an employee or former employee because the individual has exercised rights protected under sections 290.600 through 290.642. Such rights include, but are not limited to, the right to request or use earned paid sick time pursuant to sections 290.600 through 290.642; the right to file a complaint or inform any person about any employer's alleged violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642; the right to participate in any investigation, hearing, or proceeding or cooperate with or assist the Department in any investigations of alleged violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642; and the right to inform any person of his or her potential rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. It shall be unlawful for an employer's absence control policy to count earned paid sick time taken under sections 290.600 through 290.642 as an absence that may lead to or result in discipline, discharge, demotion, suspension, or any other adverse action.

4. Protections of this section shall apply to any individual who mistakenly but in good faith alleges violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

290.612. 1. Employers shall give employees a written notice about earned paid sick time within fourteen calendar days of the commencement of employment or on April 15, 2025, whichever is later, which must include the following information: (1) beginning May 1, 2025, employees accrue and are entitled to earned paid sick time at the rate one hour of earned paid sick time for every 30 hours of work, and may use earned paid sick time, subject to the limits and terms under sections 290.600 through 290.642 of Missouri law, (2) it is prohibited for an employer to take retaliatory personnel action against employees who request or use earned paid sick time as allowed by law, (3) each employee has the right to bring a civil action if earned paid sick time as required by sections 290.600 through 290.642 is denied by the employer or the employee is subjected to retaliatory personnel action by the employer for exercising the employee's rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642; and, (4) the contact information for the Department. Notice shall be provided by the Employer to the employee on a single piece of paper, at least 8.5 x 11, in no less than 14-point font.

2. Beginning April 15, 2025, employers shall display a poster that contains the information required in subsection (1) of this section in a conspicuous and accessible place in each establishment where such employees are employed, provided that such poster has been made available by the Department.

3. The Department may create and make available to employers, model notices and posters that contain the information required under subsection (1) of this section for employers' use in complying with subsections (1) and (2) of this section. Nothing in this subsection shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department to create or make available notices or posters if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.615. 1. Employers shall retain records documenting hours worked by employees and earned paid sick time taken by employees, for a period of not less than three years, and shall allow the Department access to such records, with appropriate notice and at a mutually agreeable time, to monitor compliance with the requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. To the extent permitted by law, the Director may inspect such records, and the records shall be open for inspection by the Director by appointment. Where the records required under this section are kept outside the state, the records shall be made available to the Director upon demand. Every such employer shall furnish to the Director on demand a sworn statement of time records and information upon forms prescribed or approved by the Director. All the records and information obtained by the Department are confidential and shall be disclosed only on order of a court of competent jurisdiction.

3. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department or Director to access or inspect records or to create forms relating to the inspection of records if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.618. 1. The Department may, in accordance with chapter 536, promulgate rules for the implementation, enforcement, and administration of sections 290.600 through 290.642. Any rule or portion of a rule, as that term is defined in section 536.010, that is created under the authority delegated in this section shall become effective only if it complies with and is subject to all of the provisions of chapter 536 and, if applicable, section 536.028. This section and chapter 536 are nonseverable and if any of the powers vested with the general assembly pursuant to chapter 536 to review, to delay the effective date, or to disapprove and annul a rule are subsequently held unconstitutional, then the grant of rulemaking authority and any rule proposed or adopted after November 5, 2024, shall be invalid and void.

290.621. 1. The Department may investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to $500 per day of each day of a continuing violation. A final decision of the department is subject to review in accordance with the provisions of chapter 536.

2. The Department may develop and implement an outreach program to inform employees, parents, and persons who are under the care of a health care provider about the availability of earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642. This program may include the distribution of notices and other written materials to child care and elder care providers, domestic violence shelters, schools, hospitals, community health centers and other health care providers in Missouri.

3. A municipality, county, city, town, or village may adopt ordinances, rules, and regulations to investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, with respect to employers within, or employees performing work while physically present in, the geographic boundaries of the municipality, county, city, town, or village. Any such ordinance, rule, or regulation shall be consistent with this law and any Department rules or regulations and system for compliance and enforcement. The municipality, county, city, town, or village may exercise such powers as allowed by any applicable charter or ordinance, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to the maximum allowed for an ordinance violation. Before investigating or seeking to resolve any complaint between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall give notice to the Department with a copy of the complaint and, within 14 days of such notice, the Department may intervene as of right and participate in the matter to ensure that the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642 or, alternatively, the Department may institute its own proceedings in which case the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall refrain from acting on the matter so long as the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642. If the Department does not, within 14 days, intervene or instigate its own proceedings, the municipality, county, city, town, or village may, without the Department, investigate and attempt to resolve the complaint and take other additional means within its power to enforce sections 290.600 through 290.642 against the subject of the complaint. In no event shall an employer be subject to compliance proceedings arising out of a single set of facts after having already been subjected to a final compliance order by another governmental entity.

4. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department, a municipality, county, city, town, or village to conduct investigations and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, to establish and implement a system to receive or resolve complaints, to establish additional means of enforcement, or to conduct outreach and education, including the creation of notices and other written materials, concerning sections 290.600 through 290.642, if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.624. 1. Any employer who willfully violates or fails to comply with any of the provisions and requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be guilty of a class C misdemeanor; provided, however, that an employer who willfully violates the notice and posting requirements of section 290.612 shall be guilty of an infraction.

2. For purposes of this section, each day of violation or failure to comply and each employee affected shall constitute a separate offense.

290.627. 1. Any individual who claims to have been aggrieved by a failure of an employer to comply with any portion of sections 290.600 through 290.642, including but not limited to the failure to provide earned paid sick time or to allow employees to use such time consistent with sections 290.600 through 290.642, or who claims to have suffered a retaliatory personnel action, shall have a right of action and may commence a civil action in the appropriate court of jurisdiction within three years of the accrual of the cause of action, to obtain appropriate relief with respect to such unlawful violation. Such action may be brought without first filing an administrative complaint.

2. In a civil action under this section, if the court finds a violation has occurred, the court may grant as relief, as it deems appropriate and to the extent permitted by law, any permanent or temporary injunction, the full amount of any unpaid earned sick time plus any actual damages suffered as the result of the employer's violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642, an additional amount equal to twice any unpaid earned sick time as liquidated damages, costs, and reasonable attorney's fees as may be allowed by the court, and other legal or equitable relief as may be appropriate to remedy the violation, including, without limitation, reinstatement to employment and back pay.

290.630. 1. Except as otherwise required by law, an employer may not require disclosure of details relating to an employee's or an employee's family member's health information, domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking as a condition of providing earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. Unless as otherwise required by law, any health or safety information possessed by an employer regarding an employee or employee's family member must:

(A) be maintained on a separate form and in a separate file from other personnel information;

(B) be treated as confidential medical records; and

(C) not be disclosed except to the affected employee or with the express written permission of the affected employee.

290.633. 1. With respect to employees covered by a valid collective bargaining agreement in effect on November 5, 2024, no provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply until the stated expiration date in the collective bargaining agreement; however, further the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply upon any such agreement's renewal, extension, amendment, or modification in any respect after November 5, 2024.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed to interfere, impede, or otherwise diminish the right of employees to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing in order to establish earned paid sick time or other conditions of work in excess of the applicable minimum standards under the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. All or any portion of the earned paid sick time requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall not apply to employees covered by a bona fide collective bargaining agreement to the extent that such requirements are expressly waived in the collective bargaining agreement in clear and unambiguous terms.

4. With the exception noted in subsection 3, any waiver by an employee of rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed contrary to public policy and shall be void.

290.636. 1. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed to discourage or prohibit an employer from the adoption or retention of an earned paid sick time policy more generous than the one required herein.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed as diminishing the obligation of an employer to comply with any contract, collective bargaining agreement, employment benefit plan, or other agreement providing more generous paid sick time to an employee than required herein. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed as diminishing the rights of public employees regarding paid sick time or use of paid sick time as provided in the laws of Missouri and ordinances of political subdivisions pertaining to public employees.

290.639. 1. Sections 290.600 through 290.642 provide minimum requirements pertaining to earned paid sick time and shall not be construed to preempt, limit, or otherwise affect the applicability of any other law, regulation, requirement, policy, or standard that provides for greater accrual or use by employees of earned paid sick time or that extends other protections to employees.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be interpreted or applied to create a power or obligation contrary to any federal law, rule, or regulation.

290.642. Except as detailed in section 290.618, all of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are severable, and if any provision, including any section, subsection, subdivision, paragraph, sentence, or clause, or the application thereof to any person or circumstance, is found by a court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted, such decision shall not affect other provisions or applications of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that can be given effect without the invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted provision or application, and to this end the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are declared severable.

Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, their office could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. However, if the enactment of this proposal were to result in substantial additional litigation, their office may be required to request additional appropriations.

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated no fiscal impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated no impact on their agency.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated this initiative petition has no impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated this petition, if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated this proposal creates no direct obligations or requirements to their department that would result in a fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated this proposal could potentially fiscally impact their department however, at this time, there is no way to estimate said impact.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated:

This petition would amend provisions relating to the accumulation of sick time required for employees depending on how many employees are employed by the employer. It also has various requirements regarding how sick time can be used and procedures employers must use. Violations are deemed misdemeanors, and damages are allowed to be awarded in civil suits. It states that the DOLIR "may" create new notices, promulgate rules, and initiate outreach programs but that the DOLIR is not required to create notices if it requires the appropriation of funds. It also states that the DOLIR may inspect employment records and investigate complaints of noncompliance. Still, such inspection is not required if it requires the appropriation of funds, and the cost estimate would be zero.

The funding source will be from General Revenue if the DOLIR receives complaints to enforce it. Therefore the DOLIR estimates it would need two Regulatory Auditors and one Administrative Support Assistant person at an annual ongoing cost of $255,975 by 2027, plus an initial information technology (IT) component of $28,318 and office equipment of $25,011.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety indicated no impact for their department, Director's office.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated no impact anticipated by their department.

Officials from the Governor's Office indicated this proposal relating to employee leave does not financially impact their office as the proposal excludes government entities.

Officials from the House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated because this initiative petition exempts the state, any agency or commission of the state, etc., from the definition of employer, their department does not anticipate any fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated there is no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to employee leave does not financially impact their office due to an exemption for government entities in the initiative petition.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated there is no fiscal impact on the courts.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In fiscal year (FY) 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. Their office estimates $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated the proposed initiative petition creates a new offense under section 290.624 which could result in additional cases eligible for State Public Defender (SPD) representation. The number of additional cases is unknown and as a result the fiscal impact is unknown. However, if the offenses, which are classified as misdemeanors, were class D misdemeanors, jail time would not be a possible sentence and the offense therefore would not be eligible for SPD representation.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no fiscal impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated this petition does not apply to county governments under Section 6 for the definition of an employer. Clay County provides more generous sick leave than this measure as well.

They do estimate additional costs from this petition of $2,000 a year between the Circuit Court and Prosecutor to enforce the misdemeanor and civil action provisions.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county for this initiative petition proposing to amend Chapter 290, RSMo.

Officials from St. Louis County indicated this initiative petition has no apparent fiscal impact on their county.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this would have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact to their college.

Officials from St. Louis Community College indicated their college appears to offer benefits that exceed the petition and therefore they do not see a cost or cost savings with regard to the petition.

Officials from the Missouri Lottery indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the State Tax Commission indicated this initiative petition will not have a fiscal impact on their agency.

Officials from the Missouri Veterans Commission indicated this initiative petition creates no fiscal impact to their Commission. The definition of the term "employer" in the proposed section 290.600(6) specifically excludes the state and its agencies, so the requirements of the petition would not apply to the Commission.

Officials from the Missouri Ethics Commission indicated this initiative petition does not have fiscal impact on their Commission.

Officials from the Kansas Board of Police Commissioners indicated they are exempt as a political subdivision of the state.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated they predict no fiscal impact from this petition.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated this petition has no fiscal impact to their board.

Officials from the Children's Trust Fund indicated no impact.

Officials from the State Auditor's office indicated since this proposed initiative petition does not apply to government entities, this would have no fiscal impact on their office.

Lindsey Baker, Research Director, Missouri Budget Project indicated in summary, they estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state and local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue and decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy. She also provided the following information:

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Earned Sick Leave Petitions 24-025-042

We estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state & local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy.

In addition to helping employees by allowing them to address their health needs without losing their jobs or ability to pay their bills, paid sick leave has many benefits for employers, including a healthier workforce, reduced turnover, and increased productivity. The benefits of paid sick leave have been highlighted by the COVID-19 pandemic, illustrating the importance of workers being able to recover at home without lost wages and without risking spread of contagious disease in the workplace.

Several ballot measures have been filed (24-025-042) that would require employers to provide earned sick leave in Missouri. Though the measures vary slightly, each would require employers to provide a minimum of 3-7 days of paid leave to employees, depending on hours worked and size of business. If implemented, Missouri would join the seventeen states, plus the District of Columbia, who ensure employees can earn paid sick leave to care for themselves or family members.ⁱ

An estimated 211,000 Missourians and their families would benefit from the earned sick time provided through these initiatives, with low-wage workers disproportionately likely to benefit from this policy.ⁱⁱ Expanding earned sick leave in Missouri is estimated to provide a net savings to society of between $612.4-$774.1 million annually depending on the number of days provided.ⁱⁱⁱ

	3-5 Scenario*	5-7 Scenario*
Estimated Cost Savings	$1.26B	$1.29B
- Employment Related Savings	$436.73M	$466.6M
- Health Related Savings	$825.61M	$825.61M
Estimated Costs (Employer & State Admin)	$488.22M	$679.77M
Estimated Net Societal Benefit*	$774.11M	$612.44M

In the 3/5 scenario, small employers are required to offer at least three days of leave and large employers at least five days. The 5/7 scenario requires small employers to offer at least five days of paid sick leave and large employers to offer at least seven days of paid leave. A small employer defined as less than 15 employees.*

Societal Cost Savings from Earned Sick Leave in Missouri

Employment Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri's workforce would become stronger, more stable, and more productive leading to economic growth.

- Reduced Absenteeism. Access to earned sick leave allows workers to stay home, reducing the overall spread of illness in the workplace; this leads to fewer illnesses among workers and fewer overall days off work.^{iv}
- Reduced Turnover. Access to earned sick leave gives workers the ability to address their health needs and those of their families, without having to quit a job or risk being fired. Access to paid sick leave is associated with reduced job turnover, which in turn creates significant savings for businesses.^v
- Reduced Presenteeism. Employers who do not offer paid sick leave have higher rates of "presenteeism" or lost productivity due to employees working while injured or sick.^{vi} Offering paid sick leave reduces the likelihood of working at reduced capacity and allows workers to recover from illness or injury more quickly.

Health Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri would become a healthier state as workers would have the ability to care for themselves and their families, while simultaneously benefiting their communities.

- Reduced Flu Contagion in Society. Workers without paid sick leave are more likely to come to work sick, increasing the likelihood of spreading the illness.^{vii} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to stay home when ill, thus reducing the overall spread of influenza throughout the community.
- Reduced Workers Compensation Costs. Workers with access to paid leave are less likely to be injured on the job,^{viii} reducing overall workers comp claims and cost to employers.
- Reduced ER Visits. Paid sick leave is associated with fewer trips to the emergency room.^{ix} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to properly care for themselves and family members during an illness, preventing an escalation of the illness.
- Improved Nursing Home Care. Unpaid sick leave is especially problematic in nursing homes as the residents are especially vulnerable to the consequences of high turnover, absenteeism and presenteeism.^x Access to paid sick leave allows nursing home workers to take care of themselves so that they can better care for residents.

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Petitions 24-025-042

While previous estimates show a cost associated with state level administration and enforcement for earned sick leave of approximately $1 million, we also expect that earned sick leave will be associated with a significant potential for increased revenue collections & decreased spending on services associated with the cost savings outlined above.

- Increased revenue collections. A stronger and more productive workforce is associated with economic growth. Economic growth is in turn associated with growth in both state and local revenue as both sales & income tax collections rise due to increased spending and wages.
- Reductions in spending on services. When workers are able to care for themselves and their families (and others in their community) they are less likely to have minor illnesses escalate into costly health problems. This reduces the overall cost of health care, particularly among low-wage workers who are disproportionately likely to lack access to paid leave. This in turn reduces state and local spending on health other related public services.

As a result, we estimate the fiscal impact on state & local revenue of earned sick leave will be minimal as the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will offset the modest expenses associated with state level administration. While we are confident that a net savings will be realized, the size of the savings is too speculative to estimate exact fiscal impact.

Re: Proposal Related to Chapter 290, RSMo, Petition 2024-025-042

Dear Auditor Fitzpatrick:

A Better Balance is writing to submit our fact sheet titled "Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business" to accompany petition 24-025-042 and to inform the fiscal note process. We thank you for considering our submission.

A Better Balance, a national nonprofit advocacy organization with four regional offices, uses the power of the law to ensure that working individuals can care for themselves and their loved ones without jeopardizing their economic security. Through legislative advocacy, policy, direct legal services, strategic litigation, and public education, our organization works around the country to advance policies like paid sick leave, paid family and medical leave, quality childcare and eldercare, and anti-discrimination protections for pregnant workers and caregivers. From Arizona and Colorado to Duluth (MN) and beyond, our organization has worked on the growing number of paid sick leave laws now in effect.

The enclosed fact sheet summarizes research and data on the resoundingly positive effect that paid sick leave has on business. When paid sick leave policies are in place, businesses financially benefit from increased worker productivity, reduced spread of contagious illness in the workplace, and lower employee turnover. Research has also underscored that workers and the larger community also have better health outcomes overall when there is access to paid sick leave. As documented in the attached fact sheet, paid sick leave has been shown to work well for businesses and workers throughout the country.

Thank you for giving us the opportunity to submit this information. Please do not hesitate to contact A Better Balance at cgomez@abetterbalance.org if we can provide any additional assistance.

Sincerely,
A Better Balance

Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business

The research is clear: paid sick leave isn't just good for workers, it's good for business as well. Healthy workers are essential to a successful business and a strong economy. When workers have access to paid sick leave, they demonstrate increased job satisfaction, commitment, and morale, while employers—and their bottom lines—reap the benefits of increased worker performance and productivity and reduced worker turnover. And access to guaranteed paid sick leave is a vital component to keeping businesses open and safe through the COVID-19 pandemic and beyond.

Access to paid sick leave increases worker productivity and reduces the spread of contagious illness in the workplace, leading to direct savings for businesses.

- Workers with minor illnesses are less productive than their healthy co-workers.¹ Paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (when employees show up to work while sick), which costs businesses approximately $207.6 billion annually in reduced productivity.² After Washington State implemented its paid sick leave law, for example, the percentage of workers that went to work while sick decreased significantly.³
- Paid sick leave also reduces the spread of contagion between co-workers—further increasing productivity and labor in the workplace.⁴ Absenteeism caused by the introduction of flu-like illness in the workplace is estimated to cost employers up to 111 million workdays per year.⁵ Even before the pandemic, states with paid sick leave requirements saw a 40% decrease in influenza rates.⁶

Paid sick leave has proven to be particularly crucial to keeping businesses open during the COVID-19 pandemic.

- As the country with the highest cumulative number of COVID-19 cases,⁷ and the only one of the thirteen G12 countries with no paid sick leave,⁸ it is undeniable that the U.S. will need paid sick leave to end this crisis, to save lives, and to minimize disruption to businesses struggling to avoid the spread of COVID-19 in the workplace.
- Paid sick leave has been critical to keeping businesses open throughout the pandemic. One study found that states in which workers gained temporary access to paid sick leave through the federal Families First Coronavirus Response Act⁹ had around 400 fewer confirmed COVID-19 cases per day as a result.¹⁰

Employers with paid sick leave benefit from reduced worker turnover and better relationships with their employees, saving employers the cost of recruiting, interviewing, and training new hires.

- In general, worker turnover is estimated to cost employers the equivalent of 21% of a worker's annual compensation.¹¹ However, providing paid sick leave only increases labor costs by an average of 2.7 cents per hour worked¹² and workers with paid sick leave are less likely to leave their jobs,¹³ saving businesses money on turnover costs such as interviewing and training.¹⁴

- Paid sick leave also increases worker loyalty and job satisfaction—factors known to increase productivity and job retention.¹⁵ After Connecticut’s paid sick law went into effect, nearly 30% of surveyed employers reported improved employee morale, and over 20% reported increased employee motivation or loyalty.¹⁶
- Two years after paid sick leave went into effect in New York City, one employer reported that “the impact that I saw in my business was a much stronger bond between ourselves and our employees, higher productivity, and a more successful business, not a less successful business.”¹⁷

Paid sick leave also saves employers money by reducing the likelihood of workplace accidents.

- Throughout the country, direct and indirect costs associated with on-the-job injuries cost employers billions of dollars.¹⁸ Workers with paid sick leave are 28% less likely than workers without access to paid sick leave to be injured on the job.¹⁹

Lack of paid sick leave makes workers more likely to go to work while sick and puts co-workers and our communities at risk. With paid sick leave, our workplaces and communities are healthier, which improves the bottom line for employers.

- Access to sick leave will be essential to overcoming the COVID-19 pandemic, as evidenced by previous pandemics. For example, it is estimated that the lack of paid sick leave was responsible for 5 million incidents of flu-like illness during the H1N1 pandemic.²⁰
- In a simulated influenza epidemic, 72% of employees who caught the flu at work did so because of exposure to other employees attending work while sick; paid sick days would reduce flu incidences among workers by approximately 6% across all workplaces, and by over 7% in workplaces with 49 or fewer employees.²¹
- As explained above, access to paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (employees showing up to work while sick) and reduces overall contagion.²² Presenteeism is linked to the spread of harmful contagions to co-workers and customers.²³
- A study of data from the 2009 flu outbreak found that workers with paid sick leave were 30 percent more likely to be vaccinated and were more likely to seek treatment when they were sick with flu-like symptoms compared to those without paid sick leave.²⁴ This has proven true for COVID-19 as well—in June 2021, workers whose employers provided paid time off to get the vaccine or recover from any side effects were 24% more likely to have received at least one dose of the vaccine than workers whose employers provided no paid vaccine leave.²⁵
- A lack of access to paid sick days is particularly harmful for service industry workers. Nearly two-thirds of restaurant workers have cooked or served food while sick,²⁶ and in 2011, nearly one in five food service workers went to work vomiting or with diarrhea, creating dangerous health conditions.²⁷

- People without access to paid sick leave are 1.5x more likely to go to work while they have a contagious illness and are nearly twice as likely to send a sick child to school or daycare than those with access to it.²⁸
- States that have implemented paid sick leave laws had an 11% decrease of cases of flu-like illnesses in their first year after enactment.²⁹

Workers with paid sick leave are more likely to seek preventative care than workers without paid sick leave, leading to better health outcomes and less time away from work.

- People without paid sick days tend to be unable to make time for preventative health care, such as cancer screenings and flu shots, which makes it more likely that such workers will have more significant healthcare needs at later stages of an illness.³⁰
- Workers with access to paid sick days report better general health than workers without paid sick days and are less likely to delay preventive medical care for themselves or for their family.³¹

Paid sick leave has proven to work well for businesses all over the U.S., and experience shows that workers don't abuse paid sick leave.

- Business practices don't have to change to keep up with paid sick leave laws. In a survey of New York City employers after the city's paid sick law was implemented, 91% of employers reported no reduction in hiring, 97% indicated they did not reduce hours, about 94% did not raise prices, and nearly 85% of employers reported no change in their overall business costs.³²
 - In a similar survey of employers in Connecticut a year and a half after the state's paid sick law went into effect, nearly 90% of employers reported no reduction in hours, and about 85% did not raise prices.³³
- Paid sick leave laws stimulate economic growth. When San Francisco's paid sick law went into effect in 2007, the city's job growth actually exceeded that of nearby counties, despite unfounded fears that the law would cause an economic slowdown.³⁴
 - In comparison to other surrounding cities, Seattle saw greater increases in the number of employers in the city when its paid sick leave law was implemented,³⁵ and in general, job growth continued on an upward trend.³⁶
 - After New York City's paid sick days were implemented, the average wage for hourly workers increased and the average number of weekly absences declined.³⁷ On the law's first anniversary, the New York City government released a report touting its successful implementation and noting that since the law went into effect, "the city has had steady job growth and the lowest unemployment in six years."³⁸
- Workers don't abuse paid sick leave. After New York implemented its paid sick leave law, 98% of employers reported no cases of employee abuse of sick days.³⁹

- Employers know that paid sick leave laws work. Two years after New York City’s paid sick law was implemented, a staggering 86% of New York City employers polled supported the law.⁴⁰
- Studies in Washington, D.C. and Seattle also saw no negative economic effects following implementation of their paid sick leave laws in either job loss or movement of businesses out of the city. A report from the Washington D.C. Auditor, issued five years after passage of the District’s sick leave law, found that the law “did not have the economic impact of encouraging business owners to move a business from the District nor did the [law] have the economic impact of discouraging business owners to locate a business in the District of Columbia.”⁴¹ Likewise, a study of the economic impact of Seattle’s sick leave law found that a “preliminary look at available data shows no widespread negative economic impact as some opponents of the ordinance feared.”⁴²
- Recognizing the benefits of paid sick leave, San Francisco, Washington, D.C., and New York City—all among the earliest adopters of paid sick leave laws—later expanded their paid sick leave laws, underscoring how well these laws are working for workers, employers, and communities.

(E) A person for whom the employee is responsible for providing or arranging health or safety-related care, including but not limited to helping that individual obtain diagnostic, preventative, routine, or therapeutic health treatment or ensuring the person is safe following domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking.

(8) “Health care professional,” any individual licensed under federal or any state law to provide medical or emergency services, including but not limited to doctors, nurses, certified nurse midwives, mental health professionals, and emergency room personnel.

(11) “Same hourly rate”, means the following:

(A) For employees paid on the basis of a single hourly rate, the same hourly rate shall be the employee’s regular hourly rate.

(B) For employees who are paid multiple hourly rates of pay from the same employer, the same hourly rate shall be either:

(i) the wages the employee would have been paid for the hours absent during use of earned paid sick time if the employee had worked; or,

(ii) the weighted average of all hourly rates of pay during the previous pay period.

Whatever method the employer uses, the employer must use a consistent method for each employee throughout a year.

(C) For employees who are paid a salary, the same hourly rate shall be determined by dividing the wages the employee earns in the previous pay period by the total number of hours worked during the previous pay period. For determining total number of hours worked during the previous pay period, employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1), the Fair Labor Standards Act, shall be assumed to work 40 hours in each work week unless their normal work week is less than 40 hours, in which case earned paid sick time shall accrue and the same hourly rate shall be calculated based on the employee’s normal work week. Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(D) For employees paid on a piece rate or a fee-for-service basis, the same hourly rate shall be a reasonable calculation of the wages or fees the employee would have received for the piece work, service, or part thereof, if the employee had worked. Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(E) For employees who are paid on a commission basis (whether base wage plus commission or commission only), the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the base wage or the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(F) For employees who receive and retain compensation in the form of gratuities in addition to wages, the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the employee’s regular hourly rate or 100% of the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502 without deduction of any tips as a credit.

(12) “Sexual assault”, as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(13) “Stalking”, as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(14) “Year”, a regular and consecutive twelve-month period as determined by the employer; except that for the purposes of section 290.615 and section 290.627, “year” shall mean a calendar year.

290.603. 1. Employees of an employer with fifteen or more employees shall accrue a minimum of one hour of earned paid sick time for every thirty hours worked, but such employees shall not be entitled to use more than fifty-six hours of earned paid sick time per year, unless the employer selects a higher limit.

2. Employees of an employer with fewer than fifteen employees shall accrue a minimum of one hour of earned paid sick time for every thirty hours worked, but such employees shall not be entitled to use more than forty hours of earned paid sick time per year, unless the employer selects a higher limit.

3. In determining the number of employees of an employer, all employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation on a full-time, part-time, or temporary basis shall be counted. In situations in which the number of employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation per week fluctuates above and below 15 employees per week over the course of a year, an employer is required to provide earned paid sick time pursuant to subsection (1) of this section if it maintained fifteen or more employees in the state on the payroll for some portion of a working day in each of twenty or more different calendar weeks, including any periods of leave, and whether or not the weeks were consecutive, in either the current or the preceding year (irrespective of whether the same individuals were in employment in each working day).

4. All employees shall accrue earned paid sick time as follows:

(A) Earned paid sick time as provided in this section shall begin to accrue at the commencement of employment or May 1, 2025, whichever is later. An employee shall be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued. An employer may provide all earned paid sick time that an employee is expected to accrue in a year at the beginning of the year.

(B) Employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1) of the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act will be assumed to work forty hours in each work week for purposes of earned paid sick time accrual unless their normal work week is less than forty hours, in which case earned paid sick time accrues based upon that normal work week.

(C) Up to 80 hours of earned paid sick time shall be carried over to the following year if the employee has any unused accrued earned paid sick time at the end of the year, but this law does not require an employer to permit an employee to use more than the applicable number of hours of earned paid sick time per year as set forth in subsection (1) and (2) of this section. Alternatively, in lieu of carryover of unused earned paid sick time from one year to the next, an employer may pay an employee for unused earned paid sick time at the end of a year which could be carried over and provide the employee with an amount of paid sick time that meets or exceeds the requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that is available for the employee's immediate use at the beginning of the subsequent year.

(D) If an employee is transferred to a separate division, entity, or location, but remains employed by the same employer, the employee is entitled to all earned paid sick time accrued at the prior division, entity, or location and is entitled to use all earned paid sick time as provided in this section. When there is a separation from employment and the employee is rehired within nine months of separation by the same employer, previously accrued earned paid sick time that had not been used shall be reinstated. Further, the employee shall be entitled to use accrued earned paid sick time and accrue additional earned paid sick time at the re-commencement of employment.

(E) When a different employer succeeds or takes the place of an existing employer, all employees of the original employer who remain employed by the successor employer are entitled to all earned paid sick time they accrued when employed by the original employer, and are entitled to use earned paid sick time previously accrued.

(F) At its discretion, an employer may loan earned paid sick time to an employee in advance of accrual by such employee.

5. Any employer with a paid leave policy, such as a paid time off policy, who makes available an amount of paid leave sufficient to meet the accrual requirements of this section that may be used for the same purposes and under the same conditions as earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642 is not required to provide additional paid sick time under this section.

6. Except as specifically provided in this section, nothing in this section shall be construed as requiring financial or other reimbursement to an employee from an employer upon the employee's termination, resignation, retirement, or other separation from employment for accrued earned paid sick time that has not been used.

7. Employees shall not accrue earned paid sick time before May 1, 2025. Employees who are employed or who commence employment on or after May 1, 2025 shall accrue earned paid sick time and be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued in accordance with sections 290.600 through 290.642. The Department may develop model posters and notices, engage in rule-making, initiate outreach programs, and engage in other activities for implementation of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 as authorized by those sections before May 1, 2025.

290.606. 1. Earned paid sick time shall be provided to an employee by an employer for:

(A) An employee's mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for preventative medical care;

(B) Care of a family member with a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs preventative medical care;

(C) Closure of the employee's place of business by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or an employee's need to care for a child whose school or place of care has been closed by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or care for oneself or a family member when it has been determined by the health authorities having jurisdiction or by a health care provider that the employee's or family member's presence in the community may jeopardize the health of others because of his or her exposure to a communicable disease, whether or not the employee or family member has actually contracted the communicable disease; or

(D) Absence necessary due to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, provided the leave is to allow the employee to obtain for the employee or the employee's family member:

(i) Medical attention needed to recover from physical or psychological injury or disability caused by domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking;

(ii) Services from a victim services organization;

(iii) Psychological or other counseling;

(iv) Relocation or taking steps to secure an existing home due to the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or

(v) Legal services, including preparing for or participating in any civil or criminal legal proceeding related to or resulting from the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking.

2. Earned paid sick time shall be provided upon the request of an employee. Such request may be made orally, in writing, by electronic means, or by any other means acceptable to the employer. When possible, the request shall include the expected duration of the absence.

3. When the use of earned paid sick time is foreseeable, the employee shall make a good faith effort to provide notice of the need for such time to the employer in advance of the use of the earned paid sick time and shall make a reasonable effort to schedule the use of earned paid sick time in a manner that does not unduly disrupt the operations of the employer. Where such need is not foreseeable, an employer may require an employee to provide notice of the need for the use of earned paid sick time as soon as practicable.

4. An employer that requires notice of the need to use earned paid sick time where the need is not foreseeable shall provide a written policy that contains procedures for the employee to provide notice. An employer that has not provided to the employee a copy of its written policy for providing such notice shall not deny earned paid sick time to the employee based on non-compliance with such a policy.

5. An employer may not require, as a condition of an employee's taking earned paid sick time, that the employee search for or find a replacement worker to cover the hours during which the employee is using earned paid sick time.

6. Earned paid sick time may be used in the smaller of hourly increments or the smallest increment that the employer's payroll system uses to account for absences or use of other time.

7. For earned paid sick time of three or more consecutive work days, an employer may require reasonable documentation that the earned paid sick time has been used for a purpose covered by subsection (1) of this section.

(A) Documentation signed by a health care professional indicating that earned paid sick time is necessary shall be considered reasonable documentation for purposes of this section.

(B) In cases of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, if the employer requests, one of the following types of documentation selected by the employee shall be considered reasonable documentation: (i) a police report indicating that the employee or the employee's family member was a victim of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; (ii) a written statement from an employee or agent of a victim service provider affirming that the employee or employee's family member is or was receiving services from a victim service provider; (iii) documentation signed by a health care professional from whom the employee or employee's family member sought assistance relating to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking or the effects thereof; (vi) a court document indicating that an employee or employee's family member is or was involved in a legal action related to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or (v) a written statement from the employee affirming that the employee or employee's family member is taking or took earned paid sick time for a qualifying purpose of subsection (1) of this section.

(C) An employer may not require that the documentation explain the nature of the illness, details of the underlying health needs, or the details of the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, unless otherwise required by law.

290.609. 1. It shall be unlawful for an employer or any other person to interfere with, restrain, or deny the exercise of, or the attempt to exercise, any right protected under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. An employer shall not take retaliatory personnel action or discriminate against an employee or former employee because the individual has exercised rights protected under sections 290.600 through 290.642. Such rights include, but are not limited to, the right to request or use earned paid sick time pursuant to sections 290.600 through 290.642; the right to file a complaint or inform any person about any employer's alleged violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642; the right to participate in any investigation, hearing, or proceeding or cooperate with or assist the Department in any investigations of alleged violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642; and the right to inform any person of his or her potential rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. It shall be unlawful for an employer's absence control policy to count earned paid sick time taken under sections 290.600 through 290.642 as an absence that may lead to or result in discipline, discharge, demotion, suspension, or any other adverse action.

4. Protections of this section shall apply to any individual who mistakenly but in good faith alleges violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

290.612. 1. Employers shall give employees a written notice about earned paid sick time within fourteen calendar days of the commencement of employment or on April 15, 2025, whichever is later, which must include the following information: (1) beginning May 1, 2025, employees accrue and are entitled to earned paid sick time at the rate one hour of earned paid sick time for every 30 hours of work, and may use earned paid sick time, subject to the limits and terms under sections 290.600 through 290.642 of Missouri law, (2) it is prohibited for an employer to take retaliatory personnel action against employees who request or use earned paid sick time as allowed by law, (3) each employee has the right to bring a civil action if earned paid sick time as required by sections 290.600 through 290.642 is denied by the employer or the employee is subjected to retaliatory personnel action by the employer for exercising the employee's rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642; and, (4) the contact information for the Department. Notice shall be provided by the Employer to the employee on a single piece of paper, at least 8.5 x 11, in no less than 14-point font.

2. Beginning April 15, 2025, employers shall display a poster that contains the information required in subsection (1) of this section in a conspicuous and accessible place in each establishment where such employees are employed, provided that such poster has been made available by the Department.

3. The Department may create and make available to employers, model notices and posters that contain the information required under subsection (1) of this section for employers' use in complying with subsections (1) and (2) of this section. Nothing in this subsection shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department to create or make available notices or posters if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.615. 1. Employers shall retain records documenting hours worked by employees and earned paid sick time taken by employees, for a period of not less than three years, and shall allow the Department access to such records, with appropriate notice and at a mutually agreeable time, to monitor compliance with the requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. To the extent permitted by law, the Director may inspect such records, and the records shall be open for inspection by the Director by appointment. Where the records required under this section are kept outside the state, the records shall be made available to the Director upon demand. Every such employer shall furnish to the Director on demand a sworn statement of time records and information upon forms prescribed or approved by the Director. All the records and information obtained by the Department are confidential and shall be disclosed only on order of a court of competent jurisdiction.

3. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department or Director to access or inspect records or to create forms relating to the inspection of records if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.618. 1. The Department may, in accordance with chapter 536, promulgate rules for the implementation, enforcement, and administration of sections 290.600 through 290.642. Any rule or portion of a rule, as that term is defined in section 536.010, that is created under the authority delegated in this section shall become effective only if it complies with and is subject to all of the provisions of chapter 536 and, if applicable, section 536.028. This section and chapter 536 are nonseverable and if any of the powers vested with the general assembly pursuant to chapter 536 to review, to delay the effective date, or to disapprove and annul a rule are subsequently held unconstitutional, then the grant of rulemaking authority and any rule proposed or adopted after November 5, 2024, shall be invalid and void.

290.621. 1. The Department may investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to $500 per day of each day of a continuing violation. A final decision of the department is subject to review in accordance with the provisions of chapter 536.

2. The Department may develop and implement an outreach program to inform employees, parents, and persons who are under the care of a health care provider about the availability of earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642. This program may include the distribution of notices and other written materials to child care and elder care providers, domestic violence shelters, schools, hospitals, community health centers and other health care providers in Missouri.

3. A municipality, county, city, town, or village may adopt ordinances, rules, and regulations to investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, with respect to employers within, or employees performing work while physically present in, the geographic boundaries of the municipality, county, city, town, or village. Any such ordinance, rule, or regulation shall be consistent with this law and any Department rules or regulations and system for compliance and enforcement. The municipality, county, city, town, or village may exercise such powers as allowed by any applicable charter or ordinance, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to the maximum allowed for an ordinance violation. Before investigating or seeking to resolve any complaint between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall give notice to the Department with a copy of the complaint and, within 14 days of such notice, the Department may intervene as of right and participate in the matter to ensure that the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642 or, alternatively, the Department may institute its own proceedings in which case the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall refrain from acting on the matter so long as the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642. If the Department does not, within 14 days, intervene or instigate its own proceedings, the municipality, county, city, town, or village may, without the Department, investigate and attempt to resolve the complaint and take other additional means within its power to enforce sections 290.600 through 290.642 against the subject of the complaint. In no event shall an employer be subject to compliance proceedings arising out of a single set of facts after having already been subjected to a final compliance order by another governmental entity.

4. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department, a municipality, county, city, town, or village to conduct investigations and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, to establish and implement a system to receive or resolve complaints, to establish additional means of enforcement, or to conduct outreach and education, including the creation of notices and other written materials, concerning sections 290.600 through 290.642, if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.624. 1. Any employer who willfully violates or fails to comply with any of the provisions and requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be guilty of a class C misdemeanor; provided, however, that an employer who willfully violates the notice and posting requirements of section 290.612 shall be guilty of an infraction.

2. For purposes of this section, each day of violation or failure to comply and each employee affected shall constitute a separate offense.

290.627. 1. Any individual who claims to have been aggrieved by a failure of an employer to comply with any portion of sections 290.600 through 290.642, including but not limited to the failure to provide earned paid sick time or to allow employees to use such time consistent with sections 290.600 through 290.642, or who claims to have suffered a retaliatory personnel action, shall have a right of action and may commence a civil action in the appropriate court of jurisdiction within three years of the accrual of the cause of action, to obtain appropriate relief with respect to such unlawful violation. Such action may be brought without first filing an administrative complaint.

2. In a civil action under this section, if the court finds a violation has occurred, the court may grant as relief, as it deems appropriate and to the extent permitted by law, any permanent or temporary injunction, the full amount of any unpaid earned sick time plus any actual damages suffered as the result of the employer's violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642, an additional amount equal to twice any unpaid earned sick time as liquidated damages, costs, and reasonable attorney's fees as may be allowed by the court, and other legal or equitable relief as may be appropriate to remedy the violation, including, without limitation, reinstatement to employment and back pay.

290.630. 1. Except as otherwise required by law, an employer may not require disclosure of details relating to an employee's or an employee's family member's health information, domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking as a condition of providing earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. Unless as otherwise required by law, any health or safety information possessed by an employer regarding an employee or employee's family member must:

(A) be maintained on a separate form and in a separate file from other personnel information;

(B) be treated as confidential medical records; and

(C) not be disclosed except to the affected employee or with the express written permission of the affected employee.

290.633. 1. With respect to employees covered by a valid collective bargaining agreement in effect on November 5, 2024, no provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply until the stated expiration date in the collective bargaining agreement; however, further the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply upon any such agreement's renewal, extension, amendment, or modification in any respect after November 5, 2024.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed to interfere, impede, or otherwise diminish the right of employees to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing in order to establish earned paid sick time or other conditions of work in excess of the applicable minimum standards under the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. All or any portion of the earned paid sick time requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall not apply to employees covered by a bona fide collective bargaining agreement to the extent that such requirements are expressly waived in the collective bargaining agreement in clear and unambiguous terms.

4. With the exception noted in subsection 3, any waiver by an employee of rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed contrary to public policy and shall be void.

290.636. 1. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed to discourage or prohibit an employer from the adoption or retention of an earned paid sick time policy more generous than the one required herein.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed as diminishing the obligation of an employer to comply with any contract, collective bargaining agreement, employment benefit plan, or other agreement providing more generous paid sick time to an employee than required herein. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed as diminishing the rights of public employees regarding paid sick time or use of paid sick time as provided in the laws of Missouri and ordinances of political subdivisions pertaining to public employees.

290.639. 1. Sections 290.600 through 290.642 provide minimum requirements pertaining to earned paid sick time and shall not be construed to preempt, limit, or otherwise affect the applicability of any other law, regulation, requirement, policy, or standard that provides for greater accrual or use by employees of earned paid sick time or that extends other protections to employees.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be interpreted or applied to create a power or obligation contrary to any federal law, rule, or regulation.

290.642. Except as detailed in section 290.618, all of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are severable, and if any provision, including any section, subsection, subdivision, paragraph, sentence, or clause, or the application thereof to any person or circumstance, is found by a court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted, such decision shall not affect other provisions or applications of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that can be given effect without the invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted provision or application, and to this end the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are declared severable.

Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, their office could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. However, if the enactment of this proposal were to result in substantial additional litigation, their office may be required to request additional appropriations.

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated no fiscal impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated no impact on their agency.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated this initiative petition has no impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated this petition, if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated this proposal creates no direct obligations or requirements to their department that would result in a fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated this proposal could potentially fiscally impact their department however, at this time, there is no way to estimate said impact.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated:

This petition would amend provisions relating to the accumulation of sick time required for employees depending on how many employees are employed by the employer. It also has various requirements regarding how sick time can be used and procedures employers must use. Violations are deemed misdemeanors, and damages are allowed to be awarded in civil suits. It states that the DOLIR "may" create new notices, promulgate rules, and initiate outreach programs but that the DOLIR is not required to create notices if it requires the appropriation of funds. It also states that the DOLIR may inspect employment records and investigate complaints of noncompliance. Still, such inspection is not required if it requires the appropriation of funds, and the cost estimate would be zero.

The funding source will be from General Revenue if the DOLIR receives complaints to enforce it. Therefore the DOLIR estimates it would need two Regulatory Auditors and one Administrative Support Assistant person at an annual ongoing cost of $255,975 by 2027, plus an initial information technology (IT) component of $28,318 and office equipment of $25,011.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety indicated no impact for their department, Director's office.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated no impact anticipated by their department.

Officials from the Governor's Office indicated this proposal relating to employee leave does not financially impact their office as the proposal excludes government entities.

Officials from the House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated because this initiative petition exempts the state, any agency or commission of the state, etc., from the definition of employer, their department does not anticipate any fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated there is no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to employee leave does not financially impact their office due to an exemption for government entities in the initiative petition.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated there is no fiscal impact on the courts.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In fiscal year (FY) 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. Their office estimates $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated the proposed initiative petition creates a new offense under section 290.624 which could result in additional cases eligible for State Public Defender (SPD) representation. The number of additional cases is unknown and as a result the fiscal impact is unknown. However, if the offenses, which are classified as misdemeanors, were class D misdemeanors, jail time would not be a possible sentence and the offense therefore would not be eligible for SPD representation.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no fiscal impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated this petition does not apply to county governments under Section 6 for the definition of an employer. Clay County provides more generous sick leave than this measure as well.

They do estimate additional costs from this petition of $2,000 a year between the Circuit Court and Prosecutor to enforce the misdemeanor and civil action provisions.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county for this initiative petition proposing to amend Chapter 290, RSMo.

Officials from St. Louis County indicated this initiative petition has no apparent fiscal impact on their county.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this would have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact to their college.

Officials from St. Louis Community College indicated their college appears to offer benefits that exceed the petition and therefore they do not see a cost or cost savings with regard to the petition.

Officials from the Missouri Lottery indicated no fiscal impact to their agency.

Officials from the State Tax Commission indicated this initiative petition will not have a fiscal impact on their agency.

Officials from the Missouri Veterans Commission indicated this initiative petition creates no fiscal impact to their Commission. The definition of the term "employer" in the proposed section 290.600(6) specifically excludes the state and its agencies, so the requirements of the petition would not apply to the Commission.

Officials from the Missouri Ethics Commission indicated this initiative petition does not have fiscal impact on their Commission.

Officials from the Kansas Board of Police Commissioners indicated they are exempt as a political subdivision of the state.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated they predict no fiscal impact from this petition.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated this petition has no fiscal impact to their board.

Officials from the Children's Trust Fund indicated no impact.

Officials from the State Auditor's office indicated since this proposed initiative petition does not apply to government entities, this would have no fiscal impact on their office.

Lindsey Baker, Research Director, Missouri Budget Project indicated in summary, they estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state and local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue and decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy. She also provided the following information:

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Earned Sick Leave Petitions 24-025-042

We estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state & local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy.

In addition to helping employees by allowing them to address their health needs without losing their jobs or ability to pay their bills, paid sick leave has many benefits for employers, including a healthier workforce, reduced turnover, and increased productivity. The benefits of paid sick leave have been highlighted by the COVID-19 pandemic, illustrating the importance of workers being able to recover at home without lost wages and without risking spread of contagious disease in the workplace.

Several ballot measures have been filed (24-025-042) that would require employers to provide earned sick leave in Missouri. Though the measures vary slightly, each would require employers to provide a minimum of 3-7 days of paid leave to employees, depending on hours worked and size of business. If implemented, Missouri would join the seventeen states, plus the District of Columbia, who ensure employees can earn paid sick leave to care for themselves or family members.ⁱ

An estimated 211,000 Missourians and their families would benefit from the earned sick time provided through these initiatives, with low-wage workers disproportionately likely to benefit from this policy.ⁱⁱ Expanding earned sick leave in Missouri is estimated to provide a net savings to society of between $612.4-$774.1 million annually depending on the number of days provided.ⁱⁱⁱ

	3-5 Scenario*	5-7 Scenario*
Estimated Cost Savings	$1.26B	$1.29B
- Employment Related Savings	$436.73M	$466.6M
- Health Related Savings	$825.61M	$825.61M
Estimated Costs (Employer & State Admin)	$488.22M	$679.77M
Estimated Net Societal Benefit*	$774.11M	$612.44M

In the 3/5 scenario, small employers are required to offer at least three days of leave and large employers at least five days. The 5/7 scenario requires small employers to offer at least five days of paid sick leave and large employers to offer at least seven days of paid leave. A small employer defined as less than 15 employees.*

Societal Cost Savings from Earned Sick Leave in Missouri

Employment Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri's workforce would become stronger, more stable, and more productive leading to economic growth.

- Reduced Absenteeism. Access to earned sick leave allows workers to stay home, reducing the overall spread of illness in the workplace; this leads to fewer illnesses among workers and fewer overall days off work.^{iv}
- Reduced Turnover. Access to earned sick leave gives workers the ability to address their health needs and those of their families, without having to quit a job or risk being fired. Access to paid sick leave is associated with reduced job turnover, which in turn creates significant savings for businesses.^v
- Reduced Presenteeism. Employers who do not offer paid sick leave have higher rates of "presenteeism" or lost productivity due to employees working while injured or sick.^{vi} Offering paid sick leave reduces the likelihood of working at reduced capacity and allows workers to recover from illness or injury more quickly.

Health Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri would become a healthier state as workers would have the ability to care for themselves and their families, while simultaneously benefiting their communities.

- Reduced Flu Contagion in Society. Workers without paid sick leave are more likely to come to work sick, increasing the likelihood of spreading the illness.^{vii} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to stay home when ill, thus reducing the overall spread of influenza throughout the community.
- Reduced Workers Compensation Costs. Workers with access to paid leave are less likely to be injured on the job,^{viii} reducing overall workers comp claims and cost to employers.
- Reduced ER Visits. Paid sick leave is associated with fewer trips to the emergency room.^{ix} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to properly care for themselves and family members during an illness, preventing an escalation of the illness.
- Improved Nursing Home Care. Unpaid sick leave is especially problematic in nursing homes as the residents are especially vulnerable to the consequences of high turnover, absenteeism and presenteeism.^x Access to paid sick leave allows nursing home workers to take care of themselves so that they can better care for residents.

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Petitions 24-025-042

While previous estimates show a cost associated with state level administration and enforcement for earned sick leave of approximately $1 million, we also expect that earned sick leave will be associated with a significant potential for increased revenue collections & decreased spending on services associated with the cost savings outlined above.

- Increased revenue collections. A stronger and more productive workforce is associated with economic growth. Economic growth is in turn associated with growth in both state and local revenue as both sales & income tax collections rise due to increased spending and wages.
- Reductions in spending on services. When workers are able to care for themselves and their families (and others in their community) they are less likely to have minor illnesses escalate into costly health problems. This reduces the overall cost of health care, particularly among low-wage workers who are disproportionately likely to lack access to paid leave. This in turn reduces state and local spending on health other related public services.

As a result, we estimate the fiscal impact on state & local revenue of earned sick leave will be minimal as the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will offset the modest expenses associated with state level administration. While we are confident that a net savings will be realized, the size of the savings is too speculative to estimate exact fiscal impact.

Re: Proposal Related to Chapter 290, RSMo, Petition 2024-025-042

Dear Auditor Fitzpatrick:

A Better Balance is writing to submit our fact sheet titled "Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business" to accompany petition 24-025-042 and to inform the fiscal note process. We thank you for considering our submission.

A Better Balance, a national nonprofit advocacy organization with four regional offices, uses the power of the law to ensure that working individuals can care for themselves and their loved ones without jeopardizing their economic security. Through legislative advocacy, policy, direct legal services, strategic litigation, and public education, our organization works around the country to advance policies like paid sick leave, paid family and medical leave, quality childcare and eldercare, and anti-discrimination protections for pregnant workers and caregivers. From Arizona and Colorado to Duluth (MN) and beyond, our organization has worked on the growing number of paid sick leave laws now in effect.

The enclosed fact sheet summarizes research and data on the resoundingly positive effect that paid sick leave has on business. When paid sick leave policies are in place, businesses financially benefit from increased worker productivity, reduced spread of contagious illness in the workplace, and lower employee turnover. Research has also underscored that workers and the larger community also have better health outcomes overall when there is access to paid sick leave. As documented in the attached fact sheet, paid sick leave has been shown to work well for businesses and workers throughout the country.

Thank you for giving us the opportunity to submit this information. Please do not hesitate to contact A Better Balance at cgomez@abetterbalance.org if we can provide any additional assistance.

Sincerely,
A Better Balance

Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business

The research is clear: paid sick leave isn't just good for workers, it's good for business as well. Healthy workers are essential to a successful business and a strong economy. When workers have access to paid sick leave, they demonstrate increased job satisfaction, commitment, and morale, while employers—and their bottom lines—reap the benefits of increased worker performance and productivity and reduced worker turnover. And access to guaranteed paid sick leave is a vital component to keeping businesses open and safe through the COVID-19 pandemic and beyond.

Access to paid sick leave increases worker productivity and reduces the spread of contagious illness in the workplace, leading to direct savings for businesses.

- Workers with minor illnesses are less productive than their healthy co-workers.¹ Paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (when employees show up to work while sick), which costs businesses approximately $207.6 billion annually in reduced productivity.² After Washington State implemented its paid sick leave law, for example, the percentage of workers that went to work while sick decreased significantly.³
- Paid sick leave also reduces the spread of contagion between co-workers—further increasing productivity and labor in the workplace.⁴ Absenteeism caused by the introduction of flu-like illness in the workplace is estimated to cost employers up to 111 million workdays per year.⁵ Even before the pandemic, states with paid sick leave requirements saw a 40% decrease in influenza rates.⁶

Paid sick leave has proven to be particularly crucial to keeping businesses open during the COVID-19 pandemic.

- As the country with the highest cumulative number of COVID-19 cases,⁷ and the only one of the thirteen G12 countries with no paid sick leave,⁸ it is undeniable that the U.S. will need paid sick leave to end this crisis, to save lives, and to minimize disruption to businesses struggling to avoid the spread of COVID-19 in the workplace.
- Paid sick leave has been critical to keeping businesses open throughout the pandemic. One study found that states in which workers gained temporary access to paid sick leave through the federal Families First Coronavirus Response Act⁹ had around 400 fewer confirmed COVID-19 cases per day as a result.¹⁰

Employers with paid sick leave benefit from reduced worker turnover and better relationships with their employees, saving employers the cost of recruiting, interviewing, and training new hires.

- In general, worker turnover is estimated to cost employers the equivalent of 21% of a worker's annual compensation.¹¹ However, providing paid sick leave only increases labor costs by an average of 2.7 cents per hour worked¹² and workers with paid sick leave are less likely to leave their jobs,¹³ saving businesses money on turnover costs such as interviewing and training.¹⁴

- Paid sick leave also increases worker loyalty and job satisfaction—factors known to increase productivity and job retention.¹⁵ After Connecticut’s paid sick law went into effect, nearly 30% of surveyed employers reported improved employee morale, and over 20% reported increased employee motivation or loyalty.¹⁶
- Two years after paid sick leave went into effect in New York City, one employer reported that “the impact that I saw in my business was a much stronger bond between ourselves and our employees, higher productivity, and a more successful business, not a less successful business.”¹⁷

Paid sick leave also saves employers money by reducing the likelihood of workplace accidents.

- Throughout the country, direct and indirect costs associated with on-the-job injuries cost employers billions of dollars.¹⁸ Workers with paid sick leave are 28% less likely than workers without access to paid sick leave to be injured on the job.¹⁹

Lack of paid sick leave makes workers more likely to go to work while sick and puts co-workers and our communities at risk. With paid sick leave, our workplaces and communities are healthier, which improves the bottom line for employers.

- Access to sick leave will be essential to overcoming the COVID-19 pandemic, as evidenced by previous pandemics. For example, it is estimated that the lack of paid sick leave was responsible for 5 million incidents of flu-like illness during the H1N1 pandemic.²⁰
- In a simulated influenza epidemic, 72% of employees who caught the flu at work did so because of exposure to other employees attending work while sick; paid sick days would reduce flu incidences among workers by approximately 6% across all workplaces, and by over 7% in workplaces with 49 or fewer employees.²¹
- As explained above, access to paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (employees showing up to work while sick) and reduces overall contagion.²² Presenteeism is linked to the spread of harmful contagions to co-workers and customers.²³
- A study of data from the 2009 flu outbreak found that workers with paid sick leave were 30 percent more likely to be vaccinated and were more likely to seek treatment when they were sick with flu-like symptoms compared to those without paid sick leave.²⁴ This has proven true for COVID-19 as well—in June 2021, workers whose employers provided paid time off to get the vaccine or recover from any side effects were 24% more likely to have received at least one dose of the vaccine than workers whose employers provided no paid vaccine leave.²⁵
- A lack of access to paid sick days is particularly harmful for service industry workers. Nearly two-thirds of restaurant workers have cooked or served food while sick,²⁶ and in 2011, nearly one in five food service workers went to work vomiting or with diarrhea, creating dangerous health conditions.²⁷

- People without access to paid sick leave are 1.5x more likely to go to work while they have a contagious illness and are nearly twice as likely to send a sick child to school or daycare than those with access to it.²⁸
- States that have implemented paid sick leave laws had an 11% decrease of cases of flu-like illnesses in their first year after enactment.²⁹

Workers with paid sick leave are more likely to seek preventative care than workers without paid sick leave, leading to better health outcomes and less time away from work.

- People without paid sick days tend to be unable to make time for preventative health care, such as cancer screenings and flu shots, which makes it more likely that such workers will have more significant healthcare needs at later stages of an illness.³⁰
- Workers with access to paid sick days report better general health than workers without paid sick days and are less likely to delay preventive medical care for themselves or for their family.³¹

Paid sick leave has proven to work well for businesses all over the U.S., and experience shows that workers don't abuse paid sick leave.

- Business practices don't have to change to keep up with paid sick leave laws. In a survey of New York City employers after the city's paid sick law was implemented, 91% of employers reported no reduction in hiring, 97% indicated they did not reduce hours, about 94% did not raise prices, and nearly 85% of employers reported no change in their overall business costs.³²
 - In a similar survey of employers in Connecticut a year and a half after the state's paid sick law went into effect, nearly 90% of employers reported no reduction in hours, and about 85% did not raise prices.³³
- Paid sick leave laws stimulate economic growth. When San Francisco's paid sick law went into effect in 2007, the city's job growth actually exceeded that of nearby counties, despite unfounded fears that the law would cause an economic slowdown.³⁴
 - In comparison to other surrounding cities, Seattle saw greater increases in the number of employers in the city when its paid sick leave law was implemented,³⁵ and in general, job growth continued on an upward trend.³⁶
 - After New York City's paid sick days were implemented, the average wage for hourly workers increased and the average number of weekly absences declined.³⁷ On the law's first anniversary, the New York City government released a report touting its successful implementation and noting that since the law went into effect, "the city has had steady job growth and the lowest unemployment in six years."³⁸
- Workers don't abuse paid sick leave. After New York implemented its paid sick leave law, 98% of employers reported no cases of employee abuse of sick days.³⁹

- Employers know that paid sick leave laws work. Two years after New York City’s paid sick law was implemented, a staggering 86% of New York City employers polled supported the law.⁴⁰
- Studies in Washington, D.C. and Seattle also saw no negative economic effects following implementation of their paid sick leave laws in either job loss or movement of businesses out of the city. A report from the Washington D.C. Auditor, issued five years after passage of the District’s sick leave law, found that the law “did not have the economic impact of encouraging business owners to move a business from the District nor did the [law] have the economic impact of discouraging business owners to locate a business in the District of Columbia.”⁴¹ Likewise, a study of the economic impact of Seattle’s sick leave law found that a “preliminary look at available data shows no widespread negative economic impact as some opponents of the ordinance feared.”⁴²
- Recognizing the benefits of paid sick leave, San Francisco, Washington, D.C., and New York City—all among the earliest adopters of paid sick leave laws—later expanded their paid sick leave laws, underscoring how well these laws are working for workers, employers, and communities.

(A) For employees paid on the basis of a single hourly rate, the same hourly rate shall be the employee’s regular hourly rate.

(B) For employees who are paid multiple hourly rates of pay from the same employer, the same hourly rate shall be either:

(i) the wages the employee would have been paid for the hours absent during use of earned paid sick time if the employee had worked; or,

(ii) the weighted average of all hourly rates of pay during the previous pay period.

Whatever method the employer uses, the employer must use a consistent method for each employee throughout a year.

Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(D) For employees paid on a piece rate or a fee-for-service basis, the same hourly rate shall be a reasonable calculation of the wages or fees the employee would have received for the piece work, service, or part thereof, if the employee had worked. (E) For employees who are paid on a commission basis (whether base wage plus commission or commission only), the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the base wage or the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(F) For employees who receive and retain compensation in the form of gratuities in addition to wages, the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the employee’s regular hourly rate or 100% of the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502 without deduction of any tips as a credit.

(12) “Sexual assault”, as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(13) “Stalking”, as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(14) “Year”, a regular and consecutive twelve-month period as determined by the employer; except that for the purposes of section 290.615 and section 290.627, “year” shall mean a calendar year.

290.603. 1. Employees of an employer with fifteen or more employees shall accrue a minimum of one hour of earned paid sick time for every thirty hours worked, but such employees shall not be entitled to use more than fifty-six hours of earned paid sick time per year, unless the employer selects a higher limit.

2. Employees of an employer with fewer than fifteen employees shall accrue a minimum of one hour of earned paid sick time for every thirty hours worked, but such employees shall not be entitled to use more than forty hours of earned paid sick time per year, unless the employer selects a higher limit.

3. In determining the number of employees of an employer, all employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation on a full-time, part-time, or temporary basis shall be counted. In situations in which the number of employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation per week fluctuates above and below 15 employees per week over the course of a year, an employer is required to provide earned paid sick time pursuant to subsection (1) of this section if it maintained fifteen or more employees in the state on the payroll for some portion of a working day in each of twenty or more different calendar weeks, including any periods of leave, and whether or not the weeks were consecutive, in either the current or the preceding year (irrespective of whether the same individuals were in employment in each working day).

4. All employees shall accrue earned paid sick time as follows:

(A) Earned paid sick time as provided in this section shall begin to accrue at the commencement of employment or May 1, 2025, whichever is later. An employee shall be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued. An employer may provide all earned paid sick time that an employee is expected to accrue in a year at the beginning of the year.

(B) Employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1) of the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act will be assumed to work forty hours in each work week for purposes of earned paid sick time accrual unless their normal work week is less than forty hours, in which case earned paid sick time accrues based upon that normal work week.

(C) Up to 80 hours of earned paid sick time shall be carried over to the following year if the employee has any unused accrued earned paid sick time at the end of the year, but this law does not require an employer to permit an employee to use more than the applicable number of hours of earned paid sick time per year as set forth in subsection (1) and (2) of this section. Alternatively, in lieu of carryover of unused earned paid sick time from one year to the next, an employer may pay an employee for unused earned paid sick time at the end of a year which could be carried over and provide the employee with an amount of paid sick time that meets or exceeds the requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that is available for the employee's immediate use at the beginning of the subsequent year.

(D) If an employee is transferred to a separate division, entity, or location, but remains employed by the same employer, the employee is entitled to all earned paid sick time accrued at the prior division, entity, or location and is entitled to use all earned paid sick time as provided in this section. When there is a separation from employment and the employee is rehired within nine months of separation by the same employer, previously accrued earned paid sick time that had not been used shall be reinstated. Further, the employee shall be entitled to use accrued earned paid sick time and accrue additional earned paid sick time at the re-commencement of employment.

(E) When a different employer succeeds or takes the place of an existing employer, all employees of the original employer who remain employed by the successor employer are entitled to all earned paid sick time they accrued when employed by the original employer, and are entitled to use earned paid sick time previously accrued.

(F) At its discretion, an employer may loan earned paid sick time to an employee in advance of accrual by such employee.

5. Any employer with a paid leave policy, such as a paid time off policy, who makes available an amount of paid leave sufficient to meet the accrual requirements of this section that may be used for the same purposes and under the same conditions as earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642 is not required to provide additional paid sick time under this section.

6. Except as specifically provided in this section, nothing in this section shall be construed as requiring financial or other reimbursement to an employee from an employer upon the employee's termination, resignation, retirement, or other separation from employment for accrued earned paid sick time that has not been used.

7. Employees shall not accrue earned paid sick time before May 1, 2025. Employees who are employed or who commence employment on or after May 1, 2025 shall accrue earned paid sick time and be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued in accordance with sections 290.600 through 290.642. The Department may develop model posters and notices, engage in rule-making, initiate outreach programs, and engage in other activities for implementation of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 as authorized by those sections before May 1, 2025.

290.606. 1. Earned paid sick time shall be provided to an employee by an employer for:

(A) An employee's mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for preventative medical care;

(B) Care of a family member with a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs preventative medical care;

(C) Closure of the employee's place of business by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or an employee's need to care for a child whose school or place of care has been closed by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or care for oneself or a family member when it has been determined by the health authorities having jurisdiction or by a health care provider that the employee's or family member's presence in the community may jeopardize the health of others because of his or her exposure to a communicable disease, whether or not the employee or family member has actually contracted the communicable disease; or

(D) Absence necessary due to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, provided the leave is to allow the employee to obtain for the employee or the employee's family member:

(i) Medical attention needed to recover from physical or psychological injury or disability caused by domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking;

(ii) Services from a victim services organization;

(iii) Psychological or other counseling;

(iv) Relocation or taking steps to secure an existing home due to the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or

(v) Legal services, including preparing for or participating in any civil or criminal legal proceeding related to or resulting from the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking.

2. Earned paid sick time shall be provided upon the request of an employee. Such request may be made orally, in writing, by electronic means, or by any other means acceptable to the employer. When possible, the request shall include the expected duration of the absence.

3. When the use of earned paid sick time is foreseeable, the employee shall make a good faith effort to provide notice of the need for such time to the employer in advance of the use of the earned paid sick time and shall make a reasonable effort to schedule the use of earned paid sick time in a manner that does not unduly disrupt the operations of the employer. Where such need is not foreseeable, an employer may require an employee to provide notice of the need for the use of earned paid sick time as soon as practicable.

4. An employer that requires notice of the need to use earned paid sick time where the need is not foreseeable shall provide a written policy that contains procedures for the employee to provide notice. An employer that has not provided to the employee a copy of its written policy for providing such notice shall not deny earned paid sick time to the employee based on non-compliance with such a policy.

5. An employer may not require, as a condition of an employee's taking earned paid sick time, that the employee search for or find a replacement worker to cover the hours during which the employee is using earned paid sick time.

6. Earned paid sick time may be used in the smaller of hourly increments or the smallest increment that the employer's payroll system uses to account for absences or use of other time.

7. For earned paid sick time of three or more consecutive work days, an employer may require reasonable documentation that the earned paid sick time has been used for a purpose covered by subsection (1) of this section.

(A) Documentation signed by a health care professional indicating that earned paid sick time is necessary shall be considered reasonable documentation for purposes of this section.

(B) In cases of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, if the employer requests, one of the following types of documentation selected by the employee shall be considered reasonable documentation: (i) a police report indicating that the employee or the employee's family member was a victim of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; (ii) a written statement from an employee or agent of a victim service provider affirming that the employee or employee's family member is or was receiving services from a victim service provider; (iii) documentation signed by a health care professional from whom the employee or employee's family member sought assistance relating to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking or the effects thereof; (vi) a court document indicating that an employee or employee's family member is or was involved in a legal action related to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or (v) a written statement from the employee affirming that the employee or employee's family member is taking or took earned paid sick time for a qualifying purpose of subsection (1) of this section.

(C) An employer may not require that the documentation explain the nature of the illness, details of the underlying health needs, or the details of the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, unless otherwise required by law.

290.609. 1. It shall be unlawful for an employer or any other person to interfere with, restrain, or deny the exercise of, or the attempt to exercise, any right protected under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. An employer shall not take retaliatory personnel action or discriminate against an employee or former employee because the individual has exercised rights protected under sections 290.600 through 290.642. Such rights include, but are not limited to, the right to request or use earned paid sick time pursuant to sections 290.600 through 290.642; the right to file a complaint or inform any person about any employer's alleged violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642; the right to participate in any investigation, hearing, or proceeding or cooperate with or assist the Department in any investigations of alleged violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642; and the right to inform any person of his or her potential rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. It shall be unlawful for an employer's absence control policy to count earned paid sick time taken under sections 290.600 through 290.642 as an absence that may lead to or result in discipline, discharge, demotion, suspension, or any other adverse action.

4. Protections of this section shall apply to any individual who mistakenly but in good faith alleges violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

290.612. 1. Employers shall give employees a written notice about earned paid sick time within fourteen calendar days of the commencement of employment or on April 15, 2025, whichever is later, which must include the following information: (1) beginning May 1, 2025, employees accrue and are entitled to earned paid sick time at the rate one hour of earned paid sick time for every 30 hours of work, and may use earned paid sick time, subject to the limits and terms under sections 290.600 through 290.642 of Missouri law, (2) it is prohibited for an employer to take retaliatory personnel action against employees who request or use earned paid sick time as allowed by law, (3) each employee has the right to bring a civil action if earned paid sick time as required by sections 290.600 through 290.642 is denied by the employer or the employee is subjected to retaliatory personnel action by the employer for exercising the employee's rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642; and, (4) the contact information for the Department. Notice shall be provided by the Employer to the employee on a single piece of paper, at least 8.5 x 11, in no less than 14-point font.

2. Beginning April 15, 2025, employers shall display a poster that contains the information required in subsection (1) of this section in a conspicuous and accessible place in each establishment where such employees are employed, provided that such poster has been made available by the Department.

3. The Department may create and make available to employers, model notices and posters that contain the information required under subsection (1) of this section for employers' use in complying with subsections (1) and (2) of this section. Nothing in this subsection shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department to create or make available notices or posters if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.615. 1. Employers shall retain records documenting hours worked by employees and earned paid sick time taken by employees, for a period of not less than three years, and shall allow the Department access to such records, with appropriate notice and at a mutually agreeable time, to monitor compliance with the requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. To the extent permitted by law, the Director may inspect such records, and the records shall be open for inspection by the Director by appointment. Where the records required under this section are kept outside the state, the records shall be made available to the Director upon demand. Every such employer shall furnish to the Director on demand a sworn statement of time records and information upon forms prescribed or approved by the Director. All the records and information obtained by the Department are confidential and shall be disclosed only on order of a court of competent jurisdiction.

3. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department or Director to access or inspect records or to create forms relating to the inspection of records if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.618. 1. The Department may, in accordance with chapter 536, promulgate rules for the implementation, enforcement, and administration of sections 290.600 through 290.642. Any rule or portion of a rule, as that term is defined in section 536.010, that is created under the authority delegated in this section shall become effective only if it complies with and is subject to all of the provisions of chapter 536 and, if applicable, section 536.028. This section and chapter 536 are nonseverable and if any of the powers vested with the general assembly pursuant to chapter 536 to review, to delay the effective date, or to disapprove and annul a rule are subsequently held unconstitutional, then the grant of rulemaking authority and any rule proposed or adopted after November 5, 2024, shall be invalid and void.

290.621. 1. The Department may investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to $500 per day of each day of a continuing violation. A final decision of the department is subject to review in accordance with the provisions of chapter 536.

2. The Department may develop and implement an outreach program to inform employees, parents, and persons who are under the care of a health care provider about the availability of earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642. This program may include the distribution of notices and other written materials to child care and elder care providers, domestic violence shelters, schools, hospitals, community health centers and other health care providers in Missouri.

3. A municipality, county, city, town, or village may adopt ordinances, rules, and regulations to investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, with respect to employers within, or employees performing work while physically present in, the geographic boundaries of the municipality, county, city, town, or village. Any such ordinance, rule, or regulation shall be consistent with this law and any Department rules or regulations and system for compliance and enforcement. The municipality, county, city, town, or village may exercise such powers as allowed by any applicable charter or ordinance, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to the maximum allowed for an ordinance violation. Before investigating or seeking to resolve any complaint between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall give notice to the Department with a copy of the complaint and, within 14 days of such notice, the Department may intervene as of right and participate in the matter to ensure that the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642 or, alternatively, the Department may institute its own proceedings in which case the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall refrain from acting on the matter so long as the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642. If the Department does not, within 14 days, intervene or instigate its own proceedings, the municipality, county, city, town, or village may, without the Department, investigate and attempt to resolve the complaint and take other additional means within its power to enforce sections 290.600 through 290.642 against the subject of the complaint. In no event shall an employer be subject to compliance proceedings arising out of a single set of facts after having already been subjected to a final compliance order by another governmental entity.

4. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department, a municipality, county, city, town, or village to conduct investigations and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, to establish and implement a system to receive or resolve complaints, to establish additional means of enforcement, or to conduct outreach and education, including the creation of notices and other written materials, concerning sections 290.600 through 290.642, if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.624. 1. Any employer who willfully violates or fails to comply with any of the provisions and requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be guilty of a class C misdemeanor; provided, however, that an employer who willfully violates the notice and posting requirements of section 290.612 shall be guilty of an infraction.

2. For purposes of this section, each day of violation or failure to comply and each employee affected shall constitute a separate offense.

290.627. 1. Any individual who claims to have been aggrieved by a failure of an employer to comply with any portion of sections 290.600 through 290.642, including but not limited to the failure to provide earned paid sick time or to allow employees to use such time consistent with sections 290.600 through 290.642, or who claims to have suffered a retaliatory personnel action, shall have a right of action and may commence a civil action in the appropriate court of jurisdiction within three years of the accrual of the cause of action, to obtain appropriate relief with respect to such unlawful violation. Such action may be brought without first filing an administrative complaint.

2. In a civil action under this section, if the court finds a violation has occurred, the court may grant as relief, as it deems appropriate and to the extent permitted by law, any permanent or temporary injunction, the full amount of any unpaid earned sick time plus any actual damages suffered as the result of the employer's violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642, an additional amount equal to twice any unpaid earned sick time as liquidated damages, costs, and reasonable attorney's fees as may be allowed by the court, and other legal or equitable relief as may be appropriate to remedy the violation, including, without limitation, reinstatement to employment and back pay.

290.630. 1. Except as otherwise required by law, an employer may not require disclosure of details relating to an employee's or an employee's family member's health information, domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking as a condition of providing earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. Unless as otherwise required by law, any health or safety information possessed by an employer regarding an employee or employee's family member must:

(A) be maintained on a separate form and in a separate file from other personnel information;

(B) be treated as confidential medical records; and

(C) not be disclosed except to the affected employee or with the express written permission of the affected employee.

290.633. 1. With respect to employees covered by a valid collective bargaining agreement in effect on November 5, 2024, no provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply until the stated expiration date in the collective bargaining agreement; however, further the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply upon any such agreement's renewal, extension, amendment, or modification in any respect after November 5, 2024.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed to interfere, impede, or otherwise diminish the right of employees to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing in order to establish earned paid sick time or other conditions of work in excess of the applicable minimum standards under the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. Any waiver by an employee of rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed contrary to public policy and shall be void.

290.636. 1. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed to discourage or prohibit an employer from the adoption or retention of an earned paid sick time policy more generous than the one required herein.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed as diminishing the obligation of an employer to comply with any contract, collective bargaining agreement, employment benefit plan, or other agreement providing more generous paid sick time to an employee than required herein. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed as diminishing the rights of public employees regarding paid sick time or use of paid sick time as provided in the laws of Missouri and ordinances of political subdivisions pertaining to public employees.

290.639. 1. Sections 290.600 through 290.642 provide minimum requirements pertaining to earned paid sick time and shall not be construed to preempt, limit, or otherwise affect the applicability of any other law, regulation, requirement, policy, or standard that provides for greater accrual or use by employees of earned paid sick time or that extends other protections to employees.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be interpreted or applied to create a power or obligation contrary to any federal law, rule, or regulation.

290.642. Except as detailed in section 290.618, all of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are severable, and if any provision, including any section, subsection, subdivision, paragraph, sentence, or clause, or the application thereof to any person or circumstance, is found by a court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted, such decision shall not affect other provisions or applications of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that can be given effect without the invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted provision or application, and to this end the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are declared severable.

Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, their office could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. However, if the enactment of this proposal were to result in substantial additional litigation, their office may be required to request additional appropriations.

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated no fiscal impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated no impact on their agency.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated this initiative petition has no impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated this petition, if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated this proposal creates no direct obligations or requirements to their department that would result in a fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated this proposal could potentially fiscally impact their department however, at this time, there is no way to estimate said impact.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated:

This petition would amend provisions relating to the accumulation of sick time required for employees depending on how many employees are employed by the employer. It also has various requirements regarding how sick time can be used and procedures employers must use. Violations are deemed misdemeanors, and damages are allowed to be awarded in civil suits. It states that the DOLIR "may" create new notices, promulgate rules, and initiate outreach programs but that the DOLIR is not required to create notices if it requires the appropriation of funds. It also states that the DOLIR may inspect employment records and investigate complaints of noncompliance. Still, such inspection is not required if it requires the appropriation of funds, and the cost estimate would be zero.

The funding source will be from General Revenue if the DOLIR receives complaints to enforce it. Therefore the DOLIR estimates it would need two Regulatory Auditors and one Administrative Support Assistant person at an annual ongoing cost of $255,975 by 2027, plus an initial information technology (IT) component of $28,318 and office equipment of $25,011.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety indicated no impact for their department, Director's office.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated no impact anticipated by their department.

Officials from the Governor's Office indicated this proposal relating to employee benefits does not financially impact their office as the proposal excludes government entities.

Officials from the House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated because this initiative petition exempts the state, any agency or commission of the state, etc., from the definition of employer, their department does not anticipate any fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated this initiative petition excludes the state from the requirements of the proposed new law. Therefore there is no anticipated fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to employee leave does not financially impact their office due to an exemption for government entities in the initiative petition.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated there is no fiscal impact on the courts.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In fiscal year (FY) 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. Their office estimates $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated the proposed initiative petition creates a new offense under section 290.624 which could result in additional cases eligible for State Public Defender (SPD) representation. The number of additional cases is unknown and as a result the fiscal impact is unknown. However, if the offenses, which are classified as misdemeanors, were class D misdemeanors, jail time would not be a possible sentence and the offense therefore would not be eligible for SPD representation.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no fiscal impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated this petition does not apply to county governments under Section 6 for the definition of an employer. Clay County provides more generous sick leave than this measure as well.

They do estimate additional costs from this petition of $2,000 a year between the Circuit Court and Prosecutor to enforce the misdemeanor and civil action provisions.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county for this initiative petition proposing to amend Chapter 290, RSMo.

Officials from St. Louis County indicated this initiative petition has no apparent fiscal impact on their county.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this would have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact to their college.

Officials from St. Louis Community College indicated their college appears to offer benefits that exceed the petition and therefore they do not see a cost or cost savings with regard to the petition.

Officials from the Missouri Lottery indicated no fiscal impact to their agency.

Officials from the State Tax Commission indicated this initiative petition will not have a fiscal impact on their agency.

Officials from the Missouri Veterans Commission indicated this initiative petition creates no fiscal impact to their Commission. The definition of the term "employer" in the proposed section 290.600(6) specifically excludes the state and its agencies, so the requirements of the petition would not apply to the Commission.

Officials from the Missouri Ethics Commission indicated this initiative petition does not have fiscal impact on their Commission.

Officials from the Kansas Board of Police Commissioners indicated they are exempt as a political subdivision of the state.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated they predict no fiscal impact from this petition.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated this petition has no fiscal impact to their board.

Officials from the Children's Trust Fund indicated no impact.

Officials from the State Auditor's office indicated since this proposed initiative petition does not apply to government entities, this would have no fiscal impact on their office.

Lindsey Baker, Research Director, Missouri Budget Project indicated in summary, they estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state and local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue and decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy. She also provided the following information:

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Earned Sick Leave Petitions 24-025-042

We estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state & local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy.

In addition to helping employees by allowing them to address their health needs without losing their jobs or ability to pay their bills, paid sick leave has many benefits for employers, including a healthier workforce, reduced turnover, and increased productivity. The benefits of paid sick leave have been highlighted by the COVID-19 pandemic, illustrating the importance of workers being able to recover at home without lost wages and without risking spread of contagious disease in the workplace.

Several ballot measures have been filed (24-025-042) that would require employers to provide earned sick leave in Missouri. Though the measures vary slightly, each would require employers to provide a minimum of 3-7 days of paid leave to employees, depending on hours worked and size of business. If implemented, Missouri would join the seventeen states, plus the District of Columbia, who ensure employees can earn paid sick leave to care for themselves or family members.ⁱ

An estimated 211,000 Missourians and their families would benefit from the earned sick time provided through these initiatives, with low-wage workers disproportionately likely to benefit from this policy.ⁱⁱ Expanding earned sick leave in Missouri is estimated to provide a net savings to society of between $612.4-$774.1 million annually depending on the number of days provided.ⁱⁱⁱ

	3-5 Scenario*	5-7 Scenario*
Estimated Cost Savings	$1.26B	$1.29B
- Employment Related Savings	$436.73M	$466.6M
- Health Related Savings	$825.61M	$825.61M
Estimated Costs (Employer & State Admin)	$488.22M	$679.77M
Estimated Net Societal Benefit*	$774.11M	$612.44M

In the 3/5 scenario, small employers are required to offer at least three days of leave and large employers at least five days. The 5/7 scenario requires small employers to offer at least five days of paid sick leave and large employers to offer at least seven days of paid leave. A small employer defined as less than 15 employees.*

Societal Cost Savings from Earned Sick Leave in Missouri

Employment Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri's workforce would become stronger, more stable, and more productive leading to economic growth.

- Reduced Absenteeism. Access to earned sick leave allows workers to stay home, reducing the overall spread of illness in the workplace; this leads to fewer illnesses among workers and fewer overall days off work.^{iv}
- Reduced Turnover. Access to earned sick leave gives workers the ability to address their health needs and those of their families, without having to quit a job or risk being fired. Access to paid sick leave is associated with reduced job turnover, which in turn creates significant savings for businesses.^v
- Reduced Presenteeism. Employers who do not offer paid sick leave have higher rates of "presenteeism" or lost productivity due to employees working while injured or sick.^{vi} Offering paid sick leave reduces the likelihood of working at reduced capacity and allows workers to recover from illness or injury more quickly.

Health Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri would become a healthier state as workers would have the ability to care for themselves and their families, while simultaneously benefiting their communities.

- Reduced Flu Contagion in Society. Workers without paid sick leave are more likely to come to work sick, increasing the likelihood of spreading the illness.^{vii} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to stay home when ill, thus reducing the overall spread of influenza throughout the community.
- Reduced Workers Compensation Costs. Workers with access to paid leave are less likely to be injured on the job,^{viii} reducing overall workers comp claims and cost to employers.
- Reduced ER Visits. Paid sick leave is associated with fewer trips to the emergency room.^{ix} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to properly care for themselves and family members during an illness, preventing an escalation of the illness.
- Improved Nursing Home Care. Unpaid sick leave is especially problematic in nursing homes as the residents are especially vulnerable to the consequences of high turnover, absenteeism and presenteeism.^x Access to paid sick leave allows nursing home workers to take care of themselves so that they can better care for residents.

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Petitions 24-025-042

While previous estimates show a cost associated with state level administration and enforcement for earned sick leave of approximately $1 million, we also expect that earned sick leave will be associated with a significant potential for increased revenue collections & decreased spending on services associated with the cost savings outlined above.

- Increased revenue collections. A stronger and more productive workforce is associated with economic growth. Economic growth is in turn associated with growth in both state and local revenue as both sales & income tax collections rise due to increased spending and wages.
- Reductions in spending on services. When workers are able to care for themselves and their families (and others in their community) they are less likely to have minor illnesses escalate into costly health problems. This reduces the overall cost of health care, particularly among low-wage workers who are disproportionately likely to lack access to paid leave. This in turn reduces state and local spending on health other related public services.

As a result, we estimate the fiscal impact on state & local revenue of earned sick leave will be minimal as the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will offset the modest expenses associated with state level administration. While we are confident that a net savings will be realized, the size of the savings is too speculative to estimate exact fiscal impact.

Re: Proposal Related to Chapter 290, RSMo, Petition 2024-025-042

Dear Auditor Fitzpatrick:

A Better Balance is writing to submit our fact sheet titled "Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business" to accompany petition 24-025-042 and to inform the fiscal note process. We thank you for considering our submission.

A Better Balance, a national nonprofit advocacy organization with four regional offices, uses the power of the law to ensure that working individuals can care for themselves and their loved ones without jeopardizing their economic security. Through legislative advocacy, policy, direct legal services, strategic litigation, and public education, our organization works around the country to advance policies like paid sick leave, paid family and medical leave, quality childcare and eldercare, and anti-discrimination protections for pregnant workers and caregivers. From Arizona and Colorado to Duluth (MN) and beyond, our organization has worked on the growing number of paid sick leave laws now in effect.

The enclosed fact sheet summarizes research and data on the resoundingly positive effect that paid sick leave has on business. When paid sick leave policies are in place, businesses financially benefit from increased worker productivity, reduced spread of contagious illness in the workplace, and lower employee turnover. Research has also underscored that workers and the larger community also have better health outcomes overall when there is access to paid sick leave. As documented in the attached fact sheet, paid sick leave has been shown to work well for businesses and workers throughout the country.

Thank you for giving us the opportunity to submit this information. Please do not hesitate to contact A Better Balance at cgomez@abetterbalance.org if we can provide any additional assistance.

Sincerely,
A Better Balance

Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business

The research is clear: paid sick leave isn't just good for workers, it's good for business as well. Healthy workers are essential to a successful business and a strong economy. When workers have access to paid sick leave, they demonstrate increased job satisfaction, commitment, and morale, while employers—and their bottom lines—reap the benefits of increased worker performance and productivity and reduced worker turnover. And access to guaranteed paid sick leave is a vital component to keeping businesses open and safe through the COVID-19 pandemic and beyond.

Access to paid sick leave increases worker productivity and reduces the spread of contagious illness in the workplace, leading to direct savings for businesses.

- Workers with minor illnesses are less productive than their healthy co-workers.¹ Paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (when employees show up to work while sick), which costs businesses approximately $207.6 billion annually in reduced productivity.² After Washington State implemented its paid sick leave law, for example, the percentage of workers that went to work while sick decreased significantly.³
- Paid sick leave also reduces the spread of contagion between co-workers—further increasing productivity and labor in the workplace.⁴ Absenteeism caused by the introduction of flu-like illness in the workplace is estimated to cost employers up to 111 million workdays per year.⁵ Even before the pandemic, states with paid sick leave requirements saw a 40% decrease in influenza rates.⁶

Paid sick leave has proven to be particularly crucial to keeping businesses open during the COVID-19 pandemic.

- As the country with the highest cumulative number of COVID-19 cases,⁷ and the only one of the thirteen G12 countries with no paid sick leave,⁸ it is undeniable that the U.S. will need paid sick leave to end this crisis, to save lives, and to minimize disruption to businesses struggling to avoid the spread of COVID-19 in the workplace.
- Paid sick leave has been critical to keeping businesses open throughout the pandemic. One study found that states in which workers gained temporary access to paid sick leave through the federal Families First Coronavirus Response Act⁹ had around 400 fewer confirmed COVID-19 cases per day as a result.¹⁰

Employers with paid sick leave benefit from reduced worker turnover and better relationships with their employees, saving employers the cost of recruiting, interviewing, and training new hires.

- In general, worker turnover is estimated to cost employers the equivalent of 21% of a worker's annual compensation.¹¹ However, providing paid sick leave only increases labor costs by an average of 2.7 cents per hour worked¹² and workers with paid sick leave are less likely to leave their jobs,¹³ saving businesses money on turnover costs such as interviewing and training.¹⁴

- Paid sick leave also increases worker loyalty and job satisfaction—factors known to increase productivity and job retention.¹⁵ After Connecticut’s paid sick law went into effect, nearly 30% of surveyed employers reported improved employee morale, and over 20% reported increased employee motivation or loyalty.¹⁶
- Two years after paid sick leave went into effect in New York City, one employer reported that “the impact that I saw in my business was a much stronger bond between ourselves and our employees, higher productivity, and a more successful business, not a less successful business.”¹⁷

Paid sick leave also saves employers money by reducing the likelihood of workplace accidents.

- Throughout the country, direct and indirect costs associated with on-the-job injuries cost employers billions of dollars.¹⁸ Workers with paid sick leave are 28% less likely than workers without access to paid sick leave to be injured on the job.¹⁹

Lack of paid sick leave makes workers more likely to go to work while sick and puts co-workers and our communities at risk. With paid sick leave, our workplaces and communities are healthier, which improves the bottom line for employers.

- Access to sick leave will be essential to overcoming the COVID-19 pandemic, as evidenced by previous pandemics. For example, it is estimated that the lack of paid sick leave was responsible for 5 million incidents of flu-like illness during the H1N1 pandemic.²⁰
- In a simulated influenza epidemic, 72% of employees who caught the flu at work did so because of exposure to other employees attending work while sick; paid sick days would reduce flu incidences among workers by approximately 6% across all workplaces, and by over 7% in workplaces with 49 or fewer employees.²¹
- As explained above, access to paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (employees showing up to work while sick) and reduces overall contagion.²² Presenteeism is linked to the spread of harmful contagions to co-workers and customers.²³
- A study of data from the 2009 flu outbreak found that workers with paid sick leave were 30 percent more likely to be vaccinated and were more likely to seek treatment when they were sick with flu-like symptoms compared to those without paid sick leave.²⁴ This has proven true for COVID-19 as well—in June 2021, workers whose employers provided paid time off to get the vaccine or recover from any side effects were 24% more likely to have received at least one dose of the vaccine than workers whose employers provided no paid vaccine leave.²⁵
- A lack of access to paid sick days is particularly harmful for service industry workers. Nearly two-thirds of restaurant workers have cooked or served food while sick,²⁶ and in 2011, nearly one in five food service workers went to work vomiting or with diarrhea, creating dangerous health conditions.²⁷

- People without access to paid sick leave are 1.5x more likely to go to work while they have a contagious illness and are nearly twice as likely to send a sick child to school or daycare than those with access to it.²⁸
- States that have implemented paid sick leave laws had an 11% decrease of cases of flu-like illnesses in their first year after enactment.²⁹

Workers with paid sick leave are more likely to seek preventative care than workers without paid sick leave, leading to better health outcomes and less time away from work.

- People without paid sick days tend to be unable to make time for preventative health care, such as cancer screenings and flu shots, which makes it more likely that such workers will have more significant healthcare needs at later stages of an illness.³⁰
- Workers with access to paid sick days report better general health than workers without paid sick days and are less likely to delay preventive medical care for themselves or for their family.³¹

Paid sick leave has proven to work well for businesses all over the U.S., and experience shows that workers don't abuse paid sick leave.

- Business practices don't have to change to keep up with paid sick leave laws. In a survey of New York City employers after the city's paid sick law was implemented, 91% of employers reported no reduction in hiring, 97% indicated they did not reduce hours, about 94% did not raise prices, and nearly 85% of employers reported no change in their overall business costs.³²
 - In a similar survey of employers in Connecticut a year and a half after the state's paid sick law went into effect, nearly 90% of employers reported no reduction in hours, and about 85% did not raise prices.³³
- Paid sick leave laws stimulate economic growth. When San Francisco's paid sick law went into effect in 2007, the city's job growth actually exceeded that of nearby counties, despite unfounded fears that the law would cause an economic slowdown.³⁴
 - In comparison to other surrounding cities, Seattle saw greater increases in the number of employers in the city when its paid sick leave law was implemented,³⁵ and in general, job growth continued on an upward trend.³⁶
 - After New York City's paid sick days were implemented, the average wage for hourly workers increased and the average number of weekly absences declined.³⁷ On the law's first anniversary, the New York City government released a report touting its successful implementation and noting that since the law went into effect, "the city has had steady job growth and the lowest unemployment in six years."³⁸
- Workers don't abuse paid sick leave. After New York implemented its paid sick leave law, 98% of employers reported no cases of employee abuse of sick days.³⁹

- Employers know that paid sick leave laws work. Two years after New York City’s paid sick law was implemented, a staggering 86% of New York City employers polled supported the law.⁴⁰
- Studies in Washington, D.C. and Seattle also saw no negative economic effects following implementation of their paid sick leave laws in either job loss or movement of businesses out of the city. A report from the Washington D.C. Auditor, issued five years after passage of the District’s sick leave law, found that the law “did not have the economic impact of encouraging business owners to move a business from the District nor did the [law] have the economic impact of discouraging business owners to locate a business in the District of Columbia.”⁴¹ Likewise, a study of the economic impact of Seattle’s sick leave law found that a “preliminary look at available data shows no widespread negative economic impact as some opponents of the ordinance feared.”⁴²
- Recognizing the benefits of paid sick leave, San Francisco, Washington, D.C., and New York City—all among the earliest adopters of paid sick leave laws—later expanded their paid sick leave laws, underscoring how well these laws are working for workers, employers, and communities.

thereafter the governor shall appoint a senate independent bipartisan citizens commission consisting of two nominees from each list submitted by each state committee and one nominee from each list submitted by each congressional district committee, to redistrict the thirty-four senatorial districts and to establish the numbers and boundaries of said districts. No person shall be appointed to both the house independent bipartisan citizens commission and the senate independent bipartisan citizens commission during the same redistricting cycle.

If any committee fails to submit a list within such time, the governor shall appoint a member of his or her own choice from the political party of the committee failing to submit a list, provided that in the case of a congressional district committee failing to submit a list, the person appointed to the commission by the governor shall reside in the congressional district of such committee.

Members of the commission shall be disqualified from holding office as members of the general assembly for four years following the date of the filing by the commission of its final redistricting plan.

(b) The commissioners so selected shall, on the fifteenth day, excluding Sundays and state holidays, after all members have been appointed, meet in the capitol building and proceed to organize by electing from their number a chairman, vice chairman and secretary. The commission shall adopt an agenda establishing at least three hearing dates on which hearings open to the public shall be held to hear objections or testimony from interested persons. A copy of the agenda shall be filed with the secretary of the senate within twenty-four hours after its adoption. Executive meetings may be scheduled and held as often as the commission deems advisable.

(c) The senate independent bipartisan citizens commission shall redistrict the senate using the same methods and criteria as those required by subsection (b), section 3 of this Article for the redistricting of the house of representatives.

(d) Not later than five months after the appointment of the senate independent bipartisan citizens commission, the commission shall file with the secretary of state a tentative redistricting plan and map of the proposed districts and during the ensuing fifteen days shall hold such public hearings as may be necessary to hear objections or testimony of interested persons. The commission shall make public the tentative redistricting plan and map of the proposed districts, as well as all demographic and partisan data used in the creation of the plan and map.

(e) Not later than six months after the appointment of the commission, the commission shall file with the secretary of state a final statement of the numbers and the boundaries of the districts together with a map of the districts, and no statement shall be valid unless approved by at least seven-tenths of the members.

(f) After the final statement is filed, senators shall be elected according to such districts until a new redistricting plan is made as provided in this section, except that if the final statement is not filed within six months of the time fixed for the appointment of the commission, the commission shall stand discharged and the senate shall be redistricted using the same methods and criteria as described in subsection (b) of section 3 of this Article by a commission of six members appointed from among the judges of the appellate courts of the state of Missouri by the state supreme court, a majority of whom shall sign and file its redistricting plan and map with the secretary of state within ninety days of the date of the discharge of the senate independent bipartisan citizens commission. The judicial commission shall make public the tentative redistricting plan and map of the proposed districts, as well as all demographic and partisan data used in the creation of the plan and map. Thereafter, senators shall be elected according to such districts until a redistricting plan is made as provided in this section.

(g) Each member of the commission shall receive as compensation fifteen dollars a day for each day the commission is in session, but not more than one thousand dollars, and, in addition, shall be reimbursed for his or her actual and necessary expenses incurred while serving as a member of the commission.

(i) Any action expressly or implicitly alleging that a redistricting plan violates this Constitution, federal law, or the United States Constitution shall be filed in the circuit court of Cole County and shall name the body that approved the challenged redistricting plan as a defendant. Only an eligible Missouri voter who sustains an individual injury by virtue of residing in a district that exhibits the alleged violation, and whose injury is remedied by a differently drawn district, shall have standing. If the court renders a judgment in which it finds that a completed redistricting plan exhibits the alleged violation, its judgment shall adjust only those districts, and only those parts of district boundaries, necessary to bring the map into compliance. The supreme court shall have exclusive appellate jurisdiction upon the filing of a notice of appeal within ten days after the judgment has become final.]

[Section 9. Until the convening of the Seventy-fourth General Assembly the House of Representatives shall consist of one hundred sixty-three members elected from the one hundred sixty-three representative districts, as they existed January 1, 1965.]

[Section 10. The last decennial census of the United States shall be used in apportioning representatives and determining the population of senatorial and representative districts. Such districts may be altered from time to time as public convenience may require.]

Section 13. If any senator or representative is removed from office for any reason, dies, resigns, or [remove his residence from the district or county for which he was elected,] removes her or his residence from the state of Missouri, her or his office shall thereby be vacated.

Section 14. [Writs of election to fill vacancies] Vacancies in either house of the general assembly shall be filled by the candidates for the senate or for the house in each congressional district who was (were), in order, the last candidate(s) eliminated and who therefore would have next been elected according to the tabulation of ranked choice votes in the last election of members of that house and congressional district, [issued by the governor.]

(d) The commissioners so selected shall, on the fifteenth day, excluding Sundays and state holidays, after all members have been appointed, meet in the capitol building and proceed to organize by electing from their number a chairman, vice chairman and secretary. The commission shall adopt an agenda establishing at least three hearing dates on which hearings open to the public shall be held to hear objections or testimony from interested persons. A copy of the agenda shall be filed with the clerk of the house of representatives within twenty-four hours after its adoption. Executive meetings may be scheduled and held as often as the commission deems advisable.

(e) Not later than five months after the appointment of the commission, the commission shall file with the secretary of state a tentative redistricting plan and map of the proposed districts and during the ensuing fifteen days shall hold such public hearings as may be necessary to hear objections or testimony of interested persons. The commission shall make public the tentative redistricting plan and map of the proposed districts, as well as all demographic and partisan data used in the creation of the plan and map.

(f) Not later than six months after the appointment of the commission, the commission shall file with the secretary of state a final statement of the numbers and the boundaries of the districts together with a map of the districts, and no statement shall be valid unless approved by at least seven-tenths of the members.

(g) After the final statement is filed, members of the house of representatives shall be elected according to such districts until a new redistricting plan is made as provided in this section, except that if the final statement is not filed within six months of the time fixed for the appointment of the commission, the commission shall stand discharged and the house of representatives shall be redistricted using the same methods and criteria as described in subsection (b) of this section by a commission of six members appointed from among the judges of the appellate courts of the state of Missouri by the state supreme court, a majority of whom shall sign and file its redistricting plan and map with the secretary of state within ninety days of the date of the discharge of the house independent bipartisan citizens commission. The judicial commission shall make public the tentative redistricting plan and map of the proposed districts, as well as all demographic and partisan data used in the creation of the plan and map. Thereafter, members of the house of representatives shall be elected according to such districts until a redistricting plan is made as provided in this section.

(h) Each member of the commission shall receive as compensation fifteen dollars a day for each day the commission is in session but not more than one thousand dollars, and, in addition, shall be reimbursed for his or her actual and necessary expenses incurred while serving as a member of the commission.

(j) Any action expressly or implicitly alleging that a redistricting plan violates this Constitution, federal law, or the United States Constitution shall be filed in the circuit court of Cole County and shall name the body that approved the challenged redistricting plan as a defendant. Only an eligible Missouri voter who sustains an individual injury by virtue of residing in a district that exhibits the alleged violation, and whose injury is remedied by a differently drawn district, shall have standing. If the court renders a judgment in which it finds that a completed redistricting plan exhibits the alleged violation, its judgment shall adjust only those districts, and only those parts of district boundaries, necessary to bring the map into compliance. The supreme court shall have exclusive appellate jurisdiction upon the filing of a notice of appeal within ten days after the judgment has become final.]

Section 4. Each representative shall be twenty-four years of age, and next before the day of her or his election, shall have been a qualified voter for two years and a resident of the [county or] congressional district which she or he is chosen to represent for one year, if such [county or] congressional district shall have been so long established, and if not, then of the [county or] congressional district from which the same shall have been taken.

Section 5. The senate shall consist of thirty-four members elected at-large by the qualified voters of the state of Missouri [senatorial districts] for a term of four years. [Senatorial districts shall be apportioned as provided for in Article III, Section 7.]

Section 6. Each senator shall be thirty years of age, and next before the day of his election shall have been a qualified voter of the state of Missouri for three years [and a resident of the district which he is chosen to represent for one year, if such district shall have been so long established, and if not, then of the district or districts from which the same shall have been taken].

Section 7. (a) Beginning with the election of senators and representatives to be held in the year two thousand and twenty-six there will be no primary election for those offices. All candidates who file to run for the senate or the house of representatives will be listed on the ballot for the general election with no party affiliation listed on the ballot. The general election shall be carried out using a system of ranked choice voting. Each voter shall be able to rank a minimum of three candidates for the office of senator and three candidates for the office of representative in the order of the voter's preference. If feasible, the ballot shall permit voters to rank a total of ten candidates for the senate and ten candidates for the house, or as close to that number of choices as feasible. A number of spaces equal to the number of choices voters are able to rank shall be provided for voters to write in the names of candidates not appearing on the ballot. Votes shall be tabulated for all write-in candidates who have properly registered with the secretary of state. The ballot shall be simple and easy to understand, with instructions necessary to enable voters to successfully cast ballots under the system.

(b) Votes shall be tabulated according to the following method: Tabulation shall proceed in sequential rounds. In the initial round of tabulation, only the first-choice votes on each ballot shall be tabulated. If more than seventeen candidates for senator or more than twenty candidates for the house from a congressional district receive first-choice votes, the candidate for each office with the fewest first-choice votes shall be eliminated and the second-choice votes of voters who cast first-choice votes for the eliminated candidates shall be distributed among the "continuing candidates". In the second round of tabulation and each additional round of tabulation, the candidate for the office of senator and the candidate for the office of representative in each congressional district with the fewest number of "cumulative votes" shall be eliminated and the continuing candidate listed as the highest remaining choice on each such ballot for eliminated candidates shall have a vote added to her or his cumulative vote total. That process of elimination shall be continued for as many rounds of tabulation as necessary until there are seventeen continuing candidates remaining for the senate and twenty continuing candidates remaining for the house in each congressional district. Those continuing candidates are then elected.

(c) Once a ballot no longer includes one or more continuing candidates among the choices listed, it is an "exhausted ballot". If a ballot lists more than one candidate at a given rank, each of the candidates listed at that rank shall receive a fractional vote. (One-half vote if there are two candidates listed, one-third of a vote if three candidates are listed, et cetera.) If a ballot is left blank at any rank but has additional choices listed at lower ranks, the blank rank shall be ignored.

[(a) Within sixty days after the population of this state is reported to the President for each decennial census of the United States, or within sixty days after a redistricting plan has been invalidated by a court of competent jurisdiction, the state committee and the congressional district committees of each of the two political parties casting the highest vote for governor at the last preceding general election shall meet and the members of each committee shall nominate, by a majority vote of the elected members of the committee present, provided that a majority of the elected members is present, members of their party, residents in that district, in the case of a congressional district committee, as nominees for the senate independent bipartisan citizens commission. No party shall select more than one nominee from any one state legislative district. The congressional district committees shall each submit to the governor their list of two elected nominees. The state committees shall each submit to the governor their list of five elected nominees. Within thirty days

Be it resolved by the people of the state of Missouri that the Constitution be amended:

Article III of the Constitution is revised by repealing Sections 9 and 10 and amending Sections 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 13, and 14 to read as follows:

Section 3. [(a)] The house of representatives shall consist of [one hundred sixty-three] twenty members elected from each congressional district at each general election [and redistricted as provided in this section].

[(b)] The house independent bipartisan citizens commission shall redistrict the house of representatives using the following methods, listed in order of priority:

(1) Districts shall be as nearly equal as practicable in population, and shall be drawn on the basis of one person, one vote. Districts are as nearly equal as practicable in population if no district deviates by more than one percent from the ideal population of the district, as measured by dividing the number of districts into the statewide population data being used, except that a district may deviate by up to three percent if necessary to follow political subdivision lines consistent with subdivision (4) of this subsection; (2) Districts shall be established in a manner so as to comply with all requirements of the United States Constitution and applicable federal laws, including, but not limited to, the Voting Rights Act of 1965 (as amended). The following principles shall take precedence over any other part of this constitution: no district shall be drawn in a manner which results in a denial or abridgment of the right of any citizen of the United States to vote on account of race or color, and no district shall be drawn such that members of any community of citizens protected by the preceding clause have less opportunity than other members of the electorate to participate in the political process and to elect representatives of their choice;

(3) Subject to the requirements of subdivisions (1) and (2) of this subsection, districts shall be composed of contiguous territory as compact as may be. Areas which meet only at the points of adjoining corners are not contiguous. In general, compact districts are those which are square, rectangular, or hexagonal in shape to the extent permitted by natural or political boundaries;

(4) To the extent consistent with subdivisions (1) to (3) of this subsection, communities shall be preserved. Districts shall satisfy this requirement if district lines follow political subdivision lines to the extent possible, using the following criteria, in order of priority. First, each county shall wholly contain as many districts as its population allows. Second, if a county wholly contains one or more districts, the remaining population shall be wholly joined in a single district made up of population from outside the county. If a county does not wholly contain a district, then no more than two segments of a county shall be combined with an adjoining county. Third, split counties and county segments, defined as any part of the county that is in a district not wholly within that county, shall each be as few as possible. Fourth, as few municipal lines shall be crossed as possible;

(5) Districts shall be drawn in a manner that achieves both partisan fairness and, secondarily, competitiveness, but the standards established by subdivisions (1) to (4) of this subsection shall take precedence over partisan fairness and competitiveness. "Partisan fairness" means that parties shall be able to translate their popular support into legislative representation with approximately equal efficiency. "Competitiveness" means that parties' legislative representation shall be substantially and similarly responsive to shifts in the electorate's preferences.

To this end, the average electoral performance of the two political parties receiving the most votes in the three preceding general elections for governor, for United States Senate, and for President of the United States shall be calculated. This index shall be defined as the total votes received by each party in the three preceding general elections for governor, for United States Senate, and for President of the United States, divided by the total votes cast for both parties in these elections. Using this index, the total number of wasted votes for each party, summing across all of the districts in the plan shall be calculated. "Wasted votes" are votes cast for a losing candidate or for a winning candidate in excess of the threshold needed for victory. In any redistricting plan and map of the proposed districts, the difference between the two parties' total wasted votes, divided by the total votes cast for the two parties, shall not exceed fifteen percent.

To promote competitiveness, the electoral performance index shall be used to simulate elections in which the hypothetical statewide vote shifts by one percent, two percent, three percent, four percent, and five percent in favor of each party. The vote in each individual district shall be assumed to shift by the same amount as the state-wide vote. In each of these simulated elections, the difference between the two parties' total wasted votes, divided by the total votes cast for the two parties, shall not exceed fifteen percent.

(c) Within sixty days after the population of this state is reported to the President for each decennial census of the United States or, in the event that a redistricting plan has been invalidated by a court of competent jurisdiction, within sixty days that such a ruling has been made, the state committee and the congressional district committees of each of the two political parties casting the highest vote for governor at the last preceding general election shall meet and the members of each committee shall nominate, by a majority vote of the elected members of the committee present, provided that a majority of the elected members is present, members of their party, residents in that district, in the case of a congressional district committee, as nominees for the house independent bipartisan citizens commission. No party shall select more than one nominee from any one state legislative district. The congressional district committees shall each submit to the governor their list of two elected nominees. The state committees shall each submit to the governor their list of five elected nominees. Within thirty days thereafter, the governor shall appoint a house independent bipartisan citizens commission consisting of one nominee from each list submitted by each congressional district committee and two nominees from each list submitted by each state committee to redistrict the state into one hundred and sixty-three representative districts and to establish the numbers and boundaries of said districts. No person shall be appointed to both the house independent bipartisan citizens commission and the senate independent bipartisan citizens commission during the same redistricting cycle.

If any committee fails to submit a list within such time, the governor shall appoint a member of his or her own choice from the political party of the committee failing to submit a list, provided that in the case of a congressional district committee failing to submit a list, the person appointed to the commission by the governor shall reside in the congressional district of such committee.

Members of the commission shall be disqualified from holding office as members of the general assembly for four years following the date of the filing by the commission of its final redistricting plan.]

For the purposes of this Article, the term [congressional district committee or] congressional district refers to [the congressional district committee or] the congressional district from which a member of Congress [congressman] was last elected, or, in the event members of congress from this state have been elected at large, [the term congressional district committee refers to those persons who last served as the congressional district committee for those districts from which congressmen were last elected, and] the term congressional district refers to those districts from which members of Congress [congressmen] were last elected. [Any action pursuant to this section by the congressional district committee shall take place only at duly called meetings, shall be recorded in their official minutes and only members present in person shall be permitted to vote.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated this initiative petition has no impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated this petition, if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated this proposal creates no direct obligations or requirements to their department that would result in a fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated they would not anticipate a direct fiscal impact from this proposal.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact for this initiative petition proposing to amend Article III.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety - Office of the Director indicated no impact for their department, Director's office.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated their department does not anticipate any fiscal impact from this petition.

Officials from the Governor's office indicated this proposal related to ranked voting and at large elections does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Missouri House of Representatives indicated that if they have interpreted this correctly it would take their membership down to 160 members. Below would be the impact to reduce their membership to 160 members.

The impact to the House is as follows:

First year of impact-Impact on half the fiscal year.
Cost savings of ($158,391.22)

Second year-will be the first year they realize the full impact of the reduction in membership.

Cost savings of an additional ($123,397.14) (a full year of the change based on their current costs would be a savings of $281,788.36 for a full year)

The costs savings come from member salaries, per diem, member mileage, member expense accounts, and a reduction in the number of legislative assistant staff needed.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated they do not anticipate any fiscal impact associated with this initiative petition.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated this proposed initiative petition would have no fiscal impact on their department.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to ranked voting and at large elections does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated there is no fiscal impact on the courts.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated this petition would change the composition of the General Assembly and cause representatives to be elected by congressional district using ranked-choice voting and senators from the state at-large. At each general election, voters would see a list of all representative candidates from their congressional district on their ballot and all senator candidates for the state, with the ability to rank their choices of at least three but possibly up to 10 candidates from each list. This consolidation may incur the following costs:

Reprogramming/Replacing voting equipment: Voting machines in Missouri are currently programmed to accept only single-page ballots with a single vote per race – each of these machines would need to be reprogrammed to accept ranked-choice votes and provide for multiple-page ballots due to the potential for large numbers of candidates to file for General Assembly seats. Any machine that cannot be reprogrammed would need to be replaced with a new machine that does possess such capabilities. Either cost would be a new requirement that the state must assume under Article X, Section 21 of the Missouri Constitution.

As of the 2020 voting systems survey conducted by their office, local election authorities reported that they possessed 5,735 voting machines. The estimated cost for each new voting machine is $5,000. The total cost to the state will vary depending on the number of machines which are ready to accept ranked-choice votes or can be reprogrammed to do so. However, using total replacement of all machines as a maximum cost, this provision may result in a total impact to general revenue ranging from $0 up to $28,675,000.

Additionally, in the ranked-choice process, there is a possibility of fractional votes being assigned if a voter selected more than one candidate at the same rank. As the state's reporting system is currently programmed to handle only whole numbers of votes, significant reprogramming of this system may be necessary to permit submittal of fractional vote tallies. Local election authorities may also require software upgrades from their equipment vendors in order to process fractional votes, but the amount of reprogramming needed and the associated cost will vary by vendor.

Postage Costs: mailing envelopes used to return absentee ballots are printed with business reply permits – pursuant to Section 115.285, RSMo., Local Election Authorities are reimbursed for these costs by the Missouri Secretary of State's Office at a cost which generally exceeds $2 per envelope based on the current size and weight of the envelope and ballot; multiple-page ballots would increase these costs.

Ballot printing costs: Local election authorities bear the cost of printing ballots for each election – paying to print multiple-page ballots would substantially increase printing costs.

Due to situational variables, it is not possible to determine a concrete amount of fiscal impact to this measure (beyond the aforementioned machine replacements). However, the costs to the state and to local election authorities could be significant.

Each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2

RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In fiscal year (FY) 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. The SOS estimates $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no fiscal impact to their office.

Officials from Greene County indicated there will be an increased cost to their county if voters vote to amend Article VIII with the proposed language in this initiative petition.

The sums of those cost estimates for Greene County to implement for a future election are as follows.

Total Cost Increase for General Elections: $20,399.63

The cost increase to administer the general election is in the coding cost and the increased length of the ballot necessary to tabulate a ranked-choice election. It is important to note, the November 2020 General Election costs were used, due to the final cost of November 2022 not being finalized at this time.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this proposed amendment has no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact to their college.

Officials from St. Louis Community College indicated the initiative petition does not appear to affect St Louis Community College directly; however, if the changes result in cost to the state and that in-turn reduces funding to the college then there is an impact. However, on the surface, it does not appear to affect the college positively or negatively, cost-wise.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated due to the large number of candidates for 34 at-large senatorial seats and 40 house seats, this could push the ballot to two pages. They believe this will cost $100,000 per general election (that has a two-page ballot). Also, they will have to buy new software to re-program their electronic pollbooks to comply with ranked-choice voting, which will have a fiscal impact of $50,000 in one-time costs.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners If this initiative petition were to become law, new software would need to be purchased at $25,000 and staff would need to be retrained at $10,000. The election day ballot would go to two pages due to the increased length of the ballot (200,000 times 50 cents a ballot) at $100,000. Legal notices would be placed in all Kanas City area newspapers at $30,000. Literature explaining rank choice voting would be printed and mailed to all voters at $100,000. Also election day judges would need to be trained at $30,000.

Total cost to implement this new law would be roughly $295,000. Of this amount, $100,000 for additional ballots would be on-going for every general election and $195,000 would be a one-time expenditure.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated their equipment is able to handle ranked choice voting so the proposal in the petition would have no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated:

Assuming the house/senate independent bipartisan citizens commission shall redistrict the house of representatives/senate lines, each election authority would have to incur costs associated with said redistricting and renaming of precincts, redrawing of all jurisdictional lines, mapping adjustments for the website and GIS consultant labor for their respective jurisdictions.
ESTIMATED COST	$50,000.00
Assuming this would be very confusing to the voters of Jackson County Election Board's voting public, an educational process would need to occur.
ESTIMATED COST	$200,000.00

Assuming multiple changes in software related to voting equipment would need to occur.
ESTIMATED COST	$250,000.00
	$500,000.00
This amount is estimated costs by the Jackson County Board of Election Commissioners. More costs might be incurred if more responsibilities of this proposed petition fall to the local jurisdictions.

Officials from the Clay County Board of Election Commissioners indicated after looking at this petition, they cannot determine if there would be any extra costs associated with this. The only thing would be the recounting of the ballots for ranked choice voting. This may take additional time for staff to complete, so it may be extra overtime wages for staff, which could amount to $200.00 to a $1,000.00 in extra wages for the election.

The State Auditor's office did not receive a response from the Adair County, Boone County, Callaway County, Cass County, Clay County, Cole County, Jackson County, Jasper County, St. Charles County, St. Louis County, Taney County, the City of Cape Girardeau, the City of Columbia, the City of Jefferson, the City of Joplin, the City of Kirksville, the City of Mexico, the City of Raymore, the City of St. Joseph, the City of St. Louis, the City of Springfield, the City of Union, the City of Wentzville, the City of West Plains, Cape Girardeau 63 School District, Hannibal 60 School District, Malta Bend R-V School District, Mehlville School District, Wellsville-Middletown R-1 School District, State Technical College of Missouri, University of Missouri, and the Board of Election Commissioners City of St. Louis.

Fiscal Note Summary

State government legislative operating costs are estimated to decrease by approximately $282,000 annually. State and local governmental entities estimate one-time costs of at least $695,000, and ongoing costs of at least $120,000 every general election year.

Be it enacted by the people of the state of Missouri:

Sections 290.502 and 290.512 of the Revised Statutes of Missouri are amended to read as follows:

290.502. 1. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, effective January 1, 2007, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of $ 6.50 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher.

3. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, and notwithstanding subsection 1 of this section, effective January 1, [2019] 2025, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of not less than [~~$8.60~~] $14.00 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased each year by [~~$.85~~] $1.00 per hour, effective January 1 of each of the next [four] two years, until it reaches [~~$12.00~~] $16.00 per hour, effective January 1, [2023] 2027. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased or decreased on January 1, [2024] 2028, and on January 1 of successive years, per the method set forth in subsection 2 of this section. If at any time the federal minimum wage rate is above or is thereafter increased above the minimum wage then in effect under this subsection, the minimum wage required by this subsection shall continue to be increased pursuant to this subsection 3, but the higher federal rate shall immediately become the minimum wage required by this subsection and shall be increased or decreased per the method set forth in subsection 2 for so long as it remains higher than the state minimum wage required and increased pursuant to this subsection.

4. For purposes of this section, the term "public employer" means an employer that is the state or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, or other political subdivision of the state. Subsection 3 of this section shall not apply to a public employer with respect to its employees. Any public employer that is subject to subsections 1 and 2 of this section shall continue to be subject to those subsections.

290.512. 1. [No] Except as provided in subsection 2 of this section, no employer of any employee who receives and retains compensation in the form of gratuities in addition to wages is required to pay wages in excess of fifty percent of the minimum wage rate specified in sections 290.500 to 290.530, however, total compensation for such employee shall total at least the minimum wage specified in sections 290.500 to 290.530, the difference being made up by the employer.

2. Beginning January 1, 2025, and notwithstanding the percentage established in subsection 1 of this section, no employer of any employee who receives and retains compensation in the form of gratuities in addition to wages is required to pay wages in excess of the percentages, as set forth in this subsection below, of the minimum wage rate specified in subsection 3 of section 290.502 or where applicable the minimum wage otherwise specified in sections 290.500 to 290.530, effective the dates set forth in this subsection below:

- (1) fifty-five percent, effective January 1, 2025;
- (2) sixty percent, effective January 1, 2026;
- (3) sixty-five percent, effective January 1, 2027;
- (4) seventy percent, effective January 1, 2028;
- (5) seventy-five percent, effective January 1, 2029;
- (6) eighty percent, effective January 1, 2030;
- (7) eighty-five percent, effective January 1, 2031;
- (8) ninety percent, effective January 1, 2032;
- (9) ninety-five percent, effective January 1, 2033;
- (10) one hundred percent, effective January 1, 2034;

however, in all cases, total compensation for such employee shall total at least the minimum wage specified in subsection 3 of section 290.502 or where applicable the minimum wage otherwise specified in sections 290.500 to 290.530, the difference being made up by the employer.

3. Subsection 2 of this section shall not apply to a public employer, as defined in section 290.502.4, with respect to its employees. Any public employer that is subject to subsection 1 of this section shall continue to be subject to that subsection at the percentage set forth therein of the minimum wage rate specified in subsections 1 and 2 of section 290.502 or where applicable the minimum wage otherwise specified in sections 290.500 to 290.530.

[2.] 4. If an employee receives and retains compensation in the form of goods or services as an incident of his employment and if he is not required to exercise any discretion in order to receive the goods or services, the employer is required to pay only the difference between the fair market value of the goods and services and the minimum wage otherwise required to be paid by sections 290.500 to 290.530. The fair market value of the goods and services shall be computed on a weekly basis. The director shall provide by regulation a method of valuing the goods and services received by any employee in lieu of the wages otherwise required to be paid under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530. He shall also provide by regulation a method of determining those types of goods and services that are an incident of employment the receipt of which does not require any discretion on the part of the employee.

Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, they could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. However, if the enactment of this proposal were to result in substantial additional litigation, they may be required to request additional appropriations.

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated there is no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated this initiative petition would not have a fiscal impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated that this petition if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated they assume no direct fiscal impact from the proposed statutory amendment to Chapter 290 as government employees are exempt from its provisions. However, employees of providers that receive their department's funding would be impacted, which would include all contracted department providers.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated this proposal might impact their department however, they defer to the Office of Administration to respond.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated their department currently has employees earning less than $16.25 an hour, however, with the delayed implementation date of 2027, it is unknown what pay plans state employees will be provided that would raise these employees to above the set $16.25 amount. Therefore this legislation has a $0 to unknown fiscal cost. Section 290.512 regarding minimum wages in cases where employees receive gratuities in addition to wages is not applicable to their department, as they do not have any positions receiving gratuities.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety - Office of the Director indicated no impact to their office.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated no impact for their department.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated they do not anticipate a fiscal impact at this time.

Officials from the Governor's office indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage law does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Missouri House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact as the language states that the new rate does not apply to State employees under the definition of public employer.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated this petition would have no immediate fiscal impact on their agency. Given that it proposes to gradually increase the minimum wage over time, it is possible, in the future, it could have a fiscal impact, but that assumes their agency does not increase the lowest rate they currently pay their employees over that same time period. They do not pay any of their employees by gratuity. As such, that proposed revision would have no fiscal impact on their agency.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated no fiscal impact expected from their department on this initiative petition.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage law does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated they would have an impact even if exempt.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In FY 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over 5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. They estimate $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no fiscal impact to their office.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county for this initiative petition.

Officials from St Louis County indicated no fiscal impact for their county government.

Officials from the City of Jefferson indicated that if public employers are exempt then they do not think there will be a fiscal impact to their city.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this petition would have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated that for the college to attract and retain employees, they will need competitive wages. Although there would not be a direct fiscal impact on any of those scenarios presented, they expect there to be indirect impact.

Officials from Missouri Southern State University indicated no impact as they would be exempt as a public employer.

Officials from St. Louis Community College indicated while any increase in the minimum wage could have a detrimental effect on their budget, the prospective change in a wage rate based upon a CPI-W increase (or any other index) cannot be determined at this time. Their current cost structure on hourly employees is generally at or exceeding the $16.00/hr rate; therefore, the effect would be minimal until the CPI-W kicks in. The College does not pay gratuities to employees so Para 2 under 290.512 is not applicable. No STLCC employee receives compensation in the form of goods and services (i.e. Barter).

Officials from University of Central Missouri indicated they have determined the impact of this petition to be: No impact.

Officials from the Board of Election Commissioners City of St. Louis indicated they are public employees and exempt for this petition and have no fiscal impact.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated they do not predict any fiscal impact for this petition.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners indicated no material impact on their operations.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated this petition would not have a fiscal impact on their board.

Our analysis estimates the impact of the proposed petitions on state sales and personal income tax revenue in Missouri. Our analysis follows a process that has been used in the past to estimate the impact of minimum wage increases, with some updates. We are unable to provide calculations on local sales and income tax revenue, although it should be noted that impacted workers in Kansas City and St. Louis City are subject to a 1% earnings tax on income, so those municipalities will experience revenue gains from their constituents seeing wage increases. Local sales tax revenue will also increase, although the different taxing rates per jurisdiction made estimates overly cumbersome to predict. We also reference some economic literature on the impact of minimum wage laws on employment , social benefit spending and downstream impacts of wage increase in order to address some common claims made by opponents of similar initiatives in the past as well as provide a broader context of impact of wage increases.

As each of these petitions explicitly exclude public employers¹ from proposed increases, we do not include an analysis of payroll expenses to these employers.

I. Economic literature on the employment impact of increases in the minimum wage

With 30 states and numerous other municipalities having increased the minimum wage above the federal minimum, there is ample evidence of the impact of these increases. While opponents will undoubtedly cite individual studies that predict catastrophic job loss and resulting decline in state revenue, the most credible comprehensive review of empirical evidence comes from Hristos Doucouliagos and T.D. Stanley and shows no discernible impact on employment. Their study, “Publication Selection Bias in Minimum- Wage Research? A Meta-Regression Analysis²” combines over 1,500 estimates from 64 different studies. This peer reviewed article has the advantage of any single study in that it used a set of predetermined, objective criteria for weighing the validity of statistical findings across different studies that produced different results.

In addition to this comprehensive review, a recent publication “Are $15 Minimum Wages too High” provides an analysis of California which has gradually increased the minimum wage from $8 in 2014 to $15 in 2022. Their analysis focuses on impacts of two groups of workers most exposed to minimum wage increases- teenagers and restaurant workers and finds that “substantial and ongoing pay increases throughout the treatment period and find no significant disemployment effects, even in relatively low-wage counties.³” This is the most recent study and is analyzing a similar level of increases and time period as the proposed initiatives.

There is ample empirical and theoretical evidence that corroborates these studies. First, relative to total wage and labor costs, minimum-wage increases are small. Second, employers and workers respond to minimum wage increases in many ways that reduce the actual costs to employers.

Probably the most important economic response to a higher minimum wage is a reduction in turnover. At higher wages, employers fill vacancies faster and retain employees longer, boosting total employment and average productivity per worker while reducing direct and indirect training costs. A 2017 study by employee benefits news found that turnover costs as high as 33% of a workers annual salary⁴. Avoiding these costs provides an obvious benefit to employers and research from Dube, Lester and Reich in 2012⁵ finds “striking evidence that separations, new hires, and turnover rates for teens and restaurant workers fall substantially following a minimum wage increase.”

Based on these empirical studies we feel confident in concluding that there is no evidence that increasing the minimum wage will reduce employment. Accordingly, we do not include any projections for impact on employment and the resulting effects on revenue in our analysis.

II. Impact on state and federal spending on social safety net programs

One area where the state is likely to experience significant direct savings from an increase in the minimum wage is on state spending on social safety net programs. Research suggests that at least 44% of Missouri recipients of Medicaid, SNAP or the Federal EITC are members of working families who would be directly impacted by the proposed initiatives⁶. State and Federal spending for this share of the workers on these programs totals $2,400,000.00 dollars. While programs such as SNAP are paid entirely by the federal government, medicaid has a percentage paid by state revenue and the state EITC going into effect this year will cost the state revenue. While individual circumstances often dictate the cost of these or similar programs to the state, it holds that as workers earn higher wages at work access to these benefits will decrease, saving the state potentially tens of millions of dollars.

III. Estimate of number of workers impacted statewide and impact on wages

Number of impacted workers				Total Wage Growth
	Direct impact	Indirectly impacted	Total
Proposal 1	293,000	198,000	491,000	$576,819,000

Proposal 3	331,000	194,000	525,000	$733,133,000
Proposal 4	394,000	241,000	635,000	$1,222,991,000

IV. Estimate of state income and sales tax revenue

⁶ <https://laborcenter.berkeley.edu/the-public-cost-of-a-low-federal-minimum-wage/>

Based on the wage increase numbers above and the conclusion that minimum wage increases have no discernible impact on employment, we next calculate the impact of projected increases on state sales tax revenue and individual state income tax revenue for Missouri. As previously mentioned, we do not include estimates for local impacts, although we do project increased revenue there as local jurisdictions do capture sales tax revenue and in the case of the Kansas City and the City of St. Louis, increases in income are subject to the individual 1% earnings tax. We do not include any speculation of increased prices as a way to offset higher wages, although any such increase would result in higher sales tax revenue.

	Estimated sales tax revenue*	Estimated individual income tax revenue	Total revenue
Proposal 1	$8,738,808	$24,367,615	$33,106,423
Proposal 2	$16,302,112	$45,457,412	$61,759,524
Proposal 3	$11,712,965	$32,660,864	$44,373,829
Proposal 4	$18,528,314	$51,665,035	$70,193,348
Proposal 5	$10,434,123	$29,094,895	$39,529,018
Proposal 6	$18,380,525	$51,252,936	$69,633,462
Proposal 7	$12,920,268	$36,027,354	$48,947,623
Proposal 8	$20,397,748	$56,877,834	$77,275,582

State sales tax revenue is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average annual Missouri General Revenue sales tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 1.515%)*

Income tax is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average Missouri net individual income tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 4.523%) less an expected 6.6% reduction in collections due to the recent reduction of Missouri's top income tax bracket to 4.95%.*

V. Other downstream impacts of higher wages

Countless studies have also demonstrated the negative health impacts on adults and children of low wages as well as the negative impacts on child development, including academic achievement, of low wages. These situations often contain confounding variables that can make ascertaining cause and effect difficult, recent research using natural experiments to measure the direction of causation of the impact of public policies offers guidance for consideration. The research makes clear that “increases in parental income are found to lead to higher test scores and better educational outcomes for children, greater likelihood of employment in young adulthood, and improved earnings⁷.” While the exact impact on state or local revenue is difficult to predict, research shows that the impact of higher wages on student academic achievement were four times higher per dollar increase as the effects found in a study of class size reductions that cost around $12,000 per student⁸.” Direct impacts on state and local revenue, especially in the short term, are difficult to predict, but the growing body of research shows definite positive long term impacts on human development resulting from wage increases.

VI. Conclusion

Overall we conclude that these petitions would generate a minimum net benefit to state general revenue of between thirty three and seventy seven million dollars with an undetermined net benefit for local revenue based on local considerations. This benefit is the direct result of the wage increases. Other savings are likely to accrue from a decrease in spending on safety net programs and a downstream benefit to the families of recipients of the wage increases. We submit this information in hopes that it can be useful in your determination of the fiscal impact of the proposed initiatives. Should you need any other information please do not hesitate to contact our office.

Be it enacted by the people of the state of Missouri:

Sections 290.502 and 290.512 of the Revised Statutes of Missouri are amended to read as follows:

290.502. 1. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, effective January 1, 2007, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of $ 6.50 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher.

3. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, and notwithstanding subsection 1 of this section, effective January 1, [2019] 2025, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of not less than [~~$8.60~~] $13.75 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased [each year] by [~~$.85~~] $1.25 per hour, [effective January 1 of each of the next four years, until it reaches $12.00 per hour] to $15.00 per hour, effective January 1, [2023] 2026. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased or decreased on January 1, [2024] 2027, and on January 1 of successive years, per the method set forth in subsection 2 of this section. If at any time the federal minimum wage rate is above or is thereafter increased above the minimum wage then in effect under this subsection, the minimum wage required by this subsection shall continue to be increased pursuant to this subsection 3, but the higher federal rate shall immediately become the minimum wage required by this subsection and shall be increased or decreased per the method set forth in subsection 2 for so long as it remains higher than the state minimum wage required and increased pursuant to this subsection.

4. For purposes of this section, the term "public employer" means an employer that is the state or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, or other political subdivision of the state. Subsection 3 of this section shall not apply to a public employer with respect to its employees. Any public employer that is subject to subsections 1 and 2 of this section shall continue to be subject to those subsections.

290.512. 1. [No] Except as provided in subsection 2 of this section, no employer of any employee who receives and retains compensation in the form of gratuities in addition to wages is required to pay wages in excess of fifty percent of the minimum wage rate specified in sections 290.500 to 290.530, however, total compensation for such employee shall total at least the minimum wage specified in sections 290.500 to 290.530, the difference being made up by the employer.

2. Beginning January 1, 2025, and notwithstanding the percentage established in subsection 1 of this section, no employer of any employee who receives and retains compensation in the form of gratuities in addition to wages is required to pay wages in excess of the percentages, as set forth in this subsection below, of the minimum wage rate specified in sections 290.500 to 290.530, effective the dates set forth in this subsection below:

- (1) fifty-five percent, effective January 1, 2025;
- (2) sixty percent, effective January 1, 2026;
- (3) sixty-five percent, effective January 1, 2027;
- (4) seventy percent, effective January 1, 2028;
- (5) seventy-five percent, effective January 1, 2029;
- (6) eighty percent, effective January 1, 2030;
- (7) eighty-five percent, effective January 1, 2031;
- (8) ninety percent, effective January 1, 2032;
- (9) ninety-five percent, effective January 1, 2033;
- (10) one hundred percent, effective January 1, 2034;

however, in all cases, total compensation for such employee shall total at least the minimum wage specified in subsection 3 of section 290.502 or where applicable the minimum wage otherwise specified in sections 290.500 to 290.530, the difference being made up by the employer.

3. Subsection 2 of this section shall not apply to a public employer, as defined in section 290.502.4, with respect to its employees. Any public employer that is subject to subsection 1 of this section shall continue to be subject to that subsection at the percentage set forth therein of the minimum wage rate specified in subsections 1 and 2 of section 290.502 or where applicable the minimum wage otherwise specified in sections 290.500 to 290.530.

[2.] 4. If an employee receives and retains compensation in the form of goods or services as an incident of his employment and if he is not required to exercise any discretion in order to receive the goods or services, the employer is required to pay only the difference between the fair market value of the goods and services and the minimum wage otherwise required to be paid by sections 290.500 to 290.530. The fair market value of the goods and services shall be computed on a weekly basis. The director shall provide by regulation a method of valuing the goods and services received by any employee in lieu of the wages otherwise required to be paid under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530. He shall also provide by regulation a method of determining those types of goods and services that are an incident of employment the receipt of which does not require any discretion on the part of the employee.

Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, they could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. However, if the enactment of this proposal were to result in substantial additional litigation, they may be required to request additional appropriations.

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated this initiative petition would not have a fiscal impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated that this petition if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated they assume no direct fiscal impact from the proposed statutory amendment to Chapter 290 as government employees are exempt from its provisions. However, employees of providers that receive their department's funding would be impacted, which would include all contracted department providers.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated this proposal might impact their department however, they defer to the Office of Administration to respond.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact for this initiative petition proposing to amend Chapter 290, RSMo, Version 7.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety - Office of the Director indicated no impact to their office.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated no impact for their department.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated they do not anticipate a fiscal impact at this time.

Officials from the Governor's office indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage law does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Missouri House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact as the language states that the new rate does not apply to State employees under the definition of public employer.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated this petition would have no immediate fiscal impact on their agency. Given that it proposes to gradually increase the minimum wage over time, it is possible, in the future, it could have a fiscal impact, but that assumes their agency does not increase the lowest rate they currently pay their employees over that same time period. They have no employees that receive gratuities. As such, any proposed revision addressing that form of payment would have no fiscal impact on their agency.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated no fiscal impact expected from their department on this initiative petition.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated the proposal relating to minimum wage law does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated they would have an impact even if exempt.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In FY 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over 5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. They estimate $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, we reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of our publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no fiscal impact to their office.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county for this initiative petition.

Officials from St Louis County indicated no fiscal impact for their county government.

Officials from the City of Jefferson indicated that if public employers are exempt then they do not think there will be a fiscal impact to their city.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this petition would have no fiscal impact on their city.

Official from Metropolitan Community College indicated that for the college to attract and retain employees, they will need competitive wages. Although there would not be a direct fiscal impact on any of those scenarios presented, they expect there to be indirect impact.

Officials from St. Louis Community College indicated while any increase in the minimum wage could have a detrimental effect on their budget, the prospective change in a wage rate based upon a CPI-W increase (or any other index) cannot be determined at this time. Their current cost structure on hourly employees is generally at or exceeding the $15.00/hr rate; therefore, the effect would be minimal until the CPI-W kicks in. The College does not pay gratuities to employees so Para 2 under 290.512 is not applicable. No STLCC employee receives compensation in the form of goods and services (i.e. Barter).

Officials from University of Central Missouri indicated they have determined the impact of this petition to be: No impact.

Officials from Missouri Southern State University indicated no impact as they would be exempt as a public employer.

Officials from the Board of Election Commissioners City of St. Louis indicated they are public employees and exempt for this petition and have no fiscal impact.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated they do not predict any fiscal impact for this petition.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners indicated no material impact on their operations.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated this petition would not have a fiscal impact on their board.

This letter is from Richard von Glahn and Missouri Jobs with Justice Voter Action, proponents of the above referenced minimum wage petitions. Pursuant to RsMO 116.175 we write to submit the following fiscal impact information to assist your office in the analysis of of the above mentioned eight minimum wage petitions.

Our analysis estimates the impact of the proposed petitions on state sales and personal income tax revenue in Missouri. Our analysis follows a process that has been used in the past to estimate the impact of minimum wage increases, with some updates. We are unable to provide calculations on local sales and income tax revenue, although it should be noted that impacted workers in Kansas City and St. Louis City are subject to a 1% earnings tax on income, so those municipalities will experience revenue gains from their constituents seeing wage increases. Local sales tax revenue will also increase, although the different taxing rates per jurisdiction made estimates overly cumbersome to predict. We also reference some economic literature on the impact of minimum wage laws on employment , social benefit spending and downstream impacts of wage increase in order to address some common claims made by opponents of similar initiatives in the past as well as provide a broader context of impact of wage increases.

As each of these petitions explicitly exclude public employers¹ from proposed increases, we do not include an analysis of payroll expenses to these employers.

I. Economic literature on the employment impact of increases in the minimum wage

With 30 states and numerous other municipalities having increased the minimum wage above the federal minimum, there is ample evidence of the impact of these increases. While opponents will undoubtedly cite individual studies that predict catastrophic job loss and resulting decline in state revenue, the most credible comprehensive review of empirical evidence comes from Hristos Doucouliagos and T.D. Stanley and shows no discernible impact on employment. Their study, “Publication Selection Bias in Minimum- Wage Research? A Meta-Regression Analysis²” combines over 1,500 estimates from 64 different studies. This peer reviewed article has the advantage of any single study in that it used a set of predetermined, objective criteria for weighing the validity of statistical findings across different studies that produced different results.

In addition to this comprehensive review, a recent publication “Are $15 Minimum Wages too High” provides an analysis of California which has gradually increased the minimum wage from $8 in 2014 to $15 in 2022. Their analysis focuses on impacts of two groups of workers most exposed to minimum wage increases- teenagers and restaurant workers and finds that “substantial and ongoing pay increases throughout the treatment period and find no significant disemployment effects, even in relatively low-wage counties.³” This is the most recent study and is analyzing a similar level of increases and time period as the proposed initiatives.

There is ample empirical and theoretical evidence that corroborates these studies. First, relative to total wage and labor costs, minimum-wage increases are small. Second, employers and workers respond to minimum wage increases in many ways that reduce the actual costs to employers.

Probably the most important economic response to a higher minimum wage is a reduction in turnover. At higher wages, employers fill vacancies faster and retain employees longer, boosting total employment and average productivity per worker while reducing direct and indirect training costs. A 2017 study by employee benefits news found that turnover costs as high as 33% of a workers annual salary⁴. Avoiding these costs provides an obvious benefit to employers and research from Dube, Lester and Reich in 2012⁵ finds “striking evidence that separations, new hires, and turnover rates for teens and restaurant workers fall substantially following a minimum wage increase.”

Based on these empirical studies we feel confident in concluding that there is no evidence that increasing the minimum wage will reduce employment. Accordingly, we do not include any projections for impact on employment and the resulting effects on revenue in our analysis.

II. Impact on state and federal spending on social safety net programs

One area where the state is likely to experience significant direct savings from an increase in the minimum wage is on state spending on social safety net programs. Research suggests that at least 44% of Missouri recipients of Medicaid, SNAP or the Federal EITC are members of working families who would be directly impacted by the proposed initiatives⁶. State and Federal spending for this share of the workers on these programs totals $2,400,000.00 dollars. While programs such as SNAP are paid entirely by the federal government, medicaid has a percentage paid by state revenue and the state EITC going into effect this year will cost the state revenue. While individual circumstances often dictate the cost of these or similar programs to the state, it holds that as workers earn higher wages at work access to these benefits will decrease, saving the state potentially tens of millions of dollars.

III. Estimate of number of workers impacted statewide and impact on wages

Number of impacted workers				Total Wage Growth
	Direct impact	Indirectly impacted	Total
Proposal 1	293,000	198,000	491,000	$576,819,000
Proposal 2	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,076,047,000
Proposal 3	331,000	194,000	525,000	$733,133,000
Proposal 4	394,000	241,000	635,000	$1,222,991,000

Across all eight version of the petitions estimates show a low of $576 million and a high of over $1.3 billion in wage growth for Missouri workers. These estimates include direct impacts to workers making under the minimum wage as well as secondary impacts to workers whose wages are predicted to rise as a result of the minimum wage increases.

IV. Estimate of state income and sales tax revenue

⁶ <https://laborcenter.berkeley.edu/the-public-cost-of-a-low-federal-minimum-wage/>

Based on the wage increase numbers above and the conclusion that minimum wage increases have no discernible impact on employment, we next calculate the impact of projected increases on state sales tax revenue and individual state income tax revenue for Missouri. As previously mentioned, we do not include estimates for local impacts, although we do project increased revenue there as local jurisdictions do capture sales tax revenue and in the case of the Kansas City and the City of St. Louis, increases in income are subject to the individual 1% earnings tax. We do not include any speculation of increased prices as a way to offset higher wages, although any such increase would result in higher sales tax revenue.

	Estimated sales tax revenue*	Estimated individual income tax revenue	Total revenue
Proposal 1	$8,738,808	$24,367,615	$33,106,423
Proposal 2	$16,302,112	$45,457,412	$61,759,524
Proposal 3	$11,712,965	$32,660,864	$44,373,829
Proposal 4	$18,528,314	$51,665,035	$70,193,348
Proposal 5	$10,434,123	$29,094,895	$39,529,018
Proposal 6	$18,380,525	$51,252,936	$69,633,462
Proposal 7	$12,920,268	$36,027,354	$48,947,623
Proposal 8	$20,397,748	$56,877,834	$77,275,582

State sales tax revenue is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average annual Missouri General Revenue sales tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 1.515%)*

Income tax is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average Missouri net individual income tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 4.523%) less an expected 6.6% reduction in collections due to the recent reduction of Missouri's top income tax bracket to 4.95%.*

V. Other downstream impacts of higher wages

Countless studies have also demonstrated the negative health impacts on adults and children of low wages as well as the negative impacts on child development, including academic achievement, of low wages. These situations often contain confounding variables that can make ascertaining cause and effect difficult, recent research using natural experiments to measure the direction of causation of the impact of public policies offers guidance for consideration. The research makes clear that “increases in parental income are found to lead to higher test scores and better educational outcomes for children, greater likelihood of employment in young adulthood, and improved earnings⁷.” While the exact impact on state or local revenue is difficult to predict, research shows that the impact of higher wages on student academic achievement were four times higher per dollar increase as the effects found in a study of class size reductions that cost around $12,000 per student⁸.” Direct impacts on state and local revenue, especially in the short term, are difficult to predict, but the growing body of research shows definite positive long term impacts on human development resulting from wage increases.

VI. Conclusion

Overall we conclude that these petitions would generate a minimum net benefit to state general revenue of between thirty three and seventy seven million dollars with an undetermined net benefit for local revenue based on local considerations. This benefit is the direct result of the wage increases. Other savings are likely to accrue from a decrease in spending on safety net programs and a downstream benefit to the families of recipients of the wage increases. We submit this information in hopes that it can be useful in your determination of the fiscal impact of the proposed initiatives. Should you need any other information please do not hesitate to contact our office.

Be it enacted by the people of the state of Missouri:

Sections 290.502 and 290.512 of the Revised Statutes of Missouri are amended to read as follows:

290.502. 1. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, effective January 1, 2007, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of $ 6.50 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher.

2. The minimum wage shall be increased or decreased on January 1, 2008, and on January 1 of successive years, by the increase or decrease in the cost of living. On September 30, 2007, and on each September 30 of each successive year, the director shall measure the increase or decrease in the cost of living by the percentage increase or decrease as of the preceding July over the level as of July of the immediately preceding year of the Consumer Price Index for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers (CPI-W) or successor index as published by the U.S. Department of Labor or its successor agency, with the amount of the minimum wage increase or decrease rounded to the nearest five cents.

3. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, and notwithstanding subsection 1 of this section, effective January 1, [2019] 2025, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of not less than [~~$8.60~~] $13.75 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased each year by [~~$.85~~] $1.25 per hour, effective January 1 of each of the next [~~four~~] two years, until it reaches [~~$12.00~~] $16.25 per hour, effective January 1, [2023] 2027. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased or decreased on January 1, [2024] 2028, and on January 1 of successive years, per the method set forth in subsection 2 of this section. If at any time the federal minimum wage rate is above or is thereafter increased above the minimum wage then in effect under this subsection, the minimum wage required by this subsection shall continue to be increased pursuant to this subsection 3, but the higher federal rate shall immediately become the minimum wage required by this subsection and shall be increased or decreased per the method set forth in subsection 2 for so long as it remains higher than the state minimum wage required and increased pursuant to this subsection.

4. For purposes of this section, the term "public employer" means an employer that is the state or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, or other political subdivision of the state. Subsection 3 of this section shall not apply to a public employer with respect to its employees. Any public employer that is subject to subsections 1 and 2 of this section shall continue to be subject to those subsections.

290.512. 1. [No] Except as provided in subsection 2 of this section, no employer of any employee who receives and retains compensation in the form of gratuities in addition to wages is required to pay wages in excess of fifty percent of the minimum wage rate specified in sections 290.500 to 290.530, however, total compensation for such employee shall total at least the minimum wage specified in sections 290.500 to 290.530, the difference being made up by the employer.

2. Beginning January 1, 2025, and notwithstanding the percentage established in subsection 1 of this section, no employer of any employee who receives and retains compensation in the form of gratuities in addition to wages is required to pay wages in excess of the percentages, as set forth in this subsection below, of the minimum wage rate specified in subsection 3 of section 290.502 or where applicable the minimum wage otherwise specified in sections 290.500 to 290.530, effective the dates set forth in this subsection below:

- (1) fifty-five percent, effective January 1, 2025;
- (2) sixty percent, effective January 1, 2026;
- (3) sixty-five percent, effective January 1, 2027;
- (4) seventy percent, effective January 1, 2028;
- (5) seventy-five percent, effective January 1, 2029;
- (6) eighty percent, effective January 1, 2030;
- (7) eighty-five percent, effective January 1, 2031;
- (8) ninety percent, effective January 1, 2032;
- (9) ninety-five percent, effective January 1, 2033;
- (10) one hundred percent, effective January 1, 2034;

however, in all cases, total compensation for such employee shall total at least the minimum wage specified in subsection 3 of section 290.502 or where applicable the minimum wage otherwise specified in sections 290.500 to 290.530, the difference being made up by the employer.

3. Subsection 2 of this section shall not apply to a public employer, as defined in section 290.502.4, with respect to its employees. Any public employer that is subject to subsection 1 of this section shall continue to be subject to that subsection at the percentage set forth therein of the minimum wage rate specified in subsections 1 and 2 of section 290.502 or where applicable the minimum wage otherwise specified in sections 290.500 to 290.530.

[2.] 4. If an employee receives and retains compensation in the form of goods or services as an incident of his employment and if he is not required to exercise any discretion in order to receive the goods or services, the employer is required to pay only the difference between the fair market value of the goods and services and the minimum wage otherwise required to be paid by sections 290.500 to 290.530. The fair market value of the goods and services shall be computed on a weekly basis. The director shall provide by regulation a method of valuing the goods and services received by any employee in lieu of the wages otherwise required to be paid under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530. He shall also provide by regulation a method of determining those types of goods and services that are an incident of employment the receipt of which does not require any discretion on the part of the employee.

Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, they could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. However, if the enactment of this proposal were to result in substantial additional litigation, they may be required to request additional appropriations.

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated that this petition if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated they assume no direct fiscal impact from the proposed statutory amendment to Chapter 290 as government employees are exempt from its provisions. However, employees of providers that receive their department's funding would be impacted, which would include all contracted department providers.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated this proposal might impact their department however, they defer to the Office of Administration to respond.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated their department currently has employees earning less than $16.25 an hour, however, with the delayed implementation date of 2027, it is unknown what pay plans state employees will be provided that would raise these employees to above the set $16.25 amount. Therefore this legislation has a $0 to unknown fiscal cost. Section 290.512 regarding minimum wages in cases where employees receive gratuities in addition to wages is not applicable to their department, as they do not have any positions receiving gratuities.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact for this initiative petition proposing to amend Chapter 290, RSMo, Version 6.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety - Office of the Director indicated no impact to their office.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated no impact for their department.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated they do not anticipate a fiscal impact at this time.

Officials from the Governor's office indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage law does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Missouri House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact as the language states that the new rate does not apply to State employees under the definition of public employer.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated this petition would have no immediate fiscal impact on their agency. Given that it proposes to gradually increase the minimum wage over time, it is possible, in the future, it could have a fiscal impact, but that assumes their agency does not increase the lowest rate they currently pay their employees over that same time period.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated no fiscal impact expected from their department on this initiative petition.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated the proposal relating to minimum wage law does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated they would have an impact even if exempt.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In FY 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over 5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. They estimate $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, we reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of our publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no fiscal impact to their office.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county for this initiative petition.

Officials from St Louis County indicated no fiscal impact for their county government.

Officials from the City of Jefferson indicated that if public employers are exempt then they do not think there will be a fiscal impact to their city.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this petition would have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated that for the college to attract and retain employees, they will need competitive wages. Although there would not be a direct fiscal impact on any of those scenarios presented, they expect there to be indirect impact.

Officials from St. Louis Community College indicated while any increase in the minimum wage could have a detrimental effect on their budget, the prospective change in a wage rate based upon a CPI-W increase (or any other index) cannot be determined at this time. Their current cost structure on hourly employees is generally at or exceeding the $16.25/hr rate; therefore, the effect would be minimal until the CPI-W kicks in. The College does not pay gratuities to employees so Para 2 under 290.512 is not applicable.

Officials from University of Central Missouri indicated they have determined the impact of this petition to be: No impact.

Officials from Missouri Southern State University indicated no impact as they would be exempt as a public employer.

Officials from the Board of Election Commissioners City of St. Louis indicated they are public employees and exempt for this petition and have no fiscal impact.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated they do not predict any fiscal impact for this petition.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners indicated no material impact on their operations.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated this petition would not have a fiscal impact on their board.

This letter is from Richard von Glahn and Missouri Jobs with Justice Voter Action, proponents of the above referenced minimum wage petitions. Pursuant to RsMO 116.175 we write to submit the following fiscal impact information to assist your office in the analysis of of the above mentioned eight minimum wage petitions.

Our analysis estimates the impact of the proposed petitions on state sales and personal income tax revenue in Missouri. Our analysis follows a process that has been used in the past to estimate the impact of minimum wage increases, with some updates. We are unable to provide calculations on local sales and income tax revenue, although it should be noted that impacted workers in Kansas City and St. Louis City are subject to a 1% earnings tax on income, so those municipalities will experience revenue gains from their constituents seeing wage increases. Local sales tax revenue will also increase, although the different taxing rates per jurisdiction made estimates overly cumbersome to predict. We also reference some economic literature on the impact of minimum wage laws on employment , social benefit spending and downstream impacts of wage increase in order to address some common claims made by opponents of similar initiatives in the past as well as provide a broader context of impact of wage increases.

As each of these petitions explicitly exclude public employers¹ from proposed increases, we do not include an analysis of payroll expenses to these employers.

I. Economic literature on the employment impact of increases in the minimum wage

With 30 states and numerous other municipalities having increased the minimum wage above the federal minimum, there is ample evidence of the impact of these increases. While opponents will undoubtedly cite individual studies that predict catastrophic job loss and resulting decline in state revenue, the most credible comprehensive review of empirical evidence comes from Hristos Doucouliagos and T.D. Stanley and shows no discernible impact on employment. Their study, “Publication Selection Bias in Minimum- Wage Research? A Meta-Regression Analysis²” combines over 1,500 estimates from 64 different studies. This peer reviewed article has the advantage of any single study in that it used a set of predetermined, objective criteria for weighing the validity of statistical findings across different studies that produced different results.

In addition to this comprehensive review, a recent publication “Are $15 Minimum Wages too High” provides an analysis of California which has gradually increased the minimum wage from $8 in 2014 to $15 in 2022. Their analysis focuses on impacts of two groups of workers most exposed to minimum wage increases- teenagers and restaurant workers and finds that “substantial and ongoing pay increases throughout the treatment period and find no significant disemployment effects, even in relatively low-wage counties.³” This is the most recent study and is analyzing a similar level of increases and time period as the proposed initiatives.

There is ample empirical and theoretical evidence that corroborates these studies. First, relative to total wage and labor costs, minimum-wage increases are small. Second, employers and workers respond to minimum wage increases in many ways that reduce the actual costs to employers.

Probably the most important economic response to a higher minimum wage is a reduction in turnover. At higher wages, employers fill vacancies faster and retain employees longer, boosting total employment and average productivity per worker while reducing direct and indirect training costs. A 2017 study by employee benefits news found that turnover costs as high as 33% of a workers annual salary⁴. Avoiding these costs provides an obvious benefit to employers and research from Dube, Lester and Reich in 2012⁵ finds “striking evidence that separations, new hires, and turnover rates for teens and restaurant workers fall substantially following a minimum wage increase.”

Based on these empirical studies we feel confident in concluding that there is no evidence that increasing the minimum wage will reduce employment. Accordingly, we do not include any projections for impact on employment and the resulting effects on revenue in our analysis.

II. Impact on state and federal spending on social safety net programs

One area where the state is likely to experience significant direct savings from an increase in the minimum wage is on state spending on social safety net programs. Research suggests that at least 44% of Missouri recipients of Medicaid, SNAP or the Federal EITC are members of working families who would be directly impacted by the proposed initiatives⁶. State and Federal spending for this share of the workers on these programs totals $2,400,000.00 dollars. While programs such as SNAP are paid entirely by the federal government, medicaid has a percentage paid by state revenue and the state EITC going into effect this year will cost the state revenue. While individual circumstances often dictate the cost of these or similar programs to the state, it holds that as workers earn higher wages at work access to these benefits will decrease, saving the state potentially tens of millions of dollars.

III. Estimate of number of workers impacted statewide and impact on wages

Number of impacted workers				Total Wage Growth
	Direct impact	Indirectly impacted	Total
Proposal 1	293,000	198,000	491,000	$576,819,000
Proposal 2	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,076,047,000
Proposal 3	331,000	194,000	525,000	$733,133,000
Proposal 4	394,000	241,000	635,000	$1,222,991,000

Proposal 7	331,000	194,000	525,000	$852,823,000

Across all eight version of the petitions estimates show a low of $576 million and a high of over $1.3 billion in wage growth for Missouri workers. These estimates include direct impacts to workers making under the minimum wage as well as secondary impacts to workers whose wages are predicted to rise as a result of the minimum wage increases.

IV. Estimate of state income and sales tax revenue

⁶ <https://laborcenter.berkeley.edu/the-public-cost-of-a-low-federal-minimum-wage/>

Based on the wage increase numbers above and the conclusion that minimum wage increases have no discernible impact on employment, we next calculate the impact of projected increases on state sales tax revenue and individual state income tax revenue for Missouri. As previously mentioned, we do not include estimates for local impacts, although we do project increased revenue there as local jurisdictions do capture sales tax revenue and in the case of the Kansas City and the City of St. Louis, increases in income are subject to the individual 1% earnings tax. We do not include any speculation of increased prices as a way to offset higher wages, although any such increase would result in higher sales tax revenue.

	Estimated sales tax revenue*	Estimated individual income tax revenue	Total revenue
Proposal 1	$8,738,808	$24,367,615	$33,106,423
Proposal 2	$16,302,112	$45,457,412	$61,759,524
Proposal 3	$11,712,965	$32,660,864	$44,373,829
Proposal 4	$18,528,314	$51,665,035	$70,193,348
Proposal 5	$10,434,123	$29,094,895	$39,529,018
Proposal 6	$18,380,525	$51,252,936	$69,633,462
Proposal 7	$12,920,268	$36,027,354	$48,947,623
Proposal 8	$20,397,748	$56,877,834	$77,275,582

State sales tax revenue is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average annual Missouri General Revenue sales tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 1.515%)*

Income tax is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average Missouri net individual income tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 4.523%) less an expected 6.6% reduction in collections due to the recent reduction of Missouri's top income tax bracket to 4.95%.*

V. Other downstream impacts of higher wages

Countless studies have also demonstrated the negative health impacts on adults and children of low wages as well as the negative impacts on child development, including academic achievement, of low wages. These situations often contain confounding variables that can make ascertaining cause and effect difficult, recent research using natural experiments to measure the direction of causation of the impact of public policies offers guidance for consideration. The research makes clear that “increases in parental income are found to lead to higher test scores and better educational outcomes for children, greater likelihood of employment in young adulthood, and improved earnings⁷.” While the exact impact on state or local revenue is difficult to predict, research shows that the impact of higher wages on student academic achievement were four times higher per dollar increase as the effects found in a study of class size reductions that cost around $12,000 per student⁸.” Direct impacts on state and local revenue, especially in the short term, are difficult to predict, but the growing body of research shows definite positive long term impacts on human development resulting from wage increases.

VI. Conclusion

Overall we conclude that these petitions would generate a minimum net benefit to state general revenue of between thirty three and seventy seven million dollars with an undetermined net benefit for local revenue based on local considerations. This benefit is the direct result of the wage increases. Other savings are likely to accrue from a decrease in spending on safety net programs and a downstream benefit to the families of recipients of the wage increases. We submit this information in hopes that it can be useful in your determination of the fiscal impact of the proposed initiatives. Should you need any other information please do not hesitate to contact our office.

Be it enacted by the people of the state of Missouri:

Sections 290.502 and 290.512 of the Revised Statutes of Missouri are amended to read as follows:

290.502. 1. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, effective January 1, 2007, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of $ 6.50 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher.

2. The minimum wage shall be increased or decreased on January 1, 2008, and on January 1 of successive years, by the increase or decrease in the cost of living. On September 30, 2007, and on each September 30 of each successive year, the director shall measure the increase or decrease in the cost of living by the percentage increase or decrease as of the preceding July over the level as of July of the immediately preceding year of the Consumer Price Index for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers (CPI-W) or successor index as published by the U.S. Department of Labor or its successor agency, with the amount of the minimum wage increase or decrease rounded to the nearest five cents.

3. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, and notwithstanding subsection 1 of this section, effective January 1, [2019] 2025, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of not less than [~~$8.60~~] $13.50 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased each year by [~~$.85~~] $.75 per hour, effective January 1 of each of the next [four] two years, until it reaches [~~$12.00~~] $15.00 per hour, effective January 1, [2023] 2027. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased or decreased on January 1, [2024] 2028, and on January 1 of successive years, per the method set forth in subsection 2 of this section. If at any time the federal minimum wage rate is above or is thereafter increased above the minimum wage then in effect under this subsection, the minimum wage required by this subsection shall continue to be increased pursuant to this subsection 3, but the higher federal rate shall immediately become the minimum wage required by this subsection and shall be increased or decreased per the method set forth in subsection 2 for so long as it remains higher than the state minimum wage required and increased pursuant to this subsection.

4. For purposes of this section, the term "public employer" means an employer that is the state or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, or other political subdivision of the state. Subsection 3 of this section shall not apply to a public employer with respect to its employees. Any public employer that is subject to subsections 1 and 2 of this section shall continue to be subject to those subsections.

290.512. 1. [No] Except as provided in subsection 2 of this section, no employer of any employee who receives and retains compensation in the form of gratuities in addition to wages is required to pay wages in excess of fifty percent of the minimum wage rate specified in sections 290.500 to 290.530, however, total compensation for such employee shall total at least the minimum wage specified in sections 290.500 to 290.530, the difference being made up by the employer.

2. Beginning January 1, 2025, and notwithstanding the percentage established in subsection 1 of this section, no employer of any employee who receives and retains compensation in the form of gratuities in addition to wages is required to pay wages in excess of the percentages, as set forth in this subsection below, of the minimum wage rate specified in subsection 3 of section 290.502 or where applicable the minimum wage otherwise specified in sections 290.500 to 290.530, effective the dates set forth in this subsection below:

- (1) fifty-five percent, effective January 1, 2025;
- (2) sixty percent, effective January 1, 2026;
- (3) sixty-five percent, effective January 1, 2027;
- (4) seventy percent, effective January 1, 2028;
- (5) seventy-five percent, effective January 1, 2029;
- (6) eighty percent, effective January 1, 2030;
- (7) eighty-five percent, effective January 1, 2031;
- (8) ninety percent, effective January 1, 2032;
- (9) ninety-five percent, effective January 1, 2033;
- (10) one hundred percent, effective January 1, 2034;

however, in all cases, total compensation for such employee shall total at least the minimum wage specified in subsection 3 of section 290.502 or where applicable the minimum wage otherwise specified in sections 290.500 to 290.530, the difference being made up by the employer.

3. Subsection 2 of this section shall not apply to a public employer, as defined in section 290.502.4, with respect to its employees. Any public employer that is subject to subsection 1 of this section shall continue to be subject to that subsection at the percentage set forth therein of the minimum wage rate specified in subsections 1 and 2 of section 290.502 or where applicable the minimum wage otherwise specified in sections 290.500 to 290.530.

[2.] 4. If an employee receives and retains compensation in the form of goods or services as an incident of his employment and if he is not required to exercise any discretion in order to receive the goods or services, the employer is required to pay only the difference between the fair market value of the goods and services and the minimum wage otherwise required to be paid by sections 290.500 to 290.530. The fair market value of the goods and services shall be computed on a weekly basis. The director shall provide by regulation a method of valuing the goods and services received by any employee in lieu of the wages otherwise required to be paid under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530. He shall also provide by regulation a method of determining those types of goods and services that are an incident of employment the receipt of which does not require any discretion on the part of the employee.

Officials from the Governor's office indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage law does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Missouri House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact as the language states that the new rate does not apply to State employees under the definition of public employer.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated this petition would have no immediate fiscal impact on their agency and may not fiscally impact their agency in the future depending on whether the minimum wage is increased beyond the maximum proposed $15.00 amount referenced in the petition.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated no fiscal impact expected from their department on this initiative petition.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated the proposal relating to minimum wage law does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated they would have an impact even if exempt.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In FY 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over 5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. The SOS estimates $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of our publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no fiscal impact to their office.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county for this initiative petition.

Officials from St Louis County indicated no fiscal impact for their county government.

Officials from the City of Jefferson indicated that if public employers are exempt then they do not think there will be a fiscal impact to their city.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this petition would have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated that for the college to attract and retain employees, they will need competitive wages. Although there would not be a direct fiscal impact on any of those scenarios presented, they expect there to be indirect impact.

Officials from St. Louis Community College indicated while any increase in the minimum wage could have a detrimental effect on our budget, the prospective change in a wage rate based upon a CPI-W increase (or any other index) cannot be determined at this time. Their current cost structure on hourly employees is generally at or exceeding the $15/hr rate; therefore, the effect would be minimal until the CPI-W kicks in.

Officials from the University of Central Missouri indicated they have determined the impact of this petition to be: No impact.

Officials from Missouri Southern State University indicated no impact as they would be exempt as a public employer.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated they do not predict any fiscal impact for this petition.

Officials from the Board of Election Commissioners City of St. Louis indicated no impact.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners indicated no material impact on their operations.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated this petition would not have a fiscal impact on their board.

This letter is from Richard von Glahn and Missouri Jobs with Justice Voter Action, proponents of the above referenced minimum wage petitions. Pursuant to RsMO 116.175 we write to submit the following fiscal impact information to assist your office in the analysis of of the above mentioned eight minimum wage petitions.

Our analysis estimates the impact of the proposed petitions on state sales and personal income tax revenue in Missouri. Our analysis follows a process that has been used in the past to estimate the impact of minimum wage increases, with some updates. We are unable to provide calculations on local sales and income tax revenue, although it should be noted that impacted workers in Kansas City and St. Louis City are subject to a 1% earnings tax on income, so those municipalities will experience revenue gains from their constituents seeing wage increases. Local sales tax revenue will also increase, although the different taxing rates per jurisdiction made estimates overly cumbersome to predict. We also reference some economic literature on the impact of minimum wage laws on employment , social benefit spending and downstream impacts of wage increase in order to address some common claims made by opponents of similar initiatives in the past as well as provide a broader context of impact of wage increases.

As each of these petitions explicitly exclude public employers¹ from proposed increases, we do not include an analysis of payroll expenses to these employers.

I. Economic literature on the employment impact of increases in the minimum wage

With 30 states and numerous other municipalities having increased the minimum wage above the federal minimum, there is ample evidence of the impact of these increases. While opponents will undoubtedly cite individual studies that predict catastrophic job loss and resulting decline in state revenue, the most credible comprehensive review of empirical evidence comes from Hristos Doucouliagos and T.D. Stanley and shows no discernible impact on employment. Their study, “Publication Selection Bias in Minimum- Wage Research? A Meta-Regression Analysis²” combines over 1,500 estimates from 64 different studies. This peer reviewed article has the advantage of any single study in that it used a set of predetermined, objective criteria for weighing the validity of statistical findings across different studies that produced different results.

In addition to this comprehensive review, a recent publication “Are $15 Minimum Wages too High” provides an analysis of California which has gradually increased the minimum wage from $8 in 2014 to $15 in 2022. Their analysis focuses on impacts of two groups of workers most exposed to minimum wage increases- teenagers and restaurant workers and finds that “substantial and ongoing pay increases throughout the treatment period and find no significant disemployment effects, even in relatively low-wage counties.³” This is the most recent study and is analyzing a similar level of increases and time period as the proposed initiatives.

There is ample empirical and theoretical evidence that corroborates these studies. First, relative to total wage and labor costs, minimum-wage increases are small. Second, employers and workers respond to minimum wage increases in many ways that reduce the actual costs to employers.

Probably the most important economic response to a higher minimum wage is a reduction in turnover. At higher wages, employers fill vacancies faster and retain employees longer, boosting total employment and average productivity per worker while reducing direct and indirect training costs. A 2017 study by employee benefits news found that turnover costs as high as 33% of a workers annual salary⁴. Avoiding these costs provides an obvious benefit to employers and research from Dube, Lester and Reich in 2012⁵ finds “striking evidence that separations, new hires, and turnover rates for teens and restaurant workers fall substantially following a minimum wage increase.”

Based on these empirical studies we feel confident in concluding that there is no evidence that increasing the minimum wage will reduce employment. Accordingly, we do not include any projections for impact on employment and the resulting effects on revenue in our analysis.

II. Impact on state and federal spending on social safety net programs

One area where the state is likely to experience significant direct savings from an increase in the minimum wage is on state spending on social safety net programs. Research suggests that at least 44% of Missouri recipients of Medicaid, SNAP or the Federal EITC are members of working families who would be directly impacted by the proposed initiatives⁶. State and Federal spending for this share of the workers on these programs totals $2,400,000.00 dollars. While programs such as SNAP are paid entirely by the federal government, medicaid has a percentage paid by state revenue and the state EITC going into effect this year will cost the state revenue. While individual circumstances often dictate the cost of these or similar programs to the state, it holds that as workers earn higher wages at work access to these benefits will decrease, saving the state potentially tens of millions of dollars.

III. Estimate of number of workers impacted statewide and impact on wages

Number of impacted workers				Total Wage Growth
	Direct impact	Indirectly impacted	Total
Proposal 1	293,000	198,000	491,000	$576,819,000
Proposal 2	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,076,047,000
Proposal 3	331,000	194,000	525,000	$733,133,000
Proposal 4	394,000	241,000	635,000	$1,222,991,000
Proposal 5	293,000	198,000	491,000	$688,721,000
Proposal 6	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,213,236,000
Proposal 7	331,000	194,000	525,000	$852,823,000
Proposal 8	394,000	241,000	635,000	$1,346,386,000

Across all eight version of the petitions estimates show a low of $576 million and a high of over $1.3 billion in wage growth for Missouri workers. These estimates include direct impacts to workers making under the minimum wage as well as secondary impacts to workers whose wages are predicted to rise as a result of the minimum wage increases.

IV. Estimate of state income and sales tax revenue

⁶ <https://laborcenter.berkeley.edu/the-public-cost-of-a-low-federal-minimum-wage/>

Based on the wage increase numbers above and the conclusion that minimum wage increases have no discernible impact on employment, we next calculate the impact of projected increases on state sales tax revenue and individual state income tax revenue for Missouri. As previously mentioned, we do not include estimates for local impacts, although we do project increased revenue there as local jurisdictions do capture sales tax revenue and in the case of the Kansas City and the City of St. Louis, increases in income are subject to the individual 1% earnings tax. We do not include any speculation of increased prices as a way to offset higher wages, although any such increase would result in higher sales tax revenue.

	Estimated sales tax revenue*	Estimated individual income tax revenue	Total revenue
Proposal 1	$8,738,808	$24,367,615	$33,106,423
Proposal 2	$16,302,112	$45,457,412	$61,759,524
Proposal 3	$11,712,965	$32,660,864	$44,373,829
Proposal 4	$18,528,314	$51,665,035	$70,193,348
Proposal 5	$10,434,123	$29,094,895	$39,529,018
Proposal 6	$18,380,525	$51,252,936	$69,633,462
Proposal 7	$12,920,268	$36,027,354	$48,947,623
Proposal 8	$20,397,748	$56,877,834	$77,275,582

State sales tax revenue is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average annual Missouri General Revenue sales tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 1.515%)*

Income tax is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average Missouri net individual income tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 4.523%) less an expected 6.6% reduction in collections due to the recent reduction of Missouri's top income tax bracket to 4.95%.*

V. Other downstream impacts of higher wages

Countless studies have also demonstrated the negative health impacts on adults and children of low wages as well as the negative impacts on child development, including academic achievement, of low wages. These situations often contain confounding variables that can make ascertaining cause and effect difficult, recent research using natural experiments to measure the direction of causation of the impact of public policies offers guidance for consideration. The research makes clear that “increases in parental income are found to lead to higher test scores and better educational outcomes for children, greater likelihood of employment in young adulthood, and improved earnings⁷.” While the exact impact on state or local revenue is difficult to predict, research shows that the impact of higher wages on student academic achievement were four times higher per dollar increase as the effects found in a study of class size reductions that cost around $12,000 per student⁸.” Direct impacts on state and local revenue, especially in the short term, are difficult to predict, but the growing body of research shows definite positive long term impacts on human development resulting from wage increases.

VI. Conclusion

Overall we conclude that these petitions would generate a minimum net benefit to state general revenue of between thirty three and seventy seven million dollars with an undetermined net benefit for local revenue based on local considerations. This benefit is the direct result of the wage increases. Other savings are likely to accrue from a decrease in spending on safety net programs and a downstream benefit to the families of recipients of the wage increases. We submit this information in hopes that it can be useful in your determination of the fiscal impact of the proposed initiatives. Should you need any other information please do not hesitate to contact our office.

Be it enacted by the people of the state of Missouri:

Section 290.502 of the Revised Statutes of Missouri is amended to read as follows:

290.502. 1. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, effective January 1, 2007, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of $ 6.50 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher.

2. The minimum wage shall be increased or decreased on January 1, 2008, and on January 1 of successive years, by the increase or decrease in the cost of living. On September 30, 2007, and on each September 30 of each successive year, the director shall measure the increase or decrease in the cost of living by the percentage increase or decrease as of the preceding July over the level as of July of the immediately preceding year of the Consumer Price Index for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers (CPI-W) or successor index as published by the U.S. Department of Labor or its successor agency, with the amount of the minimum wage increase or decrease rounded to the nearest five cents.

3. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, and notwithstanding subsection 1 of this section, effective January 1, [2019] 2025, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of not less than [~~$8.60~~] $14.00 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased each year by [~~$.85~~] $1.00 per hour, effective January 1 of each of the next [four] two years, until it reaches [~~$12.00~~] $16.00 per hour, effective January 1, [2023] 2027. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased or decreased on January 1, [2024] 2028, and on January 1 of successive years, per the method set forth in subsection 2 of this section. If at any time the federal minimum wage rate is above or is thereafter increased above the minimum wage then in effect under this subsection, the minimum wage required by this subsection shall continue to be increased pursuant to this subsection 3, but the higher federal rate shall immediately become the minimum wage required by this subsection and shall be increased or decreased per the method set forth in subsection 2 for so long as it remains higher than the state minimum wage required and increased pursuant to this subsection.

4. For purposes of this section, the term "public employer" means an employer that is the state or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, or other political subdivision of the state. Subsection 3 of this section shall not apply to a public employer with respect to its employees. Any public employer that is subject to subsections 1 and 2 of this section shall continue to be subject to those subsections.

Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, they could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. However, if the enactment of this proposal were to result in substantial additional litigation, they may be required to request additional appropriations.

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated there will be no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated that this petition if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated they assume no direct fiscal impact from the proposed statutory amendment to Chapter 290 as government employees are exempt from its provisions. However, employees of providers that receive their department's funding would be impacted, which would include all contracted department providers.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated this proposal might impact their department however, they defer to the Office of Administration to respond.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated their department currently has employees earning less than $16.00 an hour, however, with the delayed implementation date of 2027, it is unknown what pay plans state employees will be provided that would raise these employees to above the set $16.00 amount. Therefore this legislation has a $0 to unknown fiscal cost.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated they anticipated no fiscal impact for this initiative petition proposing to amend Chapter 290, RSMo, Version 4.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety - Office of the Director indicated no impact for their office.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated no impact for their office.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated they do not anticipate a fiscal impact at this time.

Officials from the Governor's office indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage law does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Missouri House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact as the language states that the new rate does not apply to State employees under the definition of public employer.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated this petition would have no immediate fiscal impact on their agency. Given that it proposes to gradually increase the minimum wage over time, it is possible, in the future, it could have a fiscal impact, but that assumes their agency does not increase the lowest rate they currently pay their employees over that same time period.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated no fiscal impact expected from their department on this initiative petition.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated the proposal relating to minimum wage law does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated they would have an impact even if exempt.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In FY 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over 5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. They estimate $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, we reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of our publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no fiscal impact to their office.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county for this initiative petition.

Officials from St Louis County indicated no fiscal impact for their county government.

Officials from the City of Jefferson indicated that if public employers are exempt then they do not think there will be a fiscal impact to their city.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this petition would have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated that for the college to attract and retain employees, they will need competitive wages. Although there would not be a direct fiscal impact on any of those scenarios presented, they expect there to be indirect impact.

Officials from the St. Louis Community College indicated while any increase in the minimum wage could have a detrimental effect on their budget, the prospective change in a wage rate based upon a CPI-W increase (or any other index) cannot be determined at this time. Their current cost structure on hourly employees is generally at or exceeding the $16/hr rate; therefore, the effect would be minimal until the CPI-W kicks in.

Officials from the University of Central Missouri indicated they have determined the impact of this petition to be: No impact.

Officials from Missouri Southern State University indicated no impact as they would be exempt as a public employer.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated they do not predict any fiscal impact for this petition.

Officials from the Board of Election Commissioners City of St. Louis indicated they are public employees and exempt for this petition and have no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners indicated no material impact on their operations.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated this petition would not have a fiscal impact on their board.

This letter is from Richard von Glahn and Missouri Jobs with Justice Voter Action, proponents of the above referenced minimum wage petitions. Pursuant to RsMO 116.175 we write to submit the following fiscal impact information to assist your office in the analysis of of the above mentioned eight minimum wage petitions.

Our analysis estimates the impact of the proposed petitions on state sales and personal income tax revenue in Missouri. Our analysis follows a process that has been used in the past to estimate the impact of minimum wage increases, with some updates. We are unable to provide calculations on local sales and income tax revenue, although it should be noted that impacted workers in Kansas City and St. Louis City are subject to a 1% earnings tax on income, so those municipalities will experience revenue gains from their constituents seeing wage increases. Local sales tax revenue will also increase, although the different taxing rates per jurisdiction made estimates overly cumbersome to predict. We also reference some economic literature on the impact of minimum wage laws on employment , social benefit spending and downstream impacts of wage increase in order to address some common claims made by opponents of similar initiatives in the past as well as provide a broader context of impact of wage increases.

As each of these petitions explicitly exclude public employers¹ from proposed increases, we do not include an analysis of payroll expenses to these employers.

I. Economic literature on the employment impact of increases in the minimum wage

With 30 states and numerous other municipalities having increased the minimum wage above the federal minimum, there is ample evidence of the impact of these increases. While opponents will undoubtedly cite individual studies that predict catastrophic job loss and resulting decline in state revenue, the most credible comprehensive review of empirical evidence comes from Hristos Doucouliagos and T.D. Stanley and shows no discernible impact on employment. Their study, “Publication Selection Bias in Minimum- Wage Research? A Meta-Regression Analysis²” combines over 1,500 estimates from 64 different studies. This peer reviewed article has the advantage of any single study in that it used a set of predetermined, objective criteria for weighing the validity of statistical findings across different studies that produced different results.

In addition to this comprehensive review, a recent publication “Are $15 Minimum Wages too High” provides an analysis of California which has gradually increased the minimum wage from $8 in 2014 to $15 in 2022. Their analysis focuses on impacts of two groups of workers most exposed to minimum wage increases- teenagers and restaurant workers and finds that “substantial and ongoing pay increases throughout the treatment period and find no significant disemployment effects, even in relatively low-wage counties.³” This is the most recent study and is analyzing a similar level of increases and time period as the proposed initiatives.

There is ample empirical and theoretical evidence that corroborates these studies. First, relative to total wage and labor costs, minimum-wage increases are small. Second, employers and workers respond to minimum wage increases in many ways that reduce the actual costs to employers.

Probably the most important economic response to a higher minimum wage is a reduction in turnover. At higher wages, employers fill vacancies faster and retain employees longer, boosting total employment and average productivity per worker while reducing direct and indirect training costs. A 2017 study by employee benefits news found that turnover costs as high as 33% of a workers annual salary⁴. Avoiding these costs provides an obvious benefit to employers and research from Dube, Lester and Reich in 2012⁵ finds “striking evidence that separations, new hires, and turnover rates for teens and restaurant workers fall substantially following a minimum wage increase.”

Based on these empirical studies we feel confident in concluding that there is no evidence that increasing the minimum wage will reduce employment. Accordingly, we do not include any projections for impact on employment and the resulting effects on revenue in our analysis.

II. Impact on state and federal spending on social safety net programs

One area where the state is likely to experience significant direct savings from an increase in the minimum wage is on state spending on social safety net programs. Research suggests that at least 44% of Missouri recipients of Medicaid, SNAP or the Federal EITC are members of working families who would be directly impacted by the proposed initiatives⁶. State and Federal spending for this share of the workers on these programs totals $2,400,000.00 dollars. While programs such as SNAP are paid entirely by the federal government, medicaid has a percentage paid by state revenue and the state EITC going into effect this year will cost the state revenue. While individual circumstances often dictate the cost of these or similar programs to the state, it holds that as workers earn higher wages at work access to these benefits will decrease, saving the state potentially tens of millions of dollars.

III. Estimate of number of workers impacted statewide and impact on wages

Number of impacted workers				Total Wage Growth
	Direct impact	Indirectly impacted	Total
Proposal 1	293,000	198,000	491,000	$576,819,000
Proposal 2	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,076,047,000
Proposal 3	331,000	194,000	525,000	$733,133,000
Proposal 4	394,000	241,000	635,000	$1,222,991,000
Proposal 5	293,000	198,000	491,000	$688,721,000
Proposal 6	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,213,236,000
Proposal 7	331,000	194,000	525,000	$852,823,000
Proposal 8	394,000	241,000	635,000	$1,346,386,000

Across all eight version of the petitions estimates show a low of $576 million and a high of over $1.3 billion in wage growth for Missouri workers. These estimates include direct impacts to workers making under the minimum wage as well as secondary impacts to workers whose wages are predicted to rise as a result of the minimum wage increases.

IV. Estimate of state income and sales tax revenue

⁶ <https://laborcenter.berkeley.edu/the-public-cost-of-a-low-federal-minimum-wage/>

Based on the wage increase numbers above and the conclusion that minimum wage increases have no discernible impact on employment, we next calculate the impact of projected increases on state sales tax revenue and individual state income tax revenue for Missouri. As previously mentioned, we do not include estimates for local impacts, although we do project increased revenue there as local jurisdictions do capture sales tax revenue and in the case of the Kansas City and the City of St. Louis, increases in income are subject to the individual 1% earnings tax. We do not include any speculation of increased prices as a way to offset higher wages, although any such increase would result in higher sales tax revenue.

	Estimated sales tax revenue*	Estimated individual income tax revenue	Total revenue
Proposal 1	$8,738,808	$24,367,615	$33,106,423
Proposal 2	$16,302,112	$45,457,412	$61,759,524
Proposal 3	$11,712,965	$32,660,864	$44,373,829
Proposal 4	$18,528,314	$51,665,035	$70,193,348
Proposal 5	$10,434,123	$29,094,895	$39,529,018
Proposal 6	$18,380,525	$51,252,936	$69,633,462
Proposal 7	$12,920,268	$36,027,354	$48,947,623
Proposal 8	$20,397,748	$56,877,834	$77,275,582

State sales tax revenue is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average annual Missouri General Revenue sales tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 1.515%)*

Income tax is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average Missouri net individual income tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 4.523%) less an expected 6.6% reduction in collections due to the recent reduction of Missouri's top income tax bracket to 4.95%.*

V. Other downstream impacts of higher wages

Countless studies have also demonstrated the negative health impacts on adults and children of low wages as well as the negative impacts on child development, including academic achievement, of low wages. These situations often contain confounding variables that can make ascertaining cause and effect difficult, recent research using natural experiments to measure the direction of causation of the impact of public policies offers guidance for consideration. The research makes clear that “increases in parental income are found to lead to higher test scores and better educational outcomes for children, greater likelihood of employment in young adulthood, and improved earnings⁷.” While the exact impact on state or local revenue is difficult to predict, research shows that the impact of higher wages on student academic achievement were four times higher per dollar increase as the effects found in a study of class size reductions that cost around $12,000 per student⁸.” Direct impacts on state and local revenue, especially in the short term, are difficult to predict, but the growing body of research shows definite positive long term impacts on human development resulting from wage increases.

VI. Conclusion

Overall we conclude that these petitions would generate a minimum net benefit to state general revenue of between thirty three and seventy seven million dollars with an undetermined net benefit for local revenue based on local considerations. This benefit is the direct result of the wage increases. Other savings are likely to accrue from a decrease in spending on safety net programs and a downstream benefit to the families of recipients of the wage increases. We submit this information in hopes that it can be useful in your determination of the fiscal impact of the proposed initiatives. Should you need any other information please do not hesitate to contact our office.

Be it enacted by the people of the state of Missouri:

Section 290.502 of the Revised Statutes of Missouri is amended to read as follows:

290.502. 1. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, effective January 1, 2007, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of $ 6.50 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher.

2. The minimum wage shall be increased or decreased on January 1, 2008, and on January 1 of successive years, by the increase or decrease in the cost of living. On September 30, 2007, and on each September 30 of each successive year, the director shall measure the increase or decrease in the cost of living by the percentage increase or decrease as of the preceding July over the level as of July of the immediately preceding year of the Consumer Price Index for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers (CPI-W) or successor index as published by the U.S. Department of Labor or its successor agency, with the amount of the minimum wage increase or decrease rounded to the nearest five cents.

3. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, and notwithstanding subsection 1 of this section, effective January 1, [2019] 2025, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of not less than [~~$8.60~~] $13.75 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased [each year] by [~~$.85~~] $1.25 per hour, [effective January 1 of each of the next four years, until it reaches $12.00 per hour] to $15.00 per hour, effective January 1, [2023] 2026. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased or decreased on January 1, [2024] 2027, and on January 1 of successive years, per the method set forth in subsection 2 of this section. If at any time the federal minimum wage rate is above or is thereafter increased above the minimum wage then in effect under this subsection, the minimum wage required by this subsection shall continue to be increased pursuant to this subsection 3, but the higher federal rate shall immediately become the minimum wage required by this subsection and shall be increased or decreased per the method set forth in subsection 2 for so long as it remains higher than the state minimum wage required and increased pursuant to this subsection.

4. For purposes of this section, the term "public employer" means an employer that is the state or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, or other political subdivision of the state. Subsection 3 of this section shall not apply to a public employer with respect to its employees. Any public employer that is subject to subsections 1 and 2 of this section shall continue to be subject to those subsections.

Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, they could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. However, if the enactment of this proposal were to result in substantial additional litigation, they may be required to request additional appropriations.

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated that this petition if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated they assume no direct fiscal impact from the proposed statutory amendment to Chapter 290 as government employees are exempt from its provisions. However, employees of providers that receive their department's funding would be impacted, which would include all contracted department providers.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated this proposal might impact their department however, they defer to the Office of Administration to respond.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated they anticipated no fiscal impact for this initiative petition proposing to amend Chapter 290, RSMo, Version 3.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety - Office of the Director indicated no impact for their office.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated no impact for their office.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated they do not anticipate a fiscal impact at this time.

Officials from the Governor's office indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage law does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Missouri House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact as the language states that the new rate does not apply to State employees under the definition of public employer.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated until such time as the minimum wage reaches $16.00 per hour, this petition would have no fiscal impact on their agency. Even then, it assumes their agency has no increase above that amount in the intervening years.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated no fiscal impact expected from their department on this initiative petition.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage law does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated they would have an impact even if exempt.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In FY 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over 5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. The SOS estimates $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of our publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no fiscal impact to their office.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county for this initiative petition.

Officials from St Louis County indicated no fiscal impact for their county government.

Officials from the City of Jefferson indicated that if public employers are exempt then they do not think there will be a fiscal impact to their city.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this petition would have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated that for the college to attract and retain employees, they will need competitive wages. Although there would not be a direct fiscal impact on any of those scenarios presented, they expect there to be indirect impact.

Officials from the St. Louis Community College indicated while any increase in the minimum wage could have a detrimental effect on their budget, the prospective change in a wage rate based upon a CPI-W increase (or any other index) cannot be determined at this time. Their current cost structure on hourly employees is generally at or exceeding the $15/hr rate; therefore, the effect would be minimal until the CPI-W kicks in. There is concern that the CPI-W may not mirror the cost structure of employees. They are not advocating for a different index. Their question is would CPI-W be the appropriate index?

Officials from the University of Central Missouri indicated they have determined the impact of this petition to be: No impact.

Officials from Missouri Southern State University indicated no impact as they would be exempt as a public employer.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated they do not predict any fiscal impact for this petition.

Officials from the Board of Election Commissioners City of St. Louis indicated they are public employees and exempt for this petition and have no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners indicated no material impact on their operations.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated no fiscal impact.

This letter is from Richard von Glahn and Missouri Jobs with Justice Voter Action, proponents of the above referenced minimum wage petitions. Pursuant to RsMO 116.175 we write to submit the following fiscal impact information to assist your office in the analysis of of the above mentioned eight minimum wage petitions.

Our analysis estimates the impact of the proposed petitions on state sales and personal income tax revenue in Missouri. Our analysis follows a process that has been used in the past to estimate the impact of minimum wage increases, with some updates. We are unable to provide calculations on local sales and income tax revenue, although it should be noted that impacted workers in Kansas City and St. Louis City are subject to a 1% earnings tax on income, so those municipalities will experience revenue gains from their constituents seeing wage increases. Local sales tax revenue will also increase, although the different taxing rates per jurisdiction made estimates overly cumbersome to predict. We also reference some economic literature on the impact of minimum wage laws on employment , social benefit spending and downstream impacts of wage increase in order to address some common claims made by opponents of similar initiatives in the past as well as provide a broader context of impact of wage increases.

As each of these petitions explicitly exclude public employers¹ from proposed increases, we do not include an analysis of payroll expenses to these employers.

I. Economic literature on the employment impact of increases in the minimum wage

With 30 states and numerous other municipalities having increased the minimum wage above the federal minimum, there is ample evidence of the impact of these increases. While opponents will undoubtedly cite individual studies that predict catastrophic job loss and resulting decline in state revenue, the most credible comprehensive review of empirical evidence comes from Hristos Doucouliagos and T.D. Stanley and shows no discernible impact on employment. Their study, “Publication Selection Bias in Minimum- Wage Research? A Meta-Regression Analysis²” combines over 1,500 estimates from 64 different studies. This peer reviewed article has the advantage of any single study in that it used a set of predetermined, objective criteria for weighing the validity of statistical findings across different studies that produced different results.

In addition to this comprehensive review, a recent publication “Are $15 Minimum Wages too High” provides an analysis of California which has gradually increased the minimum wage from $8 in 2014 to $15 in 2022. Their analysis focuses on impacts of two groups of workers most exposed to minimum wage increases- teenagers and restaurant workers and finds that “substantial and ongoing pay increases throughout the treatment period and find no significant disemployment effects, even in relatively low-wage counties.³” This is the most recent study and is analyzing a similar level of increases and time period as the proposed initiatives.

There is ample empirical and theoretical evidence that corroborates these studies. First, relative to total wage and labor costs, minimum-wage increases are small. Second, employers and workers respond to minimum wage increases in many ways that reduce the actual costs to employers.

Probably the most important economic response to a higher minimum wage is a reduction in turnover. At higher wages, employers fill vacancies faster and retain employees longer, boosting total employment and average productivity per worker while reducing direct and indirect training costs. A 2017 study by employee benefits news found that turnover costs as high as 33% of a workers annual salary⁴. Avoiding these costs provides an obvious benefit to employers and research from Dube, Lester and Reich in 2012⁵ finds “striking evidence that separations, new hires, and turnover rates for teens and restaurant workers fall substantially following a minimum wage increase.”

Based on these empirical studies we feel confident in concluding that there is no evidence that increasing the minimum wage will reduce employment. Accordingly, we do not include any projections for impact on employment and the resulting effects on revenue in our analysis.

II. Impact on state and federal spending on social safety net programs

One area where the state is likely to experience significant direct savings from an increase in the minimum wage is on state spending on social safety net programs. Research suggests that at least 44% of Missouri recipients of Medicaid, SNAP or the Federal EITC are members of working families who would be directly impacted by the proposed initiatives⁶. State and Federal spending for this share of the workers on these programs totals $2,400,000.00 dollars. While programs such as SNAP are paid entirely by the federal government, medicaid has a percentage paid by state revenue and the state EITC going into effect this year will cost the state revenue. While individual circumstances often dictate the cost of these or similar programs to the state, it holds that as workers earn higher wages at work access to these benefits will decrease, saving the state potentially tens of millions of dollars.

III. Estimate of number of workers impacted statewide and impact on wages

Number of impacted workers				Total Wage Growth
	Direct impact	Indirectly impacted	Total
Proposal 1	293,000	198,000	491,000	$576,819,000
Proposal 2	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,076,047,000
Proposal 3	331,000	194,000	525,000	$733,133,000
Proposal 4	394,000	241,000	635,000	$1,222,991,000
Proposal 5	293,000	198,000	491,000	$688,721,000
Proposal 6	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,213,236,000
Proposal 7	331,000	194,000	525,000	$852,823,000
Proposal 8	394,000	241,000	635,000	$1,346,386,000

Across all eight version of the petitions estimates show a low of $576 million and a high of over $1.3 billion in wage growth for Missouri workers. These estimates include direct impacts to workers making under the minimum wage as well as secondary impacts to workers whose wages are predicted to rise as a result of the minimum wage increases.

IV. Estimate of state income and sales tax revenue

⁶ <https://laborcenter.berkeley.edu/the-public-cost-of-a-low-federal-minimum-wage/>

Based on the wage increase numbers above and the conclusion that minimum wage increases have no discernible impact on employment, we next calculate the impact of projected increases on state sales tax revenue and individual state income tax revenue for Missouri. As previously mentioned, we do not include estimates for local impacts, although we do project increased revenue there as local jurisdictions do capture sales tax revenue and in the case of the Kansas City and the City of St. Louis, increases in income are subject to the individual 1% earnings tax. We do not include any speculation of increased prices as a way to offset higher wages, although any such increase would result in higher sales tax revenue.

	Estimated sales tax revenue*	Estimated individual income tax revenue	Total revenue
Proposal 1	$8,738,808	$24,367,615	$33,106,423
Proposal 2	$16,302,112	$45,457,412	$61,759,524
Proposal 3	$11,712,965	$32,660,864	$44,373,829
Proposal 4	$18,528,314	$51,665,035	$70,193,348
Proposal 5	$10,434,123	$29,094,895	$39,529,018
Proposal 6	$18,380,525	$51,252,936	$69,633,462
Proposal 7	$12,920,268	$36,027,354	$48,947,623
Proposal 8	$20,397,748	$56,877,834	$77,275,582

State sales tax revenue is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average annual Missouri General Revenue sales tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 1.515%)*

Income tax is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average Missouri net individual income tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 4.523%) less an expected 6.6% reduction in collections due to the recent reduction of Missouri's top income tax bracket to 4.95%.*

V. Other downstream impacts of higher wages

Countless studies have also demonstrated the negative health impacts on adults and children of low wages as well as the negative impacts on child development, including academic achievement, of low wages. These situations often contain confounding variables that can make ascertaining cause and effect difficult, recent research using natural experiments to measure the direction of causation of the impact of public policies offers guidance for consideration. The research makes clear that “increases in parental income are found to lead to higher test scores and better educational outcomes for children, greater likelihood of employment in young adulthood, and improved earnings⁷.” While the exact impact on state or local revenue is difficult to predict, research shows that the impact of higher wages on student academic achievement were four times higher per dollar increase as the effects found in a study of class size reductions that cost around $12,000 per student⁸.” Direct impacts on state and local revenue, especially in the short term, are difficult to predict, but the growing body of research shows definite positive long term impacts on human development resulting from wage increases.

VI. Conclusion

Overall we conclude that these petitions would generate a minimum net benefit to state general revenue of between thirty three and seventy seven million dollars with an undetermined net benefit for local revenue based on local considerations. This benefit is the direct result of the wage increases. Other savings are likely to accrue from a decrease in spending on safety net programs and a downstream benefit to the families of recipients of the wage increases. We submit this information in hopes that it can be useful in your determination of the fiscal impact of the proposed initiatives. Should you need any other information please do not hesitate to contact our office.

Section 290.502 of the Revised Statutes of Missouri is amended to read as follows:

290.502. 1. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, effective January 1, 2007, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of $ 6.50 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher.

2. The minimum wage shall be increased or decreased on January 1, 2008, and on January 1 of successive years, by the increase or decrease in the cost of living. On September 30, 2007, and on each September 30 of each successive year, the director shall measure the increase or decrease in the cost of living by the percentage increase or decrease as of the preceding July over the level as of July of the immediately preceding year of the Consumer Price Index for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers (CPI-W) or successor index as published by the U.S. Department of Labor or its successor agency, with the amount of the minimum wage increase or decrease rounded to the nearest five cents.

3. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, and notwithstanding subsection 1 of this section, effective January 1, [2019] 2025, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of not less than [~~$8.60~~] $13.75 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased each year by [~~$.85~~] $1.25 per hour, effective January 1 of each of the next [four] two years, until it reaches [~~$12.00~~] $16.25 per hour, effective January 1, [2023] 2027. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased or decreased on January 1, [2024] 2028, and on January 1 of successive years, per the method set forth in subsection 2 of this section. If at any time the federal minimum wage rate is above or is thereafter increased above the minimum wage then in effect under this subsection, the minimum wage required by this subsection shall continue to be increased pursuant to this subsection 3, but the higher federal rate shall immediately become the minimum wage required by this subsection and shall be increased or decreased per the method set forth in subsection 2 for so long as it remains higher than the state minimum wage required and increased pursuant to this subsection.

4. For purposes of this section, the term "public employer" means an employer that is the state or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, or other political subdivision of the state. Subsection 3 of this section shall not apply to a public employer with respect to its employees. Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, they could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. However, if the enactment of this proposal were to result in substantial additional litigation, they may be required to request additional appropriations.

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated that this petition if passed will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated they assume no direct fiscal impact from the proposed statutory amendment to Chapter 290 as government employees are exempt from its provisions. However, employees of providers that receive their department's funding would be impacted, which would include all contracted department providers.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated this proposal might impact their department however, they defer to the Office of Administration to respond.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated their department currently has employees earning less than $16.25 an hour, however, with the delayed implementation date of 2027, it is unknown what pay plans state employees will be provided that would raise these employees to above the set $16.25 amount. Therefore this legislation has a $0 to unknown fiscal cost.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated they anticipated no fiscal impact for this initiative petition proposing to amend Chapter 290, RSMo, Version 2.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety - Office of the Director indicated no impact for their office.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated no impact for their office.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated they do not anticipate a fiscal impact at this time.

Officials from the Governor's office indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage law does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Missouri House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact as the language states that the new rate does not apply to State employees under the definition of public employer.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated this petition would have no immediate fiscal impact on their agency. Because the petition proposes to graduate or increase the minimum wage every two years until it reaches $16.25 per hour, it could have a negative fiscal impact on their agency, but that is only provided their agency doesn't increase its present lowest hourly rate over the same time as that referenced in the petition.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated no fiscal impact expected from their department on this initiative petition.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage law does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated they would have an impact even if exempt.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In FY 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over 5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. They estimate $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of our publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no fiscal impact to their office.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county for this initiative petition.

Officials from St Louis County indicated no fiscal impact for their county government.

Officials from the City of Jefferson indicated that if public employers are exempt then they do not think there will be a fiscal impact to their city.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this petition would have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated that for the college to attract and retain employees, they will need competitive wages. Although there would not be a direct fiscal impact on any of those scenarios presented, they expect there to be indirect impact.

Officials from the St. Louis Community College indicated while any increase in the minimum wage could have a detrimental effect on their budget, the prospective change in a wage rate based upon a CPI-W increase (or any other index) cannot be determined at this time. Their current cost structure on hourly employees is generally at or exceeding the $16.25/hr rate; therefore, the effect would be minimal until the CPI-W kicks in.

Officials from the University of Central Missouri indicated they have determined the impact of this petition to be: No impact.

Officials from Missouri Southern State University indicated no impact as they would be exempt as a public employer.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated they do not predict any fiscal impact for this petition.

Officials from the Board of Election Commissioners City of St. Louis indicated they are public employees and exempt for this petition and have no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners indicated no material impact on their operations.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated this petition would not have a direct fiscal impact on their Board.

Pursuant to RsMO 116.175 we write to submit the following fiscal impact information to assist your office in the analysis of of the above mentioned eight minimum wage petitions.

Our analysis estimates the impact of the proposed petitions on state sales and personal income tax revenue in Missouri. Our analysis follows a process that has been used in the past to estimate the impact of minimum wage increases, with some updates. We are unable to provide calculations on local sales and income tax revenue, although it should be noted that impacted workers in Kansas City and St. Louis City are subject to a 1% earnings tax on income, so those municipalities will experience revenue gains from their constituents seeing wage increases. Local sales tax revenue will also increase, although the different taxing rates per jurisdiction made estimates overly cumbersome to predict. We also reference some economic literature on the impact of minimum wage laws on employment , social benefit spending and downstream impacts of wage increase in order to address some common claims made by opponents of similar initiatives in the past as well as provide a broader context of impact of wage increases.

As each of these petitions explicitly exclude public employers¹ from proposed increases, we do not include an analysis of payroll expenses to these employers.

I. Economic literature on the employment impact of increases in the minimum wage

With 30 states and numerous other municipalities having increased the minimum wage above the federal minimum, there is ample evidence of the impact of these increases. While opponents will undoubtedly cite individual studies that predict catastrophic job loss and resulting decline in state revenue, the most credible comprehensive review of empirical evidence comes from Hristos Doucouliagos and T.D. Stanley and shows no discernible impact on employment. Their study, “Publication Selection Bias in Minimum- Wage Research? A Meta-Regression Analysis²” combines over 1,500 estimates from 64 different studies. This peer reviewed article has the advantage of any single study in that it used a set of predetermined, objective criteria for weighing the validity of statistical findings across different studies that produced different results.

In addition to this comprehensive review, a recent publication “Are $15 Minimum Wages too High” provides an analysis of California which has gradually increased the minimum wage from $8 in 2014 to $15 in 2022. Their analysis focuses on impacts of two groups of workers most exposed to minimum wage increases- teenagers and restaurant workers and finds that “substantial and ongoing pay increases throughout the treatment period and find no significant disemployment effects, even in relatively low-wage counties.³” This is the most recent study and is analyzing a similar level of increases and time period as the proposed initiatives.

There is ample empirical and theoretical evidence that corroborates these studies. First, relative to total wage and labor costs, minimum-wage increases are small. Second, employers and workers respond to minimum wage increases in many ways that reduce the actual costs to employers.

Probably the most important economic response to a higher minimum wage is a reduction in turnover. At higher wages, employers fill vacancies faster and retain employees longer, boosting total employment and average productivity per worker while reducing direct and indirect training costs. A 2017 study by employee benefits news found that turnover costs as high as 33% of a workers annual salary⁴. Avoiding these costs provides an obvious benefit to employers and research from Dube, Lester and Reich in 2012⁵ finds “striking evidence that separations, new hires, and turnover rates for teens and restaurant workers fall substantially following a minimum wage increase.”

Based on these empirical studies we feel confident in concluding that there is no evidence that increasing the minimum wage will reduce employment. Accordingly, we do not include any projections for impact on employment and the resulting effects on revenue in our analysis.

II. Impact on state and federal spending on social safety net programs

One area where the state is likely to experience significant direct savings from an increase in the minimum wage is on state spending on social safety net programs. Research suggests that at least 44% of Missouri recipients of Medicaid, SNAP or the Federal EITC are members of working families who would be directly impacted by the proposed initiatives⁶. State and Federal spending for this share of the workers on these programs totals $2,400,000.00 dollars. While programs such as SNAP are paid entirely by the federal government, medicaid has a percentage paid by state revenue and the state EITC going into effect this year will cost the state revenue. While individual circumstances often dictate the cost of these or similar programs to the state, it holds that as workers earn higher wages at work access to these benefits will decrease, saving the state potentially tens of millions of dollars.

III. Estimate of number of workers impacted statewide and impact on wages

Number of impacted workers				Total Wage Growth
	Direct impact	Indirectly impacted	Total
Proposal 1	293,000	198,000	491,000	$576,819,000
Proposal 2	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,076,047,000
Proposal 3	331,000	194,000	525,000	$733,133,000
Proposal 4	394,000	241,000	635,000	$1,222,991,000
Proposal 5	293,000	198,000	491,000	$688,721,000
Proposal 6	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,213,236,000
Proposal 7	331,000	194,000	525,000	$852,823,000

Across all eight version of the petitions estimates show a low of $576 million and a high of over $1.3 billion in wage growth for Missouri workers. These estimates include direct impacts to workers making under the minimum wage as well as secondary impacts to workers whose wages are predicted to rise as a result of the minimum wage increases.

IV. Estimate of state income and sales tax revenue

⁶ <https://laborcenter.berkeley.edu/the-public-cost-of-a-low-federal-minimum-wage/>

Based on the wage increase numbers above and the conclusion that minimum wage increases have no discernible impact on employment, we next calculate the impact of projected increases on state sales tax revenue and individual state income tax revenue for Missouri. As previously mentioned, we do not include estimates for local impacts, although we do project increased revenue there as local jurisdictions do capture sales tax revenue and in the case of the Kansas City and the City of St. Louis, increases in income are subject to the individual 1% earnings tax. We do not include any speculation of increased prices as a way to offset higher wages, although any such increase would result in higher sales tax revenue.

	Estimated sales tax revenue*	Estimated individual income tax revenue	Total revenue
Proposal 1	$8,738,808	$24,367,615	$33,106,423
Proposal 2	$16,302,112	$45,457,412	$61,759,524
Proposal 3	$11,712,965	$32,660,864	$44,373,829
Proposal 4	$18,528,314	$51,665,035	$70,193,348
Proposal 5	$10,434,123	$29,094,895	$39,529,018
Proposal 6	$18,380,525	$51,252,936	$69,633,462
Proposal 7	$12,920,268	$36,027,354	$48,947,623
Proposal 8	$20,397,748	$56,877,834	$77,275,582

State sales tax revenue is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average annual Missouri General Revenue sales tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 1.515%)*

Income tax is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average Missouri net individual income tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 4.523%) less an expected 6.6% reduction in collections due to the recent reduction of Missouri's top income tax bracket to 4.95%.*

V. Other downstream impacts of higher wages

Countless studies have also demonstrated the negative health impacts on adults and children of low wages as well as the negative impacts on child development, including academic achievement, of low wages. These situations often contain confounding variables that can make ascertaining cause and effect difficult, recent research using natural experiments to measure the direction of causation of the impact of public policies offers guidance for consideration. The research makes clear that “increases in parental income are found to lead to higher test scores and better educational outcomes for children, greater likelihood of employment in young adulthood, and improved earnings⁷.” While the exact impact on state or local revenue is difficult to predict, research shows that the impact of higher wages on student academic achievement were four times higher per dollar increase as the effects found in a study of class size reductions that cost around $12,000 per student⁸.” Direct impacts on state and local revenue, especially in the short term, are difficult to predict, but the growing body of research shows definite positive long term impacts on human development resulting from wage increases.

VI. Conclusion

Overall we conclude that these petitions would generate a minimum net benefit to state general revenue of between thirty three and seventy seven million dollars with an undetermined net benefit for local revenue based on local considerations. This benefit is the direct result of the wage increases. Other savings are likely to accrue from a decrease in spending on safety net programs and a downstream benefit to the families of recipients of the wage increases. We submit this information in hopes that it can be useful in your determination of the fiscal impact of the proposed initiatives. Should you need any other information please do not hesitate to contact our office.

Sections 290.502 of the Revised Statutes of Missouri is amended to read as follows:

290.502. 1. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, effective January 1, 2007, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of $ 6.50 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher.

2. The minimum wage shall be increased or decreased on January 1, 2008, and on January 1 of successive years, by the increase or decrease in the cost of living. On September 30, 2007, and on each September 30 of each successive year, the director shall measure the increase or decrease in the cost of living by the percentage increase or decrease as of the preceding July over the level as of July of the immediately preceding year of the Consumer Price Index for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers (CPI-W) or successor index as published by the U.S. Department of Labor or its successor agency, with the amount of the minimum wage increase or decrease rounded to the nearest five cents.

3. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, and notwithstanding subsection 1 of this section, effective January 1, [2019] 2025, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of not less than [~~$8.60~~] $13.50 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased each year by [~~$.85~~] $.75 per hour, effective January 1 of each of the next [four] two years, until it reaches [~~$12.00~~] $15.00 per hour, effective January 1, [2023] 2027. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased or decreased on January 1, [2024] 2028, and on January 1 of successive years, per the method set forth in subsection 2 of this section. If at any time the federal minimum wage rate is above or is thereafter increased above the minimum wage then in effect under this subsection, the minimum wage required by this subsection shall continue to be increased pursuant to this subsection 3, but the higher federal rate shall immediately become the minimum wage required by this subsection and shall be increased or decreased per the method set forth in subsection 2 for so long as it remains higher than the state minimum wage required and increased pursuant to this subsection.

4. For purposes of this section, the term "public employer" means an employer that is the state or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, or other political subdivision of the state. Subsection 3 of this section shall not apply to a public employer with respect to its employees. Any public employer that is subject to subsections 1 and 2 of this section shall continue to be subject to those subsections.

Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, the Office could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. However, if the enactment of this proposal were to result in substantial additional litigation, their Office may be required to request additional appropriations.

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated that this petition, if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated they assume no direct fiscal impact from the proposed statutory amendment to Chapter 290 as government employees are exempt from its provisions. However, employees of providers that receive their department's funding would be impacted, which would include all contracted department providers.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated this proposal might impact their department however they defer to the Office of Administration to respond.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated they anticipated no fiscal impact for this initiative petition proposing to amend Chapter 290, RSMo, Version 1.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety - Office of the Director indicated no impact for their office.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated no impact for their office..

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated they do not anticipate a fiscal impact at this time.

Officials from the Governor's office indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage law does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Missouri House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact as the language states that the new rate does not apply to State employees under the definition of public employer.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated this initiative petition will have no immediate fiscal impact on their agency. At some point, given the proposed initiative petition graduates up in terms of minimum wage, it could have a fiscal impact provided their agency does not adjust their wages up to keep up with what is proposed in the initiative petition.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated no fiscal impact expected from their department on this initiative petition.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage law does not financially impact their office..

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated they would have an impact even if exempt.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In FY 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over 5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. They estimate $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, we reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of our publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no fiscal impact to their office.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county for this initiative petition.

Officials from St Louis County indicated no fiscal impact for their county government.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this petition would have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from the City of Jefferson City indicated that if public employers are exempt they do not think there will be a fiscal impact to their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated that for the college to attract and retain employees, they will need competitive wages. Although there would not be a direct fiscal impact on any of those scenarios presented, they expect there to be indirect impact.

Officials from the St. Louis Community College indicated while any increase in the minimum wage could have a detrimental effect on their budget, the prospective change in a wage rate based upon a CPI-W increase (or any other index) cannot be determined at this time. Their current cost structure on hourly employees is generally at or exceeding the $15/hr rate; therefore, the effect would be minimal until the CPI-W kicks in.

Officials from the University of Central Missouri indicated they have determined the impact of this petition to be: No impact.

Officials from Missouri Southern State University indicated no impact as they would be exempt as a public employer.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated they do not predict any fiscal impact for this petition.

Officials from the Board of Election Commissioners City of St. Louis indicated they are public employees and exempt for this petition and have no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners indicated no material impact on their operations.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated this petition would not have a direct fiscal impact on their Board.

This letter is from Richard von Glahn and Missouri Jobs with Justice Voter Action, proponents of the above referenced minimum wage petitions. Pursuant to RsMO 116.175 we write to submit the following fiscal impact information to assist your office in the analysis of of the above mentioned eight minimum wage petitions.

Our analysis estimates the impact of the proposed petitions on state sales and personal income tax revenue in Missouri. Our analysis follows a process that has been used in the past to estimate the impact of minimum wage increases, with some updates. We are unable to provide calculations on local sales and income tax revenue, although it should be noted that impacted workers in Kansas City and St. Louis City are subject to a 1% earnings tax on income, so those municipalities will experience revenue gains from their constituents seeing wage increases. Local sales tax revenue will also increase, although the different taxing rates per jurisdiction made estimates overly cumbersome to predict. We also reference some economic literature on the impact of minimum wage laws on employment , social benefit spending and downstream impacts of wage increase in order to address some common claims made by opponents of similar initiatives in the past as well as provide a broader context of impact of wage increases.

As each of these petitions explicitly exclude public employers¹ from proposed increases, we do not include an analysis of payroll expenses to these employers.

I. Economic literature on the employment impact of increases in the minimum wage

With 30 states and numerous other municipalities having increased the minimum wage above the federal minimum, there is ample evidence of the impact of these increases. While opponents will undoubtedly cite individual studies that predict catastrophic job loss and resulting decline in state revenue, the most credible comprehensive review of empirical evidence comes from Hristos Doucouliagos and T.D. Stanley and shows no discernible impact on employment. Their study, “Publication Selection Bias in Minimum- Wage Research? A Meta-Regression Analysis²” combines over 1,500 estimates from 64 different studies. This peer reviewed article has the advantage of any single study in that it used a set of predetermined, objective criteria for weighing the validity of statistical findings across different studies that produced different results.

In addition to this comprehensive review, a recent publication “Are $15 Minimum Wages too High” provides an analysis of California which has gradually increased the minimum wage from $8 in 2014 to $15 in 2022. Their analysis focuses on impacts of two groups of workers most exposed to minimum wage increases- teenagers and restaurant workers and finds that “substantial and ongoing pay increases throughout the treatment period and find no significant disemployment effects, even in relatively low-wage counties.³” This is the most recent study and is analyzing a similar level of increases and time period as the proposed initiatives.

There is ample empirical and theoretical evidence that corroborates these studies. First, relative to total wage and labor costs, minimum-wage increases are small. Second, employers and workers respond to minimum wage increases in many ways that reduce the actual costs to employers.

Probably the most important economic response to a higher minimum wage is a reduction in turnover. At higher wages, employers fill vacancies faster and retain employees longer, boosting total employment and average productivity per worker while reducing direct and indirect training costs. A 2017 study by employee benefits news found that turnover costs as high as 33% of a workers annual salary⁴. Avoiding these costs provides an obvious benefit to employers and research from Dube, Lester and Reich in 2012⁵ finds “striking evidence that separations, new hires, and turnover rates for teens and restaurant workers fall substantially following a minimum wage increase.”

Based on these empirical studies we feel confident in concluding that there is no evidence that increasing the minimum wage will reduce employment. Accordingly, we do not include any projections for impact on employment and the resulting effects on revenue in our analysis.

II. Impact on state and federal spending on social safety net programs

One area where the state is likely to experience significant direct savings from an increase in the minimum wage is on state spending on social safety net programs. Research suggests that at least 44% of Missouri recipients of Medicaid, SNAP or the Federal EITC are members of working families who would be directly impacted by the proposed initiatives⁶. State and Federal spending for this share of the workers on these programs totals $2,400,000.00 dollars. While programs such as SNAP are paid entirely by the federal government, medicaid has a percentage paid by state revenue and the state EITC going into effect this year will cost the state revenue. While individual circumstances often dictate the cost of these or similar programs to the state, it holds that as workers earn higher wages at work access to these benefits will decrease, saving the state potentially tens of millions of dollars.

III. Estimate of number of workers impacted statewide and impact on wages

Number of impacted workers				Total Wage Growth
	Direct impact	Indirectly impacted	Total
Proposal 1	293,000	198,000	491,000	$576,819,000
Proposal 2	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,076,047,000
Proposal 3	331,000	194,000	525,000	$733,133,000

Across all eight version of the petitions estimates show a low of $576 million and a high of over $1.3 billion in wage growth for Missouri workers. These estimates include direct impacts to workers making under the minimum wage as well as secondary impacts to workers whose wages are predicted to rise as a result of the minimum wage increases.

IV. Estimate of state income and sales tax revenue

⁶ <https://laborcenter.berkeley.edu/the-public-cost-of-a-low-federal-minimum-wage/>

Based on the wage increase numbers above and the conclusion that minimum wage increases have no discernible impact on employment, we next calculate the impact of projected increases on state sales tax revenue and individual state income tax revenue for Missouri. As previously mentioned, we do not include estimates for local impacts, although we do project increased revenue there as local jurisdictions do capture sales tax revenue and in the case of the Kansas City and the City of St. Louis, increases in income are subject to the individual 1% earnings tax. We do not include any speculation of increased prices as a way to offset higher wages, although any such increase would result in higher sales tax revenue.

	Estimated sales tax revenue*	Estimated individual income tax revenue	Total revenue
Proposal 1	$8,738,808	$24,367,615	$33,106,423
Proposal 2	$16,302,112	$45,457,412	$61,759,524
Proposal 3	$11,712,965	$32,660,864	$44,373,829
Proposal 4	$18,528,314	$51,665,035	$70,193,348
Proposal 5	$10,434,123	$29,094,895	$39,529,018
Proposal 6	$18,380,525	$51,252,936	$69,633,462
Proposal 7	$12,920,268	$36,027,354	$48,947,623
Proposal 8	$20,397,748	$56,877,834	$77,275,582

State sales tax revenue is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average annual Missouri General Revenue sales tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 1.515%)*

Income tax is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average Missouri net individual income tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 4.523%) less an expected 6.6% reduction in collections due to the recent reduction of Missouri's top income tax bracket to 4.95%.*

V. Other downstream impacts of higher wages

Countless studies have also demonstrated the negative health impacts on adults and children of low wages as well as the negative impacts on child development, including academic achievement, of low wages. These situations often contain confounding variables that can make ascertaining cause and effect difficult, recent research using natural experiments to measure the direction of causation of the impact of public policies offers guidance for consideration. The research makes clear that “increases in parental income are found to lead to higher test scores and better educational outcomes for children, greater likelihood of employment in young adulthood, and improved earnings⁷.” While the exact impact on state or local revenue is difficult to predict, research shows that the impact of higher wages on student academic achievement were four times higher per dollar increase as the effects found in a study of class size reductions that cost around $12,000 per student⁸.” Direct impacts on state and local revenue, especially in the short term, are difficult to predict, but the growing body of research shows definite positive long term impacts on human development resulting from wage increases.

VI. Conclusion

Overall we conclude that these petitions would generate a minimum net benefit to state general revenue of between thirty three and seventy seven million dollars with an undetermined net benefit for local revenue based on local considerations. This benefit is the direct result of the wage increases. Other savings are likely to accrue from a decrease in spending on safety net programs and a downstream benefit to the families of recipients of the wage increases. We submit this information in hopes that it can be useful in your determination of the fiscal impact of the proposed initiatives. Should you need any other information please do not hesitate to contact our office.

NOTICE: The proposed amendment revises Article VIII of the Constitution by adopting eight new Sections to be known as Article VIII, Sections 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, and 31.

Be it resolved by the people of the state of Missouri that the Constitution be amended:

Section A. Article VIII of the Constitution is revised by adopting eight new Sections to be known as Article VIII, Sections 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, and 31 to read as follows:

Section 24. 1. Every voting machine used to conduct any public election in the State of Missouri shall be tested and certified as secure at least six months prior to each election in which the voting machine will be used. Such testing and certification shall meet all standards established by the United States Election Assistance Commission or independent testing authority designated by the United States Election Assistance Commission. In addition, the Secretary of State shall test and certify voting equipment and/or software necessary to run an instant runoff election at least six months prior to implementation.

2. Every voting machine used to conduct any election in the State of Missouri shall produce an individual, anonymous, permanent paper record for each vote cast, which shall be made available for inspection and verification by the voter at the time the vote is cast. Such individual, anonymous, permanent paper record shall be preserved for use in any election audit.

3. The candidate or their designee shall have the right to be present whenever paper ballots or the permanent paper records produced by electronic voting machines are counted, audited, or placed in storage.

Section 25. 1. Beginning with the 2026 primary election, and notwithstanding any other provision of law to the contrary, primary elections for all state executive branch offices, members of the Missouri General Assembly, county offices, and members of the United States Congress shall be open primaries where the four candidates for each office who receive the most votes advance to the general election.

2. Primary ballots for all offices listed in Subsection 1 of this Section shall meet the following criteria:

(1) All qualified candidates, regardless of party affiliation, shall appear on a single ballot to be used by all qualified voters, regardless of party affiliation.

(2) Primary ballots shall include space for write-in candidates for every office appearing on the ballot.

3. In the primary election for all offices listed in Subsection 1 of this Section, a qualified voter shall be permitted to cast a vote for any candidate for whom that voter is otherwise eligible to vote. A qualified voter shall only vote for one candidate for each office.

4. The four candidates for each office receiving the most votes in the primary election shall advance to the general election for that office. Only those candidates shall appear on the general election ballot.

5. If it cannot be determined which four candidates received the most votes because two or more candidates are tied with an equal number of votes, that tie shall be broken by drawing lots.

Section 26. 1. Beginning with the November 2026 general election, and notwithstanding any other provision of law to the contrary, general elections for all offices listed in Subsection 1 of Section 25 shall be instant runoff elections in which a qualified voter may indicate their preferred candidate Ranking Order on the ballot.

2. In an instant runoff general election conducted under this Section, each ballot shall count as one vote for the highest-ordered, Active Candidate for each office on that ballot, and tabulation shall proceed in rounds.

3. If, at the beginning of any round of tabulation, an Active Candidate receives a majority of the votes cast for an office, that candidate is elected for that office and tabulation is complete.

4. If, after any round of tabulation, no Active Candidate for an office has received a majority of the votes, a new round of tabulation shall begin and proceed as follows:

(1) The Active Candidate receiving the fewest number of votes shall be eliminated.

(2) Each ballot containing a vote cast for the eliminated candidate shall count as a vote for its next highest-ordered Active Candidates.

(3) Votes shall be tabulated pursuant to Subdivisions (1) and (2) of this Subsection until an Active Candidate receives the majority of the remaining votes.

5. If a ballot has a Ranking Order for an office that does not contain any candidate, and there are no Active Candidates at a higher Ranking Order, the ballot shall count as a vote for the highest-ordered Active Candidate after that Ranking Order, if any.

6. Ballots shall not count as a vote for any candidate for a particular office only if:

(1) The ballot does not include an Active Candidate for an office at any Ranking Order; or

(2) The ballot contains an Overvote that includes the highest-ordered Active Candidate for that office.

7. If two or more candidates for an office are tied with equal and lowest number of votes, and the tabulation in Subsection 4 cannot continue until the candidate with the lowest number of votes is eliminated, the candidate to be eliminated shall be determined by drawing lots.

8. General election ballots shall be laid out to allow voters to indicate their preferred candidate Ranking Order. Election officials shall design the ballot to be easy for voters to understand, consistent with accepted best practices in ballot design.

9. A voter's Ranking Order of up to four candidates shall be considered an expression of the voter's intent to indicate candidate preference(s) and shall not be considered an Overvote.

10. Instructions on the general election ballot shall include the following statement: "You may mark up to four choices in order of preference. Do not assign the same ranking number to more than one candidate."

11. Beginning at least one hundred twenty days before the first election utilizing the instant runoff system, the Secretary of State and local election authorities shall conduct a statewide voter education campaign to familiarize voters with the instant runoff voting system.

12. Notwithstanding any other provisions of law to the contrary, the aggregated vote totals from the primary election shall be used, as may be required by any other law, for the purposes of identifying the two major political parties, for a political party to maintain qualified status, or the establishment of a new political party.

Section 27. 1. Beginning after the 2026 general election, and notwithstanding any other provision of law to the contrary, a special election shall be called to fill any vacancy in any office listed in Subsection 1 of Section 25.

2. A special election to fill a vacancy in any such office shall be conducted pursuant to the primary and general election processes described in Sections 25 and 26.

Section 28. 1. For the purposes of Article VIII, the following terms mean:

(1) "Active Candidate", a candidate who has not been eliminated during an instant runoff tabulation.

(2) "Overvote", a vote in which the qualified voter indicated a preference for more than one candidate at the same ranking order.

(3) "Order" or "Ranking Order", the number a qualified voter assigns on their ballot to a candidate indicating that voter's preference, with 1 being the highest ranking order and 4 being the lowest ranking order.

Section 29. The Secretary of State shall issue rules and regulations necessary to implement Sections 24 to 28 of this Article. No rule or portion of a rule promulgated under the authority of such Sections shall become effective unless it has been promulgated pursuant to the requirements provided by law.

Section 30. 1. Nothing in this section shall limit the use of any applicable election law that is not inconsistent with the requirements and systems established in Sections 24 to 28.

2. Nothing in this section shall limit the general assembly from enacting laws consistent with Sections 24 to 28, or otherwise affecting the rights of qualified voters in an instant runoff election. The general assembly shall not enact laws that hinder the establishment of the open primaries and instant runoff voting systems established by Sections 24 to 28.

Section 31. If any provision of Sections 24 to 28 or the application thereof to anyone or to any circumstance is held invalid, the remainder of those provisions and the application of such provisions to others or other circumstances shall not be affected thereby.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated there is no fiscal impact on the courts.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated this petition would transition Missouri elections to a ranked-choice voting system by January 1, 2026. There are three potential areas of expense which could be incurred in implementing this measure: the required public education campaign, reprogramming of the state election management system, and replacement of voting machines. The state may be required to pay any or all of these costs under Article X, Section 21 of the Missouri Constitution.

This measure would require their office to conduct a voter education campaign to familiarize voters with the instant runoff voting system and ranked-choice ballots. The precise cost of such a campaign would vary depending on strategic decisions and appropriation by the General Assembly. A statewide educational campaign is estimated to reach or exceed $2,000,000 beginning in fiscal year (FY) 2026. Primarily this would be one-time costs but with the possibility to carry over, especially if the campaign is implemented a significant time before the election at which the system first sees service.

Additionally, the Missouri Centralized Voter Registration program (MCVR) would need to be modified to accept ranked-choice vote totals. The total numbers of each different ballot ranking combination would need to be tabulated in MCVR from the local election authorities (LEAs) before the instant runoff process could take place, especially in the case of statewide races. This would require programming resources to be devoted beyond those covered under the normal maintenance and upkeep contracts. Labor costs to program this modification are estimated by the vendor at $46,000, to be executed in FY 2025 or FY 2026 in preparation for the time when ranked-choice voting begins in 2026.

Finally, in order to properly handle ranked-choice ballots, all voting equipment statewide must either be updated with code which allows ranked-choice voting or be replaced with ranked-choice-compatible machines. Since reprogramming can reasonably be considered a lesser cost than full replacement, they present the replacement cost as a maximum for this potential expense. The latest voting systems survey, conducted in 2020, found 5,735 pieces of election equipment in service statewide. At an average replacement cost of $5,000 per machine, this could result in a cost of up to $28,675,000 in FY 2025 or FY 2026.

Each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In FY 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. Their office estimates $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no fiscal impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated they estimate the following additional costs as a result of this petition:

- ~$12,000 in additional ballots for all parties to vote on all State and Federal (except President) level candidates, per Primary and General even-year elections.
- ~$25,000 onetime software expense to update both primary and general election ballots as well as produce the paper record for each vote in Section 24.2
- ~$25,000 each primary election to print each paper record under 24.2
- ~$25,000 each general election to print each paper record under 24.2
- ~$5,000 each primary election for poll workers to assist with voter inspection of records under 24.2
- ~$10,000 each general election for poll workers to assist with voter inspection of records under 24.2
- ~$115,000 for onetime software upgrades to fulfill the instant runoff tabulation provisions of Section 26. Due to adding County level, even though already nonpartisan.
- ~$5,000 in onetime training costs for workers
- ~$10,000 in onetime voter education costs under Section 26.11

In sum, one-time estimate of $155,000 and ongoing costs of $89,000 per every even year.

Officials from Greene County indicated in reviewing initiative petition 24-015 it has been determined there will be an increased cost to the County of Greene if voters vote to amend Article VIII, version 3 with the proposed language in this initiative petition.

Section 24:

Testing the election equipment 6 months prior to each election would require no less than 3 tests per year at an estimated cost of $9,000 per election.

Election Equipment Testing Cost Estimate: $27,000

Section 25:

The increase in the candidate names on one ballot in addition to the write-in opportunity for each race will increase the testing hours. It will also include the voter education campaign. The expense for this will be accomplished by sending a mailer to voters educating them to the change. There will be a decrease in the ballot faces representing each party. The decrease in ballot faces will cause a decrease in the ballot order total, due to all contests being on one ballot.

Taking the August 2022 primary election cost as the point of comparison shows that there will be a one-time cost increase by $58,132.38, due to the one-time voter education campaign.

Section 26:

An RCV election for a November General would increase by an additional $5,138.83 due to the coding and layout cost for a ranked choice election.

Section 27:

There would be no additional cost overall for this section, as these election costs are paid for by the state in the case of a special election.

Section 28:

No known cost at this time, since no rules have been promulgated by the SOS.

Section 29:

No cost

Officials from St. Louis County indicated from the St. Louis County Board of Elections: "We believe this will have a fiscal impact of anywhere from $0-50,000 because it is unknown if we would need to pay for new software or to use open-sourced software to adapt to ranked-choice voting. In addition, this petition would require them to hold a special election for a vacancy, which would cost about $1 million per county-wide election. Finally, to send one mailing to each voter would cost about $250,000 to comply with a voter education campaign."

Officials from the City of Jefferson City indicated the proposed initiative petition would not have a direct fiscal impact to their city since Cole County conducts elections for the City. Presumably, Cole County could "bill" the City for any costs incurred by the County associated with implementing the referenced election requirements.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this proposed amendment would have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact to their college.

Officials from the St. Louis Community College indicated this initiative does not appear to have any significant specific cost or cost savings to their College. Indirect cost considerations have not been determined. In particular, if the petition delays or inhibits voting for elected officials for the Community College Districts or increases the cost of elections then it could have a potentially negative impact. Such impact cannot be evaluated at this time.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated they believe this will have a fiscal impact of anywhere from $0-50,000 because it is unknown if they would need to pay for new software or to use open-sourced software to adapt to ranked-choice voting. In addition, this petition would require them to hold a special election for a vacancy, which would cost about $1 million per county-wide election. Finally, to send one mailing to each voter would cost about $250,000 to comply with a voter education campaign.

Officials from the Board of Election Commissioners City of St. Louis this petition would require the City Election Board to have the capability to conduct ranked choice voting. While their current voting system does not have this capability, they have been given funding to purchase a new system. Any system they would acquire would have this capability (though one vendor's current system allows three candidates; another vendor's standard software package does not include ranked choice but allows for the separate purchase of a license for an additional fee which they would not acquire unless forced to do so).

This petition also requires local election authorities to conduct a voter education campaign. While the scope of this campaign is vague, it makes no mention of where funding for this education would come from. If the City Election Board were required to send a mailing to all City voters notifying them of these substantial changes, which would certainly be justified, the cost of such mailing could be estimated at around $50,000.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners indicated they could not see a material difference between 24-014 and 24-015, therefore their response is the same. Also note, if a special election is needed to pass any of these petitions, not a general election, the State would be responsible for their pro-rata share of election costs based on voter registration. The cost to conduct an election in the Kansas City portion of Jackson County is $650,000.

If this initiative petition becomes law, definitions "for shall be tested and certified as secure" needs more explanation to give a more realistic fiscal impact. An estimation of at least two additional warehouse staff at $40,000 each, including benefits would be needed. Software for an instant runoff would be $25,000. Training for staff would be $10,000.

Permanent paper record for each vote cast and available for inspection and verification by the voter at the time the vote is cast is an impossible task and could not be accomplished.

Regarding the Rank Choice voting portion of this petition, new software would need to be purchased at $25,000 and staff would need to be retrained at $10,000. The election day ballot would go to two pages due to the increased length of the ballot (200,000 times 50 cents a ballot) $100,000. Legal Notices would be placed in all K.C. area newspapers $30,000. Literature explaining rank choice voting would be printed and mailed to all voters at $100,000. Also election day judges would need to be trained at $30,000.

Total cost to implement this new law would be roughly $410,000, but a portion of this petition could not be done as described above.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated their current voting equipment is capable of instant runoff voting. There should be no direct costs associated with this petition.

They indicated they should have included this with the other related petitions as well, but the 6 month prior testing requirement will overlap election cycles. Testing for the General Municipal will be required to be done by early October the previous year, during absentee voting. Testing for the August election in February as they are programming and testing ballots for the General Municipal. Testing for the November General Election in May.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated the current version of their tabulation software does not support rank choice voting for four selections.

There is currently no software certified by the Election Assistance Commission (EAC) to support a four-candidate selection. If the software were approved by the EAC an upgrade would need to be purchased by the Jackson County Election Board.

There is currently no funding source available for this purchase.

Fiscal Note Estimate
$25,000.00 - $35,500.00

Voter education would be necessary and the cost substantial. Run-Off and Rank Choice Voting are very confusing to voters.

$140,000.00 - $200,000.00 estimate for development of education materials and mailings. Depending on the number of candidates running in the primary election and other issues placed on the ballot the Board could be forced to a three-page ballot causing confusion at the polling locations and doubling the ballot costs.

Normal ballot costs for primary & general elections: $60,200.00

$60,200.00

Total Fiscal Note:
$225,200.00 - $295,700.00

Officials from the Clay County Board of Election Commissioners indicated that if all the names are put on one ballot, depending on how many people run that could produce the potential to have two actual ballots to include all the names which would double the cost of ballots now. They would estimate additional costs anywhere from $50,000 to $100,00 depending on how many file.

RE: PETITIONS 2024-013, 2024-014, AND 2024-015

Dear Auditor Galloway,

We are writing on behalf of RepresentUS regarding the ballot petitions officially named 2024-013, 2024-014 and 2024-015, which would bring Final Four open primaries and instant runoff voting ("IRV," sometimes referred to as "ranked choice voting") to Missouri elections. RepresentUs is a national, nonpartisan organization focused on improving America's political system. We work with partners and volunteers across the political spectrum to pass pro-democracy reforms at the state and local level. RepresentUS has helped grassroots campaigns to bring reforms like Final Four and IRV across the country.

In our experience, the costs associated with implementing IRV are often far below what many initially expect, and we expect this trend to hold in Missouri. The vast majority of counties will not need to replace their existing voting machines. According to a comprehensive analysis by the Ranked Choice Voting Resource Center, all but two of Missouri's counties currently have voting machines capable of conducting elections with IRV.¹ Furthermore, it is our understanding that one of those two counties, St. Louis City, is already planning on upgrading its voting systems to models with IRV-capable hardware. This means that the costs of technical implementation for nearly every county in the state would be limited to software upgrades.

For comparison, when Alaska's Division of Elections's released a fiscal note for a ballot measure to implement the same policy as contained in 2024-013, 2024-014 and 2024-015, it determined that 137 machines would have to be replaced at cost of $3,900 each, for a total cost of $534,300.² In the majority of counties that will not need to replace voting machines, however, costs will be more similar to those in Maine, which did not need to upgrade its voting systems.

² Alaska Division of Elections, 19AKBE - Statement of Costs, <https://www.elections.alaska.gov/petitions/19AKBE/19AKBEStatementOfCosts.pdf>. The Division of Elections also estimates the total cost of implementation to be $803,593, including costs for things like voter education ($150,000) and language assistance ($57,416).

When Maine used IRV for the first time in 2018, its Secretary of State reported that the entire cost of statewide implementation that year was $441,804.³

Considering the experiences of other jurisdictions that have adopted IRV, we expect the cost of implementation in Missouri to be fairly modest. Thank you for your time and attention to this matter.

Sincerely,

David O'Brien

RE: PETITIONS 2024-013, 2024-014, and 2024-015

Dear Auditor Galloway,

We are writing on behalf of the Ranked Choice Voting Resource Center regarding the estimated fiscal impact of initiative petitions 2022-049 and 2022-050, which would bring Top 4 open primaries and instant runoff voting (“IRV,” sometimes referred to as “ranked-choice voting” or “RCV”) to Missouri elections. The Ranked Choice Voting Resource Center is a 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization that provides information, research, and tools to teach the public about ranked choice voting. The staff of the Resource Center have decades of election administration experience and experience overseeing ranked choice voting elections at all levels of government. Our nationally recognized center is regarded as the premier ranked choice voting resource for voters, election administrators, policymakers, and candidates.

We recently conducted a statewide analysis of Missouri’s voting equipment in our Missouri RCV Administrative Assessment (<https://bit.ly/RCV-Missouri-2022>). In our analysis, we found that 114 of 116 local election authorities (113 counties and one city) in Missouri have RCV capable equipment: equipment that can now, or after a software update, be used to hold ranked choice voting elections. In these counties, hardware purchases are not necessary to add RCV capability. Software upgrades, however, may be necessary and will need to have their costs negotiated directly with the vendors providing equipment to each local election authority. We do not know how many of these election authorities will need to update their software nor how much it may cost any one authority to make upgrades, so we do not estimate those costs here.

One local election authority (St. Louis City) has legacy voting equipment – equipment at the end of its usable lifespan – and one local election authority (Worth County) hand counts its elections. St. Louis City should replace its legacy voting equipment soon as it is at the end of its usable lifespan. All modern voting equipment available today includes ranked choice voting capability. By replacing that legacy equipment, St. Louis City will also gain ranked choice voting capability.

Worth County can conduct ranked choice voting elections by hand though we suggest using voting equipment to speed up the counting process.

The City of St. Louis has allocated $5,000,000 for new voting machines that are capable of conducting instant run-off elections, and those machines will be in use with or without passage of petitions 2024-013, 2024-014, and 2024-015.

<https://www.stlouis-mo.gov/government/city-laws/board-bills/boardbill.cfm?bbDetail=true&BBIId=14003>. Given that these machines should be in place before any implementation of petitions 2024-013, 2024-014, and 2024-015, we do not include the City of St. Louis in our cost estimate.

A fiscal note for Petition 2022-19 estimated that purchasing a single voting machine would cost $5,000. Based on publicly available information about voting machines used in the state, we estimate that Worth County could add two scanning machines to tabulate RCV elections quickly. At a rate of $5,000 per machine, that will cost approximately $10,000. Worth County could also spend no money and continue to hand count their elections.

Based on this analysis, the fiscal impact of 2024-013, 2024-014, and 2024-015 for purchasing ranked choice voting capable equipment will be between $0 and $10,000 in one-time costs.

Thank you for your consideration of this submission. If you have any questions, please contact the Ranked Choice Voting Resource Center at info@rcvresources.org or 1-833-VOTE-RCV (1-833-868-3728).

RE: PETITIONS 2024-013, 2024-014 AND 2024-015

Dear Auditor Galloway,

I am writing to you today on behalf of Veterans for Political Innovation regarding the estimated fiscal impact of initiative petitions 24-013, 24-014 and 24-015. I am also writing as a licensed Missouri attorney and a concerned Missouri citizen.

Veterans for Political Innovation (VPI) is a national, nonpartisan nonprofit community, based out of Saint Louis, Missouri. VPI is mobilizing veterans and supporters to make politics less toxic through innovations that bring more competition to all our elections. Over the past year, VPI has educated, trained and mobilized hundreds of veterans, in over 35 states, as trusted messengers for nonpartisan reforms such as “Final-4 Voting”—the innovative reform package outlined in these petitions. Part of our mission is to fully enfranchise and empower the approximately 50% of military veterans who do not affiliate or identify with either major political party. Independent voters want more choices in primary elections. With more electoral competition in every district, we will reward common sense problem solvers, once again, and make our campaigns and our politics less toxic.

Initiative petitions 24-013, 24-014 and 24-015 are functionally identical to petitions 2022-051, 2022-052, 2022-060 and 2022-061. If passed, these petitions would modify Missouri election law, so that candidates are chosen via “Final-4 Voting”; that is, top-four, cross-partisan (single ballot) primary elections and instant run-off voting general elections.

Since the fiscal notes for petitions 2022-051, 2022-052, 2022-060, and 2022-061 were completed, even more local election authorities in Missouri have begun using voting machines that can conduct instant run-off elections, including Macon, Bates and Henry Counties.ⁱ

Indeed, a comprehensive analysis conducted by the experts at the nonpartisan Ranked Choice Voting Resource Center shows that only two out of 116 local election authorities in Missouri—St. Louis City and Worth County—have voting machines that are incompatible with instant run-off voting (<https://bit.ly/RCV-Missouri-2022>).

The City of St. Louis has allocated funds for new voting machines that can conduct instant run-off elections, and those machines will be in use with or without passage of petitions 2024-013, 2024-014, and 2024-015. The Board of Alderman appropriated $5,000,000 for new voting equipment in Board Bill Number 206 in May 2022ⁱⁱ.

The only local election authority in Missouri that does not currently have hardware capable of conducting instant run-off elections is Worth County. Worth County has just 1,465 registered voters, and County staff tabulate election results there by hand count. Instant runoff voting elections can also be tabulated by hand with paper ballots.

Together, at least 115 of Missouri's 116 local election authorities will have machines capable of conducting instant run-off voting elections before Missourians even vote on petitions 2024-013, 2024-014, or 2024-015. The exact cost of Worth County's voting machine upgrades is unknown, but very likely less than $15,000ⁱⁱⁱ. Because most local election authorities have already budgeted for regular voting machine software upgrades, any costs associated with software should not be included in this fiscal note.

In conclusion, petitions 2024-013, 2024-014, and 2024-015 would most likely not incur any one-time costs for voting hardware. The costs for upgrading software with existing machines are unknown, but based on other states, they are expected to be quite limited. Any potential one-time costs would likely be offset by future savings due to the cross-partisan primary election only requiring one ballot instead of the current partisan primary system which requires two.

Thank you for your public service, and for your time and consideration of this submission. If you have any questions, please do not hesitate to contact me at: 314.222.0477 or eric@V-pi.org.

Sincerely,

Re: Petitions 2024-013, 2024-014, 2024-015

Dear Auditor Galloway:

This letter is in reference to petitions 2024-013, 2024-014, 2024-015 to adopt ranked choice voting (RCV) in Missouri. If passed, these petitions would allow implementation of a top four primary and instant runoff or ranked choice voting elections for the August and November 2026 elections.

I am a Missouri attorney whose practice has focused on election law since 2014. During that time, I represented the Ferguson-Florissant School District in a lawsuit that resulted in adopting cumulative voting. More recently, I represented the City of Eastpointe, Michigan, when they adopted ranked choice voting pursuant to a consent decree with the Department of Justice. Eastpointe has used ranked choice voting in city council races since 2019.

My law firm provides clients with advice on transitioning and implementing new electoral systems. This advice includes statutory and regulatory review and analysis, as well as a review of the technological and practical challenges involved in any transition.

As you know, Missouri has 116 local election authorities ("LEAs"). Of those, 114 LEAs currently maintain RCV ready equipment. That means that each of those counties and/or independent cities already maintain the hardware necessary to run an RCV election.

The City of St. Louis Board of Election Commissioners is one of the state's largest LEAs. Their current equipment is considered legacy equipment. It is outdated and cannot run an RCV election. However, the City's Board of Alderman provided a $5 million allotment in FY2022 to purchase a new voting system. This much-needed update will likely occur before voters decide on whether to adopt RCV in Missouri. While there are multiple vendors the City may choose to purchase from, any new system will have the capability to run an RCV election. Thus, the City of St. Louis' Board of Election Commissioners will be able to implement RCV without any additional cost to taxpayers.

After the City of St. Louis purchases new equipment, Worth County, Missouri will be the only LEA without RCV-ready equipment. While Worth County had previously reported using legacy equipment too old to run an RCV election, it now reports using hand-counts for paper ballots. (See, <https://verifiedvoting.org/verifier/#mode/navigate/map/ppEquip/mapType/normal/year/2022/state/29>)

Worth County has a population of just 1,465 registered voters. That small number of voters would allow for hand-counts, even in RCV elections. For that reason, Worth County does not need to purchase additional hardware and can implement RCV without any additional cost to taxpayers.

Many, but not all, of the state's LEAs will need to upgrade their software. Some voting system vendors include these costs with their annual fees. Others do not. The costs for software upgrades will vary based on the vendor, the date of the hardware, and the LEA's individual, negotiated contract. As such, any additional cost to taxpayers for software upgrades are undetermined.

Aside from hardware and software, many LEAs will be able to save taxpayer dollars in running a non-partisan primary. As it stands, LEAs must print separate ballots for the Democrat, Republican, Libertarian, and Constitution Parties. Separate ballots will no longer be necessary under petitions 2024-013, 2024-014, 2024-015. Thus, LEAs will save an undetermined amount on printing and formatting costs.

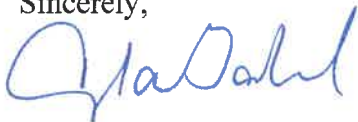

Finally, petitions 2024-013, 2024-014, 2024-015 require the state to conduct a voter education campaign. The cost for voter education campaigns can vary dramatically. Typically, these campaigns include a website, promotional material, candidate education, and/or town-hall meetings. The state of Alaska recently implemented ranked choice voting in 2022. The fiscal note estimated the cost for the education campaign at $150,000.

Based on this analysis, taxpayers should not incur additional costs to purchase hardware to run ranked choice voting in Missouri. The cost for software and a voter education campaign is estimated at $150,000 - $250,000.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

Angela Gabel

RE: Petitions 2024-013, 2024-014, and 2024-015

Dear Auditor Galloway,

I write today regarding the estimated fiscal impact of initiative petitions 2024-013, 2024-014, and 2024-015, three bills that would implement a new final-four primary and ranked-choice voting general election scheme to elections conducted in Missouri.

I am Dr. Sam Wang, professor at Princeton University and director of the Electoral Innovation Lab. The Electoral Innovation Lab takes an engineering-like approach to democracy repair. We use theory and analysis to anticipate how problems in representation, engagement, and depolarization can be solved before they become widespread. This comprehensive approach is used to develop policy reforms, inform legal scholarship and academic research. Ultimately, we seek to test proposed policies: legislative actions, election rules, redistricting optimization, and community strategies. In recent years we have applied our investigational methods to voting reforms, including ranked-choice voting in Maine and Alaska.

Many other jurisdictions have experience implementing ranked-choice voting systems and have done thorough fiscal impact analyses thereof, and can provide some evidence of costs should Missouri implement this voting system.

Missouri implementation costs are potentially under $200,000

A comprehensive analysis conducted by the experts at the Ranked Choice Voting Resource Center (<https://bit.ly/RCV-Missouri-2022>) shows that only two out of 116 local election authorities in Missouri, St. Louis City and Worth County, have voting machines that are incompatible with ranked-choice voting methods:

As a worst-case scenario, the fiscal impact of 2024-013, 2024-014, and 2024-015 would arise from replacing voting machines in the two jurisdictions currently lacking machines. In the larger jurisdiction, St. Louis City, machine upgrades are already planned even without any new laws, and will likely be done by the time 2024-013, 2024-014, and 2024-015 would take effect, after the 2024 cycle. The remaining need is in Worth County, whose population is less than 2,000. In Worth County, tabulation could be done by two machines at a cost of approximately $10,000. Software upgrades in other counties are part of their normal maintenance costs. Additional costs may still be modest: at a cost of $1,000 per county, the necessary software above and beyond already-planned upgrades would still be below $200,000. Countervailing to these costs is the fact that there will be an unknown amount of savings in future years because the primary election will require only one ballot instead of one for each partisan primary, as is now the case.

Implementation costs in other states: $400,000 to $600,000

Worst-case costs can be calculated using the experience of other states. Maine implemented ranked-choice voting in 2018. The state analyzed the costs of implementing the new system during the first year and found that the total fiscal impact to the state was $441,804, the largest portion of which was actually the requirement to print a separate ballot to run a referendum measure on an unrelated matter.¹ Voters in Alaska recently approved similar voting reforms to those under consideration in Missouri. The state's official estimate of costs for needed ballot tabulation equipment was only $534,300.²

Re: 2024-013, 2024-014, 2024-015

Dear Auditor Galloway,

FairVote is a nonpartisan, nonprofit organization and leading advocate and analyst of ranked choice voting since its inception in 1992. I have been closely involved in a number of implementations of ranked choice voting over the past two decades. Ranked choice voting is the fastest growing election reform in the nation, used in 2021 and 2022 in more than 40 cities and states, including for all of Alaska's federal and state elections, Maine's primary and federal elections, and New York City primary elections.

Initiative petitions 2024-013, 2024-014, and 2024-015 are similar to petitions 2022-051, 2022-052, 2022-060, and 2022-061. If passed, these petitions would modify Missouri election law so that candidates are chosen via top four primaries and ranked choice, or instant run-off, elections.

The fiscal impact for this change could be as little as $10,000, as explained in this letter.

First, estimates of the costs of implementation of ranked choice voting often skew high before enactment and implementation, and actual costs will depend on decisions made by election officials. For example, the official fiscal note from Maine election officials before and after its voters passed ranked choice voting in 2016 was more than $1.5 million. The actual costs in the June 2018 statewide primary elections for governor and other state and congressional primaries were less than $100,000.

When North Carolina election officials learned in August 2010 they had to run a statewide ranked choice election in November 2010 for a judicial vacancy election with 13 candidates, they did so within their existing budget.

Second, while we strongly support voter education as a general matter, any taxpayer costs associated with voter education are not intrinsic to adoption of ranked choice voting. Some jurisdictions like Maine have adopted and implemented ranked choice voting with virtually no extra money spent on voter education, and voters in those jurisdictions have handled the new system very well, with 82% of voters from a poll released in November 2022 in Maine's 2nd congressional district finding that ranked choice voting is "easy" or "very easy."

Third, the fiscal notes and public comment for petitions 2022-051, 2022-052, 2022-060, and 2022-061 showed that the vast majority of Missouri's local election authorities already have voting equipment that can be used for ranked choice voting / instant run-off elections. Since the fiscal notes for the 2022 petitions were completed, additional election authorities have begun using voting machines that are capable of conducting instant run-off elections:

- Macon County now has ES&S DS200/DS450/ExpressVote machines, which are capable of conducting instant run-off / ranked-choice voting elections.
- Bates County now has Unisyn OpenElect OVO/OpenElect OVI machines, which are capable of conducting instant run-off / ranked-choice voting elections.
- Henry County now has Unisyn OpenElect FVS/OpenElect Freedom Vote Tablet machines, which are capable of conducting instant run-off / ranked-choice voting elections.

Together, at least 115 of Missouri's 116 local election authorities will have machines capable of conducting instant run-off elections before Missourians are able to vote on petitions 2024-013, 2024-014, or 2024-015.

The City of St. Louis has allocated funds for new voting machines that are capable of conducting instant run-off elections, and those machines will be in use with or without passage of petitions 2024-013, 2024-014, and 2024-015. The Board of Alderman appropriated \$5,000,000 for new voting equipment in Board Bill Number 206 in May 2022.

Fourth, apart from ongoing upgrades in St. Louis, the only local election authority in Missouri that does not currently have hardware capable of conducting instant run-off elections is Worth County. Worth County has just 1,465 registered voters, and County staff tabulate election results there by hand count. Ranked choice voting elections can also be tabulated by hand with paper ballots.

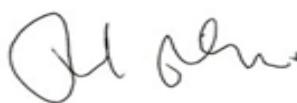

The above-cited updates demonstrate petitions 2024-013, 2024-014, and 2024-015 would require limited costs for voting hardware. Costs for upgrading software with existing machines are variable based on election system vendors, but based on other states, are expected to be quite limited.

We concur with estimates from the Ranked Choice Voting Resource Center that the fiscal impact of 2024-013, 2024-014, and 2024-015 for purchasing ranked choice voting capable equipment will be between $0 and $10,000 in one-time costs depending on whether Worth County purchases equipment or conducts hand counts. Additional resources to consider include:

- The nonpartisan, independent organization Verified Voting has a publicly-available database available, which details the voting machines in use across all Missouri counties.
- Additional information from the Ranked Choice Voting Resource Center about the counties which already have ranked-choice voting-ready machines can be found here.

If you have any questions about this letter, or if we can serve as a resource to you for ranked choice voting information and implementation, I can be reached at rr@fairvote.org or 301-270-4616.

Rob Richie

NOTICE: The proposed amendment revises Article VIII of the Constitution by adopting eight new Sections to be known as Article VIII, Sections 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, and 31.

Be it resolved by the people of the state of Missouri that the Constitution be amended:

Section A. Article VIII of the Constitution is revised by adopting eight new Sections to be known as Article VIII, Sections 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, and 31 to read as follows:

Section 24. 1. Every voting machine used to conduct any public election in the State of Missouri shall be tested and certified as secure at least six months prior to each election in which the voting machine will be used. Such testing and certification shall meet all standards established by the United States Election Assistance Commission or independent testing authority designated by the United States Election Assistance Commission. In addition, the Secretary of State shall test and certify voting equipment and/or software necessary to run an instant runoff election at least six months prior to implementation.

2. Every voting machine used to conduct any election in the State of Missouri shall produce an individual, anonymous, permanent paper record for each vote cast, which shall be made available for inspection and verification by the voter at the time the vote is cast. Such individual, anonymous, permanent paper record shall be preserved for use in any election audit.

3. The candidate or their designee shall have the right to be present whenever paper ballots or the permanent paper records produced by electronic voting machines are counted, audited, or placed in storage.

Section 25. 1. Beginning with the 2026 primary election, and notwithstanding any other provision of law to the contrary, primary elections for all state executive branch offices, members of the Missouri General Assembly, and members of the United States Congress shall be open primaries where the four candidates for each office who receive the most votes advance to the general election.

2. Primary ballots for all offices listed in Subsection 1 of this Section shall meet the following criteria:

(1) All qualified candidates, regardless of party affiliation, shall appear on a single ballot to be used by all qualified voters, regardless of party affiliation.

(2) Primary ballots shall include space for write-in candidates for every office appearing on the ballot.

3. In the primary election for all offices listed in Subsection 1 of this Section, a qualified voter shall be permitted to cast a vote for any candidate for whom that voter is otherwise eligible to vote. A qualified voter shall only vote for one candidate for each office.

4. The four candidates for each office receiving the most votes in the primary election shall advance to the general election for that office. Only those candidates shall appear on the general election ballot.

5. If it cannot be determined which four candidates received the most votes because two or more candidates are tied with an equal number of votes, that tie shall be broken by drawing lots.

Section 26. 1. Beginning with the November 2026 general election, and notwithstanding any other provision of law to the contrary, general elections for all offices listed in Subsection 1 of Section 25 shall be instant runoff elections in which a qualified voter may indicate their preferred candidate Ranking Order on the ballot.

2. In an instant runoff general election conducted under this Section, each ballot shall count as one vote for the highest-ordered, Active Candidate for each office on that ballot, and tabulation shall proceed in rounds.

3. If, at the beginning of any round of tabulation, an Active Candidate receives a majority of the votes cast for an office, that candidate is elected for that office and tabulation is complete.

4. If, after any round of tabulation, no Active Candidate for an office has received a majority of the votes, a new round of tabulation shall begin and proceed as follows:

(1) The Active Candidate receiving the fewest number of votes shall be eliminated.

(2) Each ballot containing a vote cast for the eliminated candidate shall count as a vote for its next highest-ordered Active Candidates.

(3) Votes shall be tabulated pursuant to Subdivisions (1) and (2) of this Subsection until an Active Candidate receives the majority of the remaining votes.

5. If a ballot has a Ranking Order for an office that does not contain any candidate, and there are no Active Candidates at a higher Ranking Order, the ballot shall count as a vote for the highest-ordered Active Candidate after that Ranking Order, if any.

6. Ballots shall not count as a vote for any candidate for a particular office only if:

(1) The ballot does not include an Active Candidate for an office at any Ranking Order; or

(2) The ballot contains an Overvote that includes the highest-ordered Active Candidate for that office.

7. If two or more candidates for an office are tied with equal and lowest number of votes, and the tabulation in Subsection 4 cannot continue until the candidate with the lowest number of votes is eliminated, the candidate to be eliminated shall be determined by drawing lots.

8. General election ballots shall be laid out to allow voters to indicate their preferred candidate Ranking Order. Election officials shall design the ballot to be easy for voters to understand, consistent with accepted best practices in ballot design.

9. A voter's Ranking Order of up to four candidates shall be considered an expression of the voter's intent to indicate candidate preference(s) and shall not be considered an Overvote.

10. Instructions on the general election ballot shall include the following statement: "You may mark up to four choices in order of preference. Do not assign the ranking number to more than one candidate. "

11. Beginning at least one hundred twenty days before the first election utilizing the instant runoff system, the Secretary of State and local election authorities shall conduct a statewide voter education campaign to familiarize voters with the instant runoff voting system.

12. Notwithstanding any other provisions of law to the contrary, the aggregated vote totals from the primary election shall be used, as may be required by any other law, for the purposes of identifying the two major political parties, for a political party to maintain qualified status, or the establishment of a new political party.

Section 27. 1. Beginning after the 2026 general election, and notwithstanding any other provision of law to the contrary, a special election shall be called to fill any vacancy in any office listed in Subsection 1 of Section 25.

2. A special election to fill a vacancy in any such office shall be conducted pursuant to the primary and general election processes described in Sections 25 and 26.

Section 28. 1. For the purposes of Article VIII, the following terms mean:

(1) "Active Candidate", a candidate who has not been eliminated during an instant runoff tabulation.

(2) "Overvote", a vote in which the qualified voter indicated a preference for more than one candidate at the same ranking order.

(3) "Order" or "Ranking Order", the number a qualified voter assigns on their ballot to a candidate indicating that voter's preference, with 1 being the highest ranking order and 4 being the lowest ranking order.

Section 29. The Secretary of State shall issue rules and regulations necessary to implement Sections 24 to 28 of this Article. No rule or portion of a rule promulgated under the authority of such Sections shall become effective unless it has been promulgated pursuant to the requirements provided by law.

Section 30. 1. Nothing in this section shall limit the use of any applicable election law that is not inconsistent with the requirements and systems established in Sections 24 to 28.

2. Nothing in this section shall limit the general assembly from enacting laws consistent with Sections 24 to 28, or otherwise affecting the rights of qualified voters in an instant runoff election. The general assembly shall not enact laws that hinder the establishment of the open primaries and instant runoff voting systems established by Sections 24 to 28.

Section 31. If any provision of Sections 24 to 28 or the application thereof to anyone or to any circumstance is held invalid, the remainder of those provisions and the application of such provisions to others or other circumstances shall not be affected thereby.

Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, they expect that their office could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. However, if the enactment of this proposal were to result in substantial additional litigation, they may be required to request additional appropriations.

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated there is no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated there is no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated there is no fiscal impact on the courts.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated this petition would transition Missouri elections to a ranked-choice voting system by January 1, 2026. There are three potential areas of expense which could be incurred in implementing this measure: the required public education campaign, reprogramming of the state election management system, and replacement of voting machines. The state may be required to pay any or all of these costs under Article X, Section 21 of the Missouri Constitution.

This measure would require their office to conduct a voter education campaign to familiarize voters with the instant runoff voting system and ranked-choice ballots. The precise cost of such a campaign would vary depending on strategic decisions and appropriation by the General Assembly. A statewide educational campaign is estimated to reach or exceed $2,000,000 beginning in fiscal year (FY) 2026. Primarily this would be one-time costs but with the possibility to carry over, especially if the campaign is implemented a significant time before the election at which the system first sees service.

Additionally, the Missouri Centralized Voter Registration program (MCVR) would need to be modified to accept ranked-choice vote totals. The total numbers of each different ballot ranking combination would need to be tabulated in MCVR from the local election authorities (LEAs) before the instant runoff process could take place, especially in the case of statewide races. This would require programming resources to be devoted beyond those covered under the normal maintenance and upkeep contracts. Labor costs to program this modification are estimated by the vendor at $46,000, to be executed in FY 2025 or FY 2026 in preparation for the time when ranked-choice voting begins in 2026.

Finally, in order to properly handle ranked-choice ballots, all voting equipment statewide must either be updated with code which allows ranked-choice voting or be replaced with ranked-choice-compatible machines. Since reprogramming can reasonably be considered a lesser cost than full replacement, they present the replacement cost as a maximum for this potential expense. The latest voting systems survey, conducted in 2020, found 5,735 pieces of election equipment in service statewide. At an average replacement cost of $5,000 per machine, this could result in a cost of up to $28,675,000 in FY 2025 or FY 2026.

Each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In FY 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. Their office estimates $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no fiscal impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated they estimate the following additional costs as a result of this petition:

- ~$12,000 in additional ballots for all parties to vote on all State and Federal (except President) level candidates, per Primary and General even-year elections.
- ~$25,000 onetime software expense to update both primary and general election ballots as well as produce the paper record for each vote in Section 24.2
- ~$25,000 each primary election to print each paper record under 24.2
- ~$25,000 each general election to print each paper record under 24.2
- ~$5,000 each primary election for poll workers to assist with voter inspection of records under 24.2
- ~$10,000 each general election for poll workers to assist with voter inspection of records under 24.2
- ~100,000 for onetime software upgrades to fulfill the instant runoff tabulation provisions of Section 26
- ~5,000 in onetime training costs for workers
- ~$10,000 in onetime voter education costs under Section 26.11

In sum, one-time estimate of $140,000 and ongoing costs of $89,000 per every even year.

Officials from Greene County indicated in reviewing initiative petition 24-014 it has been determined there will be an increased cost to the County of Greene if voters vote to amend Article VIII, version 2 with the proposed language in this initiative petition.

Section 24:

Testing the election equipment 6 months prior to each election would require no less than 3 tests per year at an estimated cost of $9,000 per election.

Election Equipment Testing Cost Estimate: $27,000

Section 25:

The increase in the candidate names on one ballot in addition to the write-in opportunity for each race will increase the testing hours. It will also include the voter education campaign. The expense for this will be accomplished by sending a mailer to voters educating them to the change. There will be a decrease in the ballot faces representing each party. The decrease in ballot faces will cause a decrease in the ballot order total, due to all contests being on one ballot.

Taking the August 2022 primary election cost as the point of comparison shows that there will be a one-time cost increase by $58,132.38, due to the one-time voter education campaign.

Section 26:

An RCV election for a November General would increase by an additional $5,138.83 due to the coding and layout cost for a ranked choice election.

Section 27:

There would be no additional cost overall for this section, as these election costs are paid for by the state in the case of a special election.

Section 28:

No known cost at this time, since no rules have been promulgated by the SOS.

Section 29:

No cost

Officials from St. Louis County indicated from the St. Louis County Board of Elections: "We believe this will have a fiscal impact of anywhere from $0-50,000 because it is unknown if we would need to pay for new software or to use open-sourced software to adapt to ranked-choice voting. In addition, this petition would require them to hold a special election for a vacancy, which would cost about $1 million per county-wide election. Finally, to send one mailing to each voter would cost about $250,000 to comply with a voter education campaign."

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact to their college.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated they believe this will have a fiscal impact of anywhere from $0 - 50,000 because it is unknown if they would need to pay for new software or to use open-sourced software to adapt to ranked-choice voting. In addition, this petition would require them to hold a special election for a vacancy, which would cost about $1 million per county-wide election. Finally, to send one mailing to each voter would cost about $250,000 to comply with a voter education campaign.

Officials from the Board of Election Commissioners City of St. Louis indicated this petition would require the City Election Board to have the capability to conduct ranked choice voting. While their current voting system does not have this capability, they have been given funding to purchase a new system. Any system they would acquire would have this capability (though one vendor's current system allows three candidates; another vendor's standard software package does not include ranked choice but allows for the separate purchase of a license for an additional fee which they would not acquire unless forced to do so).

This petition also requires local election authorities to conduct a voter education campaign. The scope of this campaign is vague and the petition makes no mention of where funding for this education would come from. If the City Election Board sent a mailing to all City voters notifying them of these substantial changes, which would certainly be justified, the cost of such mailing could be estimated at around $50,000.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners indicated if this initiative petition becomes law, definitions "for shall be tested and certified as secure" needs more explanation to give a more realistic fiscal impact. An estimation of at least two additional warehouse staff at $40,000 each, including benefits would be needed. Software for an instant runoff would be $25,000. Training for staff would be $10,000. Permanent paper record for each vote cast and available for inspection and verification by the voter at the time the vote is cast is an impossible task and could not be accomplished.

Regarding the Rank Choice voting portion of this petition, new software would need to be purchased at $25,000 and staff would need to be retrained at $10,000. The election day ballot would go to two pages due to the increased length of the ballot (200,000 times 50 cents a ballot) $100,000. Legal Notices would be placed in all K.C. area newspapers $30,000. Literature explaining rank choice voting would be printed and mailed to all voters at $100,000. Also election day judges would need to be trained at $30,000.

Total cost to implement this new law would be roughly $410,000, but a portion of this petition could not be done as described above.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated their current voting equipment is capable of instant runoff voting. There should be no direct costs associated with this petition.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated the current version of their tabulation software does not support rank choice voting for four selections.

There is currently no software certified by the Election Assistance Commission (EAC) to support a four-candidate selection. If the software were approved by the EAC an upgrade would need to be purchased by the Jackson County Election Board.

There is currently no funding source available for this purchase.

Fiscal Note Estimate
$25,000.00 - $35,500.00

Voter education would be necessary and the cost substantial. Run-Off and Rank Choice Voting are very confusing to voters.

$140,000.00 - $200,000.00 estimate for development of education materials and mailings.

Depending on the number of candidates running in the primary election and other issues placed on the ballot the Board could be forced to a three-page ballot causing confusion at the polling locations and doubling the ballot costs.

Normal ballot costs for primary & general elections: $60,200.00

$60,200.00

Total Fiscal Note:
$225,200.00 - $295,700.00

Officials from the City of Jefferson City indicated the proposed initiative petition would not have a direct fiscal impact to their city since Cole County conducts elections for the City. Presumably, Cole County could "bill" the City for any costs incurred by the County associated with implementing the referenced election requirements.

Officials from the St. Louis Community College indicated this initiative does not appear to have any significant specific cost or cost savings to their college. Indirect cost considerations have not been determined. In particular, if the petition delays or inhibits voting for elected officials for the Community College Districts or increases the cost of elections then it could have a potentially negative impact. Such impact cannot be evaluated at this time.

Dear Auditor Galloway,

We are writing on behalf of RepresentUS regarding the ballot petitions officially named 2024-013, 2024-014 and 2024-015, which would bring Final Four open primaries and instant runoff voting ("IRV," sometimes referred to as "ranked choice voting") to Missouri elections. RepresentUs is a national, nonpartisan organization focused on improving America's political system. We work with partners and volunteers across the political spectrum to pass pro-democracy reforms at the state and local level. RepresentUS has helped grassroots campaigns to bring reforms like Final Four and IRV across the country.

In our experience, the costs associated with implementing IRV are often far below what many initially expect, and we expect this trend to hold in Missouri. The vast majority of counties will not need to replace their existing voting machines. According to a comprehensive analysis by the Ranked Choice Voting Resource Center, all but two of Missouri's counties currently have voting machines capable of conducting elections with IRV.¹ Furthermore, it is our understanding that one of those two counties, St. Louis City, is already planning on upgrading its voting systems to models with IRV-capable hardware. This means that the costs of technical implementation for nearly every county in the state would be limited to software upgrades.

For comparison, when Alaska's Division of Elections's released a fiscal note for a ballot measure to implement the same policy as contained in 2024-013, 2024-014 and 2024-015, it determined that 137 machines would have to be replaced at cost of $3,900 each, for a total cost of $534,300.² In the majority of counties that will not need to replace voting machines, however, costs will be more similar to those in Maine, which did not need to upgrade its voting systems.

² Alaska Division of Elections, 19AKBE - Statement of Costs, <https://www.elections.alaska.gov/petitions/19AKBE/19AKBEStatementOfCosts.pdf>. The Division of Elections also estimates the total cost of implementation to be $803,593, including costs for things like voter education ($150,000) and language assistance ($57,416).

When Maine used IRV for the first time in 2018, its Secretary of State reported that the entire cost of statewide implementation that year was $441,804.³

Considering the experiences of other jurisdictions that have adopted IRV, we expect the cost of implementation in Missouri to be fairly modest. Thank you for your time and attention to this matter.

Sincerely,

David O'Brien

RE: PETITIONS 2024-013, 2024-014, and 2024-015

Dear Auditor Galloway,

We are writing on behalf of the Ranked Choice Voting Resource Center regarding the estimated fiscal impact of initiative petitions 2022-049 and 2022-050, which would bring Top 4 open primaries and instant runoff voting (“IRV,” sometimes referred to as “ranked-choice voting” or “RCV”) to Missouri elections. The Ranked Choice Voting Resource Center is a 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization that provides information, research, and tools to teach the public about ranked choice voting. The staff of the Resource Center have decades of election administration experience and experience overseeing ranked choice voting elections at all levels of government. Our nationally recognized center is regarded as the premier ranked choice voting resource for voters, election administrators, policymakers, and candidates.

We recently conducted a statewide analysis of Missouri’s voting equipment in our Missouri RCV Administrative Assessment (<https://bit.ly/RCV-Missouri-2022>). In our analysis, we found that 114 of 116 local election authorities (113 counties and one city) in Missouri have RCV capable equipment: equipment that can now, or after a software update, be used to hold ranked choice voting elections. In these counties, hardware purchases are not necessary to add RCV capability. Software upgrades, however, may be necessary and will need to have their costs negotiated directly with the vendors providing equipment to each local election authority. We do not know how many of these election authorities will need to update their software nor how much it may cost any one authority to make upgrades, so we do not estimate those costs here.

One local election authority (St. Louis City) has legacy voting equipment – equipment at the end of its usable lifespan – and one local election authority (Worth County) hand counts its elections. St. Louis City should replace its legacy voting equipment soon as it is at the end of its usable lifespan. All modern voting equipment available today includes ranked choice voting capability. By replacing that legacy equipment, St. Louis City will also gain ranked choice voting capability.

Worth County can conduct ranked choice voting elections by hand though we suggest using voting equipment to speed up the counting process.

The City of St. Louis has allocated $5,000,000 for new voting machines that are capable of conducting instant run-off elections, and those machines will be in use with or without passage of petitions 2024-013, 2024-014, and 2024-015.

<https://www.stlouis-mo.gov/government/city-laws/board-bills/boardbill.cfm?bbDetail=true&BBIId=14003>. Given that these machines should be in place before any implementation of petitions 2024-013, 2024-014, and 2024-015, we do not include the City of St. Louis in our cost estimate.

A fiscal note for Petition 2022-19 estimated that purchasing a single voting machine would cost $5,000. Based on publicly available information about voting machines used in the state, we estimate that Worth County could add two scanning machines to tabulate RCV elections quickly. At a rate of $5,000 per machine, that will cost approximately $10,000. Worth County could also spend no money and continue to hand count their elections.

Based on this analysis, the fiscal impact of 2024-013, 2024-014, and 2024-015 for purchasing ranked choice voting capable equipment will be between $0 and $10,000 in one-time costs.

Thank you for your consideration of this submission. If you have any questions, please contact the Ranked Choice Voting Resource Center at info@rcvresources.org or 1-833-VOTE-RCV (1-833-868-3728).

RE: PETITIONS 2024-013, 2024-014 AND 2024-015

Dear Auditor Galloway,

I am writing to you today on behalf of Veterans for Political Innovation regarding the estimated fiscal impact of initiative petitions 24-013, 24-014 and 24-015. I am also writing as a licensed Missouri attorney and a concerned Missouri citizen.

Veterans for Political Innovation (VPI) is a national, nonpartisan nonprofit community, based out of Saint Louis, Missouri. VPI is mobilizing veterans and supporters to make politics less toxic through innovations that bring more competition to all our elections. Over the past year, VPI has educated, trained and mobilized hundreds of veterans, in over 35 states, as trusted messengers for nonpartisan reforms such as “Final-4 Voting”—the innovative reform package outlined in these petitions. Part of our mission is to fully enfranchise and empower the approximately 50% of military veterans who do not affiliate or identify with either major political party. Independent voters want more choices in primary elections. With more electoral competition in every district, we will reward common sense problem solvers, once again, and make our campaigns and our politics less toxic.

Initiative petitions 24-013, 24-014 and 24-015 are functionally identical to petitions 2022-051, 2022-052, 2022-060 and 2022-061. If passed, these petitions would modify Missouri election law, so that candidates are chosen via “Final-4 Voting”; that is, top-four, cross-partisan (single ballot) primary elections and instant run-off voting general elections.

Since the fiscal notes for petitions 2022-051, 2022-052, 2022-060, and 2022-061 were completed, even more local election authorities in Missouri have begun using voting machines that can conduct instant run-off elections, including Macon, Bates and Henry Counties.ⁱ

Indeed, a comprehensive analysis conducted by the experts at the nonpartisan Ranked Choice Voting Resource Center shows that only two out of 116 local election authorities in Missouri—St. Louis City and Worth County—have voting machines that are incompatible with instant run-off voting (<https://bit.ly/RCV-Missouri-2022>).

The City of St. Louis has allocated funds for new voting machines that can conduct instant run-off elections, and those machines will be in use with or without passage of petitions 2024-013, 2024-014, and 2024-015. The Board of Alderman appropriated $5,000,000 for new voting equipment in Board Bill Number 206 in May 2022ⁱⁱ.

The only local election authority in Missouri that does not currently have hardware capable of conducting instant run-off elections is Worth County. Worth County has just 1,465 registered voters, and County staff tabulate election results there by hand count. Instant runoff voting elections can also be tabulated by hand with paper ballots.

Together, at least 115 of Missouri's 116 local election authorities will have machines capable of conducting instant run-off voting elections before Missourians even vote on petitions 2024-013, 2024-014, or 2024-015. The exact cost of Worth County's voting machine upgrades is unknown, but very likely less than $15,000ⁱⁱⁱ. Because most local election authorities have already budgeted for regular voting machine software upgrades, any costs associated with software should not be included in this fiscal note.

In conclusion, petitions 2024-013, 2024-014, and 2024-015 would most likely not incur any one-time costs for voting hardware. The costs for upgrading software with existing machines are unknown, but based on other states, they are expected to be quite limited. Any potential one-time costs would likely be offset by future savings due to the cross-partisan primary election only requiring one ballot instead of the current partisan primary system which requires two.

Thank you for your public service, and for your time and consideration of this submission. If you have any questions, please do not hesitate to contact me at: 314.222.0477 or eric@V-pi.org.

Re: Petitions 2024-013, 2024-014, 2024-015

Dear Auditor Galloway:

This letter is in reference to petitions 2024-013, 2024-014, 2024-015 to adopt ranked choice voting (RCV) in Missouri. If passed, these petitions would allow implementation of a top four primary and instant runoff or ranked choice voting elections for the August and November 2026 elections.

I am a Missouri attorney whose practice has focused on election law since 2014. During that time, I represented the Ferguson-Florissant School District in a lawsuit that resulted in adopting cumulative voting. More recently, I represented the City of Eastpointe, Michigan, when they adopted ranked choice voting pursuant to a consent decree with the Department of Justice. Eastpointe has used ranked choice voting in city council races since 2019.

My law firm provides clients with advice on transitioning and implementing new electoral systems. This advice includes statutory and regulatory review and analysis, as well as a review of the technological and practical challenges involved in any transition.

As you know, Missouri has 116 local election authorities ("LEAs"). Of those, 114 LEAs currently maintain RCV ready equipment. That means that each of those counties and/or independent cities already maintain the hardware necessary to run an RCV election.

The City of St. Louis Board of Election Commissioners is one of the state's largest LEAs. Their current equipment is considered legacy equipment. It is outdated and cannot run an RCV election. However, the City's Board of Alderman provided a $5 million allotment in FY2022 to purchase a new voting system. This much-needed update will likely occur before voters decide on whether to adopt RCV in Missouri. While there are multiple vendors the City may choose to purchase from, any new system will have the capability to run an RCV election. Thus, the City of St. Louis' Board of Election Commissioners will be able to implement RCV without any additional cost to taxpayers.

After the City of St. Louis purchases new equipment, Worth County, Missouri will be the only LEA without RCV-ready equipment. While Worth County had previously reported using legacy equipment too old to run an RCV election, it now reports using hand-counts for paper ballots. (See, <https://verifiedvoting.org/verifier/#mode/navigate/map/ppEquip/mapType/normal/year/2022/state/29>)

Worth County has a population of just 1,465 registered voters. That small number of voters would allow for hand-counts, even in RCV elections. For that reason, Worth County does not need to purchase additional hardware and can implement RCV without any additional cost to taxpayers.

Many, but not all, of the state's LEAs will need to upgrade their software. Some voting system vendors include these costs with their annual fees. Others do not. The costs for software upgrades will vary based on the vendor, the date of the hardware, and the LEA's individual, negotiated contract. As such, any additional cost to taxpayers for software upgrades are undetermined.

Aside from hardware and software, many LEAs will be able to save taxpayer dollars in running a non-partisan primary. As it stands, LEAs must print separate ballots for the Democrat, Republican, Libertarian, and Constitution Parties. Separate ballots will no longer be necessary under petitions 2024-013, 2024-014, 2024-015. Thus, LEAs will save an undetermined amount on printing and formatting costs.

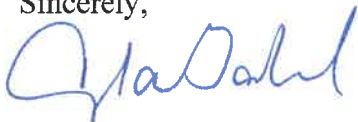

Finally, petitions 2024-013, 2024-014, 2024-015 require the state to conduct a voter education campaign. The cost for voter education campaigns can vary dramatically. Typically, these campaigns include a website, promotional material, candidate education, and/or town-hall meetings. The state of Alaska recently implemented ranked choice voting in 2022. The fiscal note estimated the cost for the education campaign at $150,000.

Based on this analysis, taxpayers should not incur additional costs to purchase hardware to run ranked choice voting in Missouri. The cost for software and a voter education campaign is estimated at $150,000 - $250,000.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

Angela Gabel

RE: Petitions 2024-013, 2024-014, and 2024-015

Dear Auditor Galloway,

I write today regarding the estimated fiscal impact of initiative petitions 2024-013, 2024-014, and 2024-015, three bills that would implement a new final-four primary and ranked-choice voting general election scheme to elections conducted in Missouri.

I am Dr. Sam Wang, professor at Princeton University and director of the Electoral Innovation Lab. The Electoral Innovation Lab takes an engineering-like approach to democracy repair. We use theory and analysis to anticipate how problems in representation, engagement, and depolarization can be solved before they become widespread. This comprehensive approach is used to develop policy reforms, inform legal scholarship and academic research. Ultimately, we seek to test proposed policies: legislative actions, election rules, redistricting optimization, and community strategies. In recent years we have applied our investigational methods to voting reforms, including ranked-choice voting in Maine and Alaska.

Many other jurisdictions have experience implementing ranked-choice voting systems and have done thorough fiscal impact analyses thereof, and can provide some evidence of costs should Missouri implement this voting system.

Missouri implementation costs are potentially under $200,000

A comprehensive analysis conducted by the experts at the Ranked Choice Voting Resource Center (<https://bit.ly/RCV-Missouri-2022>) shows that only two out of 116 local election authorities in Missouri, St. Louis City and Worth County, have voting machines that are incompatible with ranked-choice voting methods:

As a worst-case scenario, the fiscal impact of 2024-013, 2024-014, and 2024-015 would arise from replacing voting machines in the two jurisdictions currently lacking machines. In the larger jurisdiction, St. Louis City, machine upgrades are already planned even without any new laws, and will likely be done by the time 2024-013, 2024-014, and 2024-015 would take effect, after the 2024 cycle. The remaining need is in Worth County, whose population is less than 2,000. In Worth County, tabulation could be done by two machines at a cost of approximately $10,000. Software upgrades in other counties are part of their normal maintenance costs. Additional costs may still be modest: at a cost of $1,000 per county, the necessary software above and beyond already-planned upgrades would still be below $200,000. Countervailing to these costs is the fact that there will be an unknown amount of savings in future years because the primary election will require only one ballot instead of one for each partisan primary, as is now the case.

Implementation costs in other states: $400,000 to $600,000

Worst-case costs can be calculated using the experience of other states. Maine implemented ranked-choice voting in 2018. The state analyzed the costs of implementing the new system during the first year and found that the total fiscal impact to the state was $441,804, the largest portion of which was actually the requirement to print a separate ballot to run a referendum measure on an unrelated matter.¹ Voters in Alaska recently approved similar voting reforms to those under consideration in Missouri. The state's official estimate of costs for needed ballot tabulation equipment was only $534,300.²

Re: 2024-013, 2024-014, 2024-015

Dear Auditor Galloway,

FairVote is a nonpartisan, nonprofit organization and leading advocate and analyst of ranked choice voting since its inception in 1992. I have been closely involved in a number of implementations of ranked choice voting over the past two decades. Ranked choice voting is the fastest growing election reform in the nation, used in 2021 and 2022 in more than 40 cities and states, including for all of Alaska's federal and state elections, Maine's primary and federal elections, and New York City primary elections.

Initiative petitions 2024-013, 2024-014, and 2024-015 are similar to petitions 2022-051, 2022-052, 2022-060, and 2022-061. If passed, these petitions would modify Missouri election law so that candidates are chosen via top four primaries and ranked choice, or instant run-off, elections.

The fiscal impact for this change could be as little as $10,000, as explained in this letter.

First, estimates of the costs of implementation of ranked choice voting often skew high before enactment and implementation, and actual costs will depend on decisions made by election officials. For example, the official fiscal note from Maine election officials before and after its voters passed ranked choice voting in 2016 was more than $1.5 million. The actual costs in the June 2018 statewide primary elections for governor and other state and congressional primaries were less than $100,000.

When North Carolina election officials learned in August 2010 they had to run a statewide ranked choice election in November 2010 for a judicial vacancy election with 13 candidates, they did so within their existing budget.

Second, while we strongly support voter education as a general matter, any taxpayer costs associated with voter education are not intrinsic to adoption of ranked choice voting. Some jurisdictions like Maine have adopted and implemented ranked choice voting with virtually no extra money spent on voter education, and voters in those jurisdictions have handled the new system very well, with 82% of voters from a poll released in November 2022 in Maine's 2nd congressional district finding that ranked choice voting is "easy" or "very easy."

Third, the fiscal notes and public comment for petitions 2022-051, 2022-052, 2022-060, and 2022-061 showed that the vast majority of Missouri's local election authorities already have voting equipment that can be used for ranked choice voting / instant run-off elections. Since the fiscal notes for the 2022 petitions were completed, additional election authorities have begun using voting machines that are capable of conducting instant run-off elections:

- Macon County now has ES&S DS200/DS450/ExpressVote machines, which are capable of conducting instant run-off / ranked-choice voting elections.
- Bates County now has Unisyn OpenElect OVO/OpenElect OVI machines, which are capable of conducting instant run-off / ranked-choice voting elections.
- Henry County now has Unisyn OpenElect FVS/OpenElect Freedom Vote Tablet machines, which are capable of conducting instant run-off / ranked-choice voting elections.

Together, at least 115 of Missouri's 116 local election authorities will have machines capable of conducting instant run-off elections before Missourians are able to vote on petitions 2024-013, 2024-014, or 2024-015.

The City of St. Louis has allocated funds for new voting machines that are capable of conducting instant run-off elections, and those machines will be in use with or without passage of petitions 2024-013, 2024-014, and 2024-015. The Board of Alderman appropriated \$5,000,000 for new voting equipment in Board Bill Number 206 in May 2022.

Fourth, apart from ongoing upgrades in St. Louis, the only local election authority in Missouri that does not currently have hardware capable of conducting instant run-off elections is Worth County. Worth County has just 1,465 registered voters, and County staff tabulate election results there by hand count. Ranked choice voting elections can also be tabulated by hand with paper ballots.

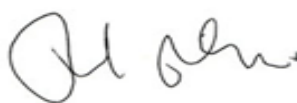

The above-cited updates demonstrate petitions 2024-013, 2024-014, and 2024-015 would require limited costs for voting hardware. Costs for upgrading software with existing machines are variable based on election system vendors, but based on other states, are expected to be quite limited.

We concur with estimates from the Ranked Choice Voting Resource Center that the fiscal impact of 2024-013, 2024-014, and 2024-015 for purchasing ranked choice voting capable equipment will be between $0 and $10,000 in one-time costs depending on whether Worth County purchases equipment or conducts hand counts. Additional resources to consider include:

- The nonpartisan, independent organization Verified Voting has a publicly-available database available, which details the voting machines in use across all Missouri counties.
- Additional information from the Ranked Choice Voting Resource Center about the counties which already have ranked-choice voting-ready machines can be found here.

If you have any questions about this letter, or if we can serve as a resource to you for ranked choice voting information and implementation, I can be reached at rr@fairvote.org or 301-270-4616.

Sincerely yours,

Rob Richie

NOTICE: The proposed amendment revises Article VIII of the Constitution by adopting six new Sections to be known as Article VIII, Sections 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, and 29.

Be it resolved by the people of the state of Missouri that the Constitution be amended:

Section A. Article VIII of the Constitution is revised by adopting six new Sections to be known as Article VIII, Sections 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, and 29 to read as follows:

Section 24. 1. Every voting machine used to conduct an election in the State of Missouri shall be tested and certified as secure prior to each election in which the machine will be used. Such testing and certification shall meet all federal standards.

2. Every voting machine used to conduct an election in the State of Missouri shall produce an individual, permanent paper record for each vote cast, which shall be made available for inspection and verification by the voter at the time the vote is cast. Such individual, permanent paper record shall be preserved for use in any election audit.

3. The candidate or their designee shall have the right to be present whenever paper ballots or the permanent paper records produced by electronic voting machines are counted, audited, or placed in storage.

Section 25. 1. Beginning at the August 2026 primary election, and notwithstanding any other provision of law to the contrary, primary elections for all statewide offices, members of the Missouri General Assembly, and members of the United States Congress shall be open primaries where the four candidates for each office receiving the most votes advance to the general election.

2. Primary ballots for all statewide offices, members of the Missouri General Assembly, and members of the United States Congress shall meet the following criteria:

(1) All candidates for an office shall appear on a single ballot.

(2) Primary ballots shall include space for a write-in candidate for such offices.

3. In the primary election for all statewide offices, members of the Missouri General Assembly, and members of the United States Congress, a qualified voter shall be permitted to cast a vote for any candidate for whom that voter is otherwise eligible to vote. A qualified voter shall only vote for one candidate for each office.

4. The four candidates for each office receiving the most votes in the primary election shall advance to the general election for that office. Only those candidates shall appear on the general election ballot.

5. If two or more candidates receive an equal number of votes for the same office, such that there is a tie for fourth place, such candidates or their designees shall have the right to draw lots to determine whose name shall appear on the general election ballot. If a candidate declines to participate, the election authority may draw lots on their behalf.

Section 26. 1. For the purposes of this section, the following terms mean:

(1) "Active Candidate", a candidate who has not been eliminated during an instant runoff tabulation.

(2) "Overvote", a vote in which the qualified voter has indicated a preference for more than one candidate at the same placement order.

(3) "Order" or "Placement Order", the number a qualified voter assigns to a candidate indicating that voter's preference, with 1 being the highest placement order and 4 being the lowest placement order.

2. Beginning at the November 2026 general election, and notwithstanding any other provision of law to the contrary, general elections for all statewide offices, members of the Missouri General Assembly, and members of the United States Congress shall be instant runoff elections in which a qualified voter may indicate their preferred candidate order on the ballot.

3. In a general election conducted under this section, each ballot shall count as one vote for the highest-ordered, Active Candidate on that ballot.

4. If, after the initial tabulation, an Active Candidate receives a majority of the votes cast, that candidate is elected and tabulation is complete.

5. If, after the initial tabulation, an Active Candidate has not received a majority of the highest-ordered votes cast, votes shall be tabulated as follows:

(1) The candidate receiving the fewest number of votes shall be eliminated.

(2) For each ballot cast for an eliminated candidate, the official conducting the tabulation shall determine the highest-ordered, Active Candidate on the ballot. The vote cast on that ballot shall be added to the total number of votes received by that Active Candidate.

(3) Votes shall be tabulated pursuant to subdivisions (1) and (2) of this subsection until an Active Candidate receives the majority of the remaining votes.

6. If a ballot has a placement order that does not contain any candidate, and there are no Active Candidates at a higher placement order, the ballot shall count as a vote for the highest-ordered Active Candidate listed after that placement order, if any.

7. Ballots shall not be included in the tabulation process in subsection 5 only if:

(1) The ballot does not include an Active Candidate at any placement order; or

(2) The ballot contains an Overvote that includes the highest-ordered, Active Candidate at any point during the tabulation process.

8. If two or more candidates are tied with an equal and lowest number of votes, and the tabulation in subsection 5 cannot continue until the candidate with the lowest number of votes is eliminated, the candidate to be eliminated shall be determined by such candidates or their designees drawing lots to determine who shall be eliminated. Should a candidate decline to participate, the election authority shall draw lots on their behalf.
9. Ballots shall be laid out to allow voters to indicate their preferred candidate order. The ballot shall be simple and easy to understand, consistent with best practices.
10. Instructions on the general election ballot shall include the following statement: "You may mark up to four choices in order of preference. Marking a second choice cannot help defeat your first choice. Marking a subsequent choice cannot help defeat your higher-ordered choices."
11. Beginning at least one hundred twenty days before the first election utilizing the instant runoff system, the Secretary of State and local election authorities shall conduct a voter education campaign to familiarize voters with the instant runoff voting system.
12. Notwithstanding any other provision of law to the contrary, the aggregated vote totals from the initial tabulation shall be used, as may be required by any other law, for the purposes of identifying the two major political parties.

Section 27. 1. Beginning August 1, 2026, and notwithstanding any other provision of law to the contrary, a special election shall be called to fill any vacancy in a statewide office, office of member of the Missouri General Assembly, and office of member of the United States Congress.

2. A special election to fill a vacancy in any such office shall be conducted pursuant to the primary and general election processes described in Sections 25 and 26 of this Article.

Section 28. The Secretary of State shall issue rules and regulations necessary to implement Sections 24 to 27 of this Article. No rule or portion of a rule promulgated under the authority of such Sections shall become effective unless it has been promulgated pursuant to the requirements provided by law.

Section 29. If any provision of Sections 24, 25, 26, or 27 or the application thereof to anyone or to any circumstance is held invalid, the remainder of those provisions and the application of such provisions to others or other circumstances shall not be affected thereby.

Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, they expect that their office could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. However, if the enactment of this proposal were to result in substantial additional litigation, they may be required to request additional appropriations.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated there is no impact on their department/Missouri Highways and Transportation Commission.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to open elections and ranked preference voting does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated there is no fiscal impact on the courts.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated this petition would transition Missouri elections to a ranked-choice voting system by January 1, 2026. There are three potential areas of expense which could be incurred in implementing this measure: the required public education campaign, reprogramming of the state election management system, and replacement of voting machines. The state may be required to pay any or all of these costs under Article X, Section 21 of the Missouri Constitution.

This measure would require their office to conduct a voter education campaign to familiarize voters with the instant runoff voting system and ranked-choice ballots. The precise cost of such a campaign would vary depending on strategic decisions and appropriation by the General Assembly. A statewide educational campaign is estimated to reach or exceed $2,000,000 beginning in fiscal year (FY) 2026. Primarily this would be one-time costs but with the possibility to carry over, especially if the campaign is implemented a significant time before the election at which the system first sees service.

Additionally, the Missouri Centralized Voter Registration program (MCVR) would need to be modified to accept ranked-choice vote totals. The total numbers of each different ballot ranking combination would need to be tabulated in MCVR from the local election authorities (LEAs) before the instant runoff process could take place, especially in the case of statewide races. This would require programming resources to be devoted beyond those covered under the normal maintenance and upkeep contracts. Labor costs to program this modification are estimated by the vendor at $46,000, to be executed in FY 2025 or FY 2026 in preparation for the time when ranked-choice voting begins in 2026.

Finally, in order to properly handle ranked-choice ballots, all voting equipment statewide must either be updated with code which allows ranked-choice voting or be replaced with ranked-choice-compatible machines. Since reprogramming can reasonably be considered a lesser cost than full replacement, they present the replacement cost as a maximum for this potential expense. The latest voting systems survey, conducted in 2020, found 5,735 pieces of election equipment in service statewide. At an average replacement cost of $5,000 per machine, this could result in a cost of up to $28,675,000 in FY 2025 or FY 2026.

Each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In FY 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. Their office estimates $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no fiscal impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated they estimate the following additional costs as a result of this petition:

- ~$12,000 in additional ballots for all parties to vote on all State and Federal (except President) level candidates, per Primary and General even-year elections.
- ~$25,000 onetime software expense to update both primary and general election ballots as well as produce the paper record for each vote in Section 24.2
- ~$25,000 each primary election to print each paper record under 24.2
- ~$25,000 each general election to print each paper record under 24.2
- ~$5,000 each primary election for poll workers to assist with voter inspection of records under 24.2
- ~$10,000 each general election for poll workers to assist with voter inspection of records under 24.2
- ~100,000 for onetime software upgrades to fulfill the instant runoff tabulation provisions of Section 26
- ~5,000 in onetime training costs for workers
- ~$10,000 in onetime voter education costs under Section 26.11

In sum, one-time estimate of $140,000 and ongoing costs of $89,000 per every even year.

Officials from Greene County indicated in reviewing initiative petition 24-013 it has been determined there will be an increased cost to the County of Greene if voters vote to amend Article VIII, version 1 with the proposed language in this initiative petition.

Section 24:

Testing the election equipment 6 months prior to each election would require no less than 3 tests per year at an estimated cost of $9,000 per election.

Election Equipment Testing Cost Estimate: $27,000

Section 25:

The increase in the candidate names on one ballot in addition to the write-in opportunity for each race will increase the testing hours. It will also include the voter education campaign. The expense for this will be accomplished by sending a mailer to voters educating them to the change. There will be a decrease in the ballot faces representing each party. The decrease in ballot faces will cause a decrease in the ballot order total, due to all contests being on one ballot.

Taking the August 2022 primary election cost as the point of comparison shows that there will be a one-time cost increase by $58,132.38, due to the one-time voter education campaign.

Section 26:

An RCV election for a November General would increase by an additional $5,138.83 due to the coding and layout cost for a ranked choice election.

Section 27:

There would be no additional cost overall for this section, as these election costs are paid for by the state in the case of a special election.

Section 28:

No known cost at this time, since no rules have been promulgated by the SOS.

Section 29:

No cost

Officials from St. Louis County indicated that from the St. Louis County Board of Elections: "We believe this will have a fiscal impact of anywhere from $0-50,000 because it is unknown if we would need to pay for new software or to use open-sourced software to adapt to ranked-choice voting. In addition, this petition would require us to hold a special election for a vacancy, which would cost about $1 million per county-wide election."

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact to their college.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated they believe this will have a fiscal impact of anywhere from $0-50,000 because it is unknown if they would need to pay for new software or to use open-sourced software to adapt to ranked-choice voting. In addition, this petition would require them to hold a special election for a vacancy, which would cost about $1 million per county-wide election.

Officials from the Board of Election Commissioners City of St. Louis indicated this petition would require the City Election Board to have the capability to conduct ranked choice voting. While their current voting system does not have this capability, they have been given funding to purchase a new system. Any system they would acquire would have this capability (though one vendor's current system allows three candidates; another vendor's standard software package does not include ranked choice but allows for the separate purchase of a license for an additional fee which they would not acquire unless forced to do so).

This petition also requires local election authorities to conduct a voter education campaign. The scope of this campaign is vague and the petition makes no mention of where funding for this education would come from. If the City Election Board sent a mailing to all City voters notifying them of these substantial changes, which would certainly be justified, the cost of such mailing could be estimated at around $50,000.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners indicated if this initiative petition becomes law, definitions "for shall be tested and certified as secure" needs more explanation to give a more realistic fiscal impact. An estimation of at least two additional warehouse staff at $40,000 each, including benefits would be needed. Permanent paper record for each vote cast and available for inspection and verification by the voter at the time the vote is cast is an impossible task and could not be accomplished.

Regarding the Rank Choice voting portion of this petition, new software would need to be purchased at $25,000 and staff would need to be retrained at $10,000. The election day ballot would go to two pages due to the increased length of the ballot (200,000 times 50 cents a ballot) $100,000. Legal Notices would be placed in all K.C. area newspapers $30,000. Literature explaining rank choice voting would be printed and mailed to all voters at $100,000. Also election day judges would need to be trained at $30,000.

Total cost to implement this new law would be roughly $375,000, but a portion of this petition could not be done as described above.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated their current voting equipment is capable of instant runoff voting. There should be no direct costs associated with this petition.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated the current version of their tabulation software does not support rank choice voting for four selections.

There is currently no software certified by the Election Assistance Commission (EAC) to support a four-candidate selection. If the software were approved by the EAC an upgrade would need to be purchased by the Jackson County Election Board.

There is currently no funding source available for this purchase.

Fiscal Note Estimate

$25,000.00 - $35,500.00

Voter education would be necessary and the cost substantial. Run-Off and Rank Choice Voting are very confusing to voters.

$140,000.00 - $200,000.00 estimate for development of education materials and mailings.

Depending on the number of candidates running in the primary election and other issues placed on the ballot the Board could be forced to a three-page ballot causing confusion at the polling locations and doubling the ballot costs.

Normal ballot costs for primary & general elections: $60,200.00
$60,200.00

Total Fiscal Note:
$225,200.00 - $295,700.00

Officials from the City of Jefferson City indicated the proposed initiative petition would not have a direct fiscal impact to their city since Cole County conducts elections for the City. Presumably, Cole County could "bill" them for any costs incurred by the County associated with implementing the referenced election requirements.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from the St. Louis Community College indicated this initiative does not appear to have any significant specific cost or cost savings to their college. Indirect cost considerations have not been determined. In particular, if the petition delays or inhibits voting for elected officials for the Community College Districts or increases the cost of elections then it could have a potentially negative impact. Such impact cannot be evaluated at this time.

RE: PETITIONS 2024-013, 2024-014, AND 2024-015

Dear Auditor Galloway,

We are writing on behalf of RepresentUS regarding the ballot petitions officially named 2024-013, 2024-014 and 2024-015, which would bring Final Four open primaries and instant runoff voting ("IRV," sometimes referred to as "ranked choice voting") to Missouri elections. RepresentUs is a national, nonpartisan organization focused on improving America's political system. We work with partners and volunteers across the political spectrum to pass pro-democracy reforms at the state and local level. RepresentUS has helped grassroots campaigns to bring reforms like Final Four and IRV across the country.

In our experience, the costs associated with implementing IRV are often far below what many initially expect, and we expect this trend to hold in Missouri. The vast majority of counties will not need to replace their existing voting machines. According to a comprehensive analysis by the Ranked Choice Voting Resource Center, all but two of Missouri's counties currently have voting machines capable of conducting elections with IRV.¹ Furthermore, it is our understanding that one of those two counties, St. Louis City, is already planning on upgrading its voting systems to models with IRV-capable hardware. This means that the costs of technical implementation for nearly every county in the state would be limited to software upgrades.

For comparison, when Alaska's Division of Elections's released a fiscal note for a ballot measure to implement the same policy as contained in 2024-013, 2024-014 and 2024-015, it determined that 137 machines would have to be replaced at cost of $3,900 each, for a total cost of $534,300.² In the majority of counties that will not need to replace voting machines, however, costs will be more similar to those in Maine, which did not need to upgrade its voting systems.

² Alaska Division of Elections, 19AKBE - Statement of Costs, <https://www.elections.alaska.gov/petitions/19AKBE/19AKBEStatementOfCosts.pdf>. The Division of Elections also estimates the total cost of implementation to be $803,593, including costs for things like voter education ($150,000) and language assistance ($57,416).

When Maine used IRV for the first time in 2018, its Secretary of State reported that the entire cost of statewide implementation that year was $441,804.³

Considering the experiences of other jurisdictions that have adopted IRV, we expect the cost of implementation in Missouri to be fairly modest. Thank you for your time and attention to this matter.

Sincerely,

David O'Brien
Policy Director

RE: PETITIONS 2024-013, 2024-014, and 2024-015

Dear Auditor Galloway,

We are writing on behalf of the Ranked Choice Voting Resource Center regarding the estimated fiscal impact of initiative petitions 2022-049 and 2022-050, which would bring Top 4 open primaries and instant runoff voting (“IRV,” sometimes referred to as “ranked-choice voting” or “RCV”) to Missouri elections. The Ranked Choice Voting Resource Center is a 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization that provides information, research, and tools to teach the public about ranked choice voting. The staff of the Resource Center have decades of election administration experience and experience overseeing ranked choice voting elections at all levels of government. Our nationally recognized center is regarded as the premier ranked choice voting resource for voters, election administrators, policymakers, and candidates.

We recently conducted a statewide analysis of Missouri’s voting equipment in our Missouri RCV Administrative Assessment (<https://bit.ly/RCV-Missouri-2022>). In our analysis, we found that 114 of 116 local election authorities (113 counties and one city) in Missouri have RCV capable equipment: equipment that can now, or after a software update, be used to hold ranked choice voting elections. In these counties, hardware purchases are not necessary to add RCV capability. Software upgrades, however, may be necessary and will need to have their costs negotiated directly with the vendors providing equipment to each local election authority. We do not know how many of these election authorities will need to update their software nor how much it may cost any one authority to make upgrades, so we do not estimate those costs here.

One local election authority (St. Louis City) has legacy voting equipment – equipment at the end of its usable lifespan – and one local election authority (Worth County) hand counts its elections. St. Louis City should replace its legacy voting equipment soon as it is at the end of its usable lifespan. All modern voting equipment available today includes ranked choice voting capability. By replacing that legacy equipment, St. Louis City will also gain ranked choice voting capability.

Worth County can conduct ranked choice voting elections by hand though we suggest using voting equipment to speed up the counting process.

The City of St. Louis has allocated $5,000,000 for new voting machines that are capable of conducting instant run-off elections, and those machines will be in use with or without passage of petitions 2024-013, 2024-014, and 2024-015.

<https://www.stlouis-mo.gov/government/city-laws/board-bills/boardbill.cfm?bbDetail=true&BBIId=14003>. Given that these machines should be in place before any implementation of petitions 2024-013, 2024-014, and 2024-015, we do not include the City of St. Louis in our cost estimate.

A fiscal note for Petition 2022-19 estimated that purchasing a single voting machine would cost $5,000. Based on publicly available information about voting machines used in the state, we estimate that Worth County could add two scanning machines to tabulate RCV elections quickly. At a rate of $5,000 per machine, that will cost approximately $10,000. Worth County could also spend no money and continue to hand count their elections.

Based on this analysis, the fiscal impact of 2024-013, 2024-014, and 2024-015 for purchasing ranked choice voting capable equipment will be between $0 and $10,000 in one-time costs.

Thank you for your consideration of this submission. If you have any questions, please contact the Ranked Choice Voting Resource Center at info@rcvresources.org or 1-833-VOTE-RCV (1-833-868-3728).

RE: PETITIONS 2024-013, 2024-014 AND 2024-015

Dear Auditor Galloway,

I am writing to you today on behalf of Veterans for Political Innovation regarding the estimated fiscal impact of initiative petitions 24-013, 24-014 and 24-015. I am also writing as a licensed Missouri attorney and a concerned Missouri citizen.

Veterans for Political Innovation (VPI) is a national, nonpartisan nonprofit community, based out of Saint Louis, Missouri. VPI is mobilizing veterans and supporters to make politics less toxic through innovations that bring more competition to all our elections. Over the past year, VPI has educated, trained and mobilized hundreds of veterans, in over 35 states, as trusted messengers for nonpartisan reforms such as “Final-4 Voting”—the innovative reform package outlined in these petitions. Part of our mission is to fully enfranchise and empower the approximately 50% of military veterans who do not affiliate or identify with either major political party. Independent voters want more choices in primary elections. With more electoral competition in every district, we will reward common sense problem solvers, once again, and make our campaigns and our politics less toxic.

Initiative petitions 24-013, 24-014 and 24-015 are functionally identical to petitions 2022-051, 2022-052, 2022-060 and 2022-061. If passed, these petitions would modify Missouri election law, so that candidates are chosen via “Final-4 Voting”; that is, top-four, cross-partisan (single ballot) primary elections and instant run-off voting general elections.

Since the fiscal notes for petitions 2022-051, 2022-052, 2022-060, and 2022-061 were completed, even more local election authorities in Missouri have begun using voting machines that can conduct instant run-off elections, including Macon, Bates and Henry Counties.ⁱ

Indeed, a comprehensive analysis conducted by the experts at the nonpartisan Ranked Choice Voting Resource Center shows that only two out of 116 local election authorities in Missouri—St. Louis City and Worth County—have voting machines that are incompatible with instant run-off voting (<https://bit.ly/RCV-Missouri-2022>).

The City of St. Louis has allocated funds for new voting machines that can conduct instant run-off elections, and those machines will be in use with or without passage of petitions 2024-013, 2024-014, and 2024-015. The Board of Alderman appropriated $5,000,000 for new voting equipment in Board Bill Number 206 in May 2022ⁱⁱ.

The only local election authority in Missouri that does not currently have hardware capable of conducting instant run-off elections is Worth County. Worth County has just 1,465 registered voters, and County staff tabulate election results there by hand count. Instant runoff voting elections can also be tabulated by hand with paper ballots.

Together, at least 115 of Missouri's 116 local election authorities will have machines capable of conducting instant run-off voting elections before Missourians even vote on petitions 2024-013, 2024-014, or 2024-015. The exact cost of Worth County's voting machine upgrades is unknown, but very likely less than $15,000ⁱⁱⁱ. Because most local election authorities have already budgeted for regular voting machine software upgrades, any costs associated with software should not be included in this fiscal note.

In conclusion, petitions 2024-013, 2024-014, and 2024-015 would most likely not incur any one-time costs for voting hardware. The costs for upgrading software with existing machines are unknown, but based on other states, they are expected to be quite limited. Any potential one-time costs would likely be offset by future savings due to the cross-partisan primary election only requiring one ballot instead of the current partisan primary system which requires two.

Thank you for your public service, and for your time and consideration of this submission. If you have any questions, please do not hesitate to contact me at: 314.222.0477 or eric@V-pi.org.

Re: Petitions 2024-013, 2024-014, 2024-015

Dear Auditor Galloway:

This letter is in reference to petitions 2024-013, 2024-014, 2024-015 to adopt ranked choice voting (RCV) in Missouri. If passed, these petitions would allow implementation of a top four primary and instant runoff or ranked choice voting elections for the August and November 2026 elections.

I am a Missouri attorney whose practice has focused on election law since 2014. During that time, I represented the Ferguson-Florissant School District in a lawsuit that resulted in adopting cumulative voting. More recently, I represented the City of Eastpointe, Michigan, when they adopted ranked choice voting pursuant to a consent decree with the Department of Justice. Eastpointe has used ranked choice voting in city council races since 2019.

My law firm provides clients with advice on transitioning and implementing new electoral systems. This advice includes statutory and regulatory review and analysis, as well as a review of the technological and practical challenges involved in any transition.

As you know, Missouri has 116 local election authorities ("LEAs"). Of those, 114 LEAs currently maintain RCV ready equipment. That means that each of those counties and/or independent cities already maintain the hardware necessary to run an RCV election.

The City of St. Louis Board of Election Commissioners is one of the state's largest LEAs. Their current equipment is considered legacy equipment. It is outdated and cannot run an RCV election. However, the City's Board of Alderman provided a $5 million allotment in FY2022 to purchase a new voting system. This much-needed update will likely occur before voters decide on whether to adopt RCV in Missouri. While there are multiple vendors the City may choose to purchase from, any new system will have the capability to run an RCV election. Thus, the City of St. Louis' Board of Election Commissioners will be able to implement RCV without any additional cost to taxpayers.

After the City of St. Louis purchases new equipment, Worth County, Missouri will be the only LEA without RCV-ready equipment. While Worth County had previously reported using legacy equipment too old to run an RCV election, it now reports using hand-counts for paper ballots. (See, <https://verifiedvoting.org/verifier/#mode/navigate/map/ppEquip/mapType/normal/year/2022/state/29>)

Worth County has a population of just 1,465 registered voters. That small number of voters would allow for hand-counts, even in RCV elections. For that reason, Worth County does not need to purchase additional hardware and can implement RCV without any additional cost to taxpayers.

Many, but not all, of the state's LEAs will need to upgrade their software. Some voting system vendors include these costs with their annual fees. Others do not. The costs for software upgrades will vary based on the vendor, the date of the hardware, and the LEA's individual, negotiated contract. As such, any additional cost to taxpayers for software upgrades are undetermined.

Aside from hardware and software, many LEAs will be able to save taxpayer dollars in running a non-partisan primary. As it stands, LEAs must print separate ballots for the Democrat, Republican, Libertarian, and Constitution Parties. Separate ballots will no longer be necessary under petitions 2024-013, 2024-014, 2024-015. Thus, LEAs will save an undetermined amount on printing and formatting costs.

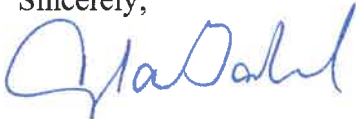

Finally, petitions 2024-013, 2024-014, 2024-015 require the state to conduct a voter education campaign. The cost for voter education campaigns can vary dramatically. Typically, these campaigns include a website, promotional material, candidate education, and/or town-hall meetings. The state of Alaska recently implemented ranked choice voting in 2022. The fiscal note estimated the cost for the education campaign at $150,000.

Based on this analysis, taxpayers should not incur additional costs to purchase hardware to run ranked choice voting in Missouri. The cost for software and a voter education campaign is estimated at $150,000 - $250,000.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

RE: Petitions 2024-013, 2024-014, and 2024-015

Dear Auditor Galloway,

I write today regarding the estimated fiscal impact of initiative petitions 2024-013, 2024-014, and 2024-015, three bills that would implement a new final-four primary and ranked-choice voting general election scheme to elections conducted in Missouri.

I am Dr. Sam Wang, professor at Princeton University and director of the Electoral Innovation Lab. The Electoral Innovation Lab takes an engineering-like approach to democracy repair. We use theory and analysis to anticipate how problems in representation, engagement, and depolarization can be solved before they become widespread. This comprehensive approach is used to develop policy reforms, inform legal scholarship and academic research. Ultimately, we seek to test proposed policies: legislative actions, election rules, redistricting optimization, and community strategies. In recent years we have applied our investigational methods to voting reforms, including ranked-choice voting in Maine and Alaska.

Many other jurisdictions have experience implementing ranked-choice voting systems and have done thorough fiscal impact analyses thereof, and can provide some evidence of costs should Missouri implement this voting system.

Missouri implementation costs are potentially under $200,000

A comprehensive analysis conducted by the experts at the Ranked Choice Voting Resource Center (<https://bit.ly/RCV-Missouri-2022>) shows that only two out of 116 local election authorities in Missouri, St. Louis City and Worth County, have voting machines that are incompatible with ranked-choice voting methods:

As a worst-case scenario, the fiscal impact of 2024-013, 2024-014, and 2024-015 would arise from replacing voting machines in the two jurisdictions currently lacking machines. In the larger jurisdiction, St. Louis City, machine upgrades are already planned even without any new laws, and will likely be done by the time 2024-013, 2024-014, and 2024-015 would take effect, after the 2024 cycle. The remaining need is in Worth County, whose population is less than 2,000. In Worth County, tabulation could be done by two machines at a cost of approximately $10,000. Software upgrades in other counties are part of their normal maintenance costs. Additional costs may still be modest: at a cost of $1,000 per county, the necessary software above and beyond already-planned upgrades would still be below $200,000. Countervailing to these costs is the fact that there will be an unknown amount of savings in future years because the primary election will require only one ballot instead of one for each partisan primary, as is now the case.

Implementation costs in other states: $400,000 to $600,000

Worst-case costs can be calculated using the experience of other states. Maine implemented ranked-choice voting in 2018. The state analyzed the costs of implementing the new system during the first year and found that the total fiscal impact to the state was $441,804, the largest portion of which was actually the requirement to print a separate ballot to run a referendum measure on an unrelated matter.¹ Voters in Alaska recently approved similar voting reforms to those under consideration in Missouri. The state's official estimate of costs for needed ballot tabulation equipment was only $534,300.²

Re: 2024-013, 2024-014, 2024-015

Dear Auditor Galloway,

FairVote is a nonpartisan, nonprofit organization and leading advocate and analyst of ranked choice voting since its inception in 1992. I have been closely involved in a number of implementations of ranked choice voting over the past two decades. Ranked choice voting is the fastest growing election reform in the nation, used in 2021 and 2022 in more than 40 cities and states, including for all of Alaska's federal and state elections, Maine's primary and federal elections, and New York City primary elections.

Initiative petitions 2024-013, 2024-014, and 2024-015 are similar to petitions 2022-051, 2022-052, 2022-060, and 2022-061. If passed, these petitions would modify Missouri election law so that candidates are chosen via top four primaries and ranked choice, or instant run-off, elections.

The fiscal impact for this change could be as little as $10,000, as explained in this letter.

First, estimates of the costs of implementation of ranked choice voting often skew high before enactment and implementation, and actual costs will depend on decisions made by election officials. For example, the official fiscal note from Maine election officials before and after its voters passed ranked choice voting in 2016 was more than $1.5 million. The actual costs in the June 2018 statewide primary elections for governor and other state and congressional primaries were less than $100,000.

When North Carolina election officials learned in August 2010 they had to run a statewide ranked choice election in November 2010 for a judicial vacancy election with 13 candidates, they did so within their existing budget.

Second, while we strongly support voter education as a general matter, any taxpayer costs associated with voter education are not intrinsic to adoption of ranked choice voting. Some jurisdictions like Maine have adopted and implemented ranked choice voting with virtually no extra money spent on voter education, and voters in those jurisdictions have handled the new system very well, with 82% of voters from a poll released in November 2022 in Maine's 2nd congressional district finding that ranked choice voting is "easy" or "very easy."

Third, the fiscal notes and public comment for petitions 2022-051, 2022-052, 2022-060, and 2022-061 showed that the vast majority of Missouri's local election authorities already have voting equipment that can be used for ranked choice voting / instant run-off elections. Since the fiscal notes for the 2022 petitions were completed, additional election authorities have begun using voting machines that are capable of conducting instant run-off elections:

- Macon County now has ES&S DS200/DS450/ExpressVote machines, which are capable of conducting instant run-off / ranked-choice voting elections.
- Bates County now has Unisyn OpenElect OVO/OpenElect OVI machines, which are capable of conducting instant run-off / ranked-choice voting elections.
- Henry County now has Unisyn OpenElect FVS/OpenElect Freedom Vote Tablet machines, which are capable of conducting instant run-off / ranked-choice voting elections.

Together, at least 115 of Missouri's 116 local election authorities will have machines capable of conducting instant run-off elections before Missourians are able to vote on petitions 2024-013, 2024-014, or 2024-015.

The City of St. Louis has allocated funds for new voting machines that are capable of conducting instant run-off elections, and those machines will be in use with or without passage of petitions 2024-013, 2024-014, and 2024-015. The Board of Alderman appropriated \$5,000,000 for new voting equipment in Board Bill Number 206 in May 2022.

Fourth, apart from ongoing upgrades in St. Louis, the only local election authority in Missouri that does not currently have hardware capable of conducting instant run-off elections is Worth County. Worth County has just 1,465 registered voters, and County staff tabulate election results there by hand count. Ranked choice voting elections can also be tabulated by hand with paper ballots.

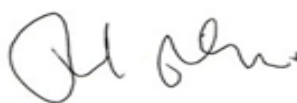

The above-cited updates demonstrate petitions 2024-013, 2024-014, and 2024-015 would require limited costs for voting hardware. Costs for upgrading software with existing machines are variable based on election system vendors, but based on other states, are expected to be quite limited.

We concur with estimates from the Ranked Choice Voting Resource Center that the fiscal impact of 2024-013, 2024-014, and 2024-015 for purchasing ranked choice voting capable equipment will be between $0 and $10,000 in one-time costs depending on whether Worth County purchases equipment or conducts hand counts. Additional resources to consider include:

- The nonpartisan, independent organization Verified Voting has a publicly-available database available, which details the voting machines in use across all Missouri counties.
- Additional information from the Ranked Choice Voting Resource Center about the counties which already have ranked-choice voting-ready machines can be found here.

If you have any questions about this letter, or if we can serve as a resource to you for ranked choice voting information and implementation, I can be reached at rr@fairvote.org or 301-270-4616.

Sincerely yours,

Rob Richie

Be it resolved by the people of the state of Missouri that the Constitution be amended:

Article VIII, Section 3 of the Constitution is amended to read as follows:

Section 3. (a) All elections by the people shall be by ballot or by any mechanical method prescribed by law.

(b) Effective for elections conducted after January 1, 2025, there shall be no primary elections for the offices of Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Secretary of State, Attorney General, State Treasurer, State Auditor, United States Senator, U. S. Representative, State Senator, State Representative, and Circuit Judge. All candidates for these offices shall be listed on the ballot, without party designation, at the general election.

(c) The ballot shall be simple and easy to understand and shall allow a voter to rank a minimum of five candidates for each office in order of preference. A voter may include duly registered write-in candidates among their ranked choices for each office.

(d) The Secretary of State shall tabulate the votes for each office according to the following method: Tabulation proceeds in sequential rounds. In the first round, only first-choice votes are tabulated. If a candidate receives a majority of the first-choice votes (fifty percent of the total votes cast, plus one vote) that candidate is elected. If no candidate receives a majority of the first-choice votes cast, the candidate with the lowest number of first-choice votes is eliminated and the candidates listed as the second choice on ballots cast for the candidate being eliminated are distributed among the "continuing candidates". In each subsequent round, the candidate who has the fewest "cumulative votes" is eliminated. In each subsequent round, the highest remaining choice for a continuing candidate on each ballot for the eliminated candidate shall be redistributed, in ranked order, as needed, among the continuing candidates. Ballots that do not rank any continuing candidate, that contain votes for more than one candidate at the same ranking, or in which a voter has left a ranking blank once that ranking would have been utilized, will be "exhausted ballots" and will not be counted in that round or subsequent rounds. This process is repeated in as many rounds as needed until one candidate wins election by receiving at least fifty percent plus one of the total cumulative votes.

(e) Election officials shall determine a random selection algorithm, prior to tabulation, to resolve ties between candidates. If a tie occurs at any point in the tabulation procedure and tabulation cannot proceed until the tie is resolved, then the random selection algorithm shall resolve the tie.

(f) All election officers shall be sworn or affirmed not to disclose how any voter voted; provided, that in cases of contested elections, grand jury investigations and in the trial of all civil or criminal cases in which the violation of any law relating to elections, including nominating elections, is under investigation or at issue, such officers may be required to testify and the ballots cast may be opened, examined, counted, and received as evidence.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated this initiative petition has no impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated this petition, if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated this proposal creates no direct obligations or requirements to their department that would result in a fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated they would not anticipate a direct fiscal impact from this proposal.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact for the initiative petition 24-012 proposing to amend Article VIII.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety - Office of the Director indicated no impact for their department, Director's Office.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Governor's office indicated this proposal relating to ranked voting does not fiscally impact their office.

Officials from the Missouri House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact pertaining to Initiative Petition 24-012.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated the proposed initiative petition does not have an impact on their department/Missouri Highways and Transportation Commission.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to ranked voting does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated there is no fiscal impact on the courts.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated this petition would institute a policy of nonpartisan ranked-choice voting to elect all state-level officials in lieu of a partisan primary and general election.

This would require all voting machines statewide to either be coded to accept ranked-choice voting (which may require reprogramming) or to be replaced with new machines which do allow ranked-choice voting. As of the 2020 voting systems survey conducted by their office, local election authorities reported that they possessed 5728 machines. The estimated cost for each new voting machine is $5,000. The total cost to the state will vary depending on the number of machines which are ready to accept ranked-choice votes or can be reprogrammed to do so. However, using total replacement of all machines as a maximum cost, ranked-choice voting may result in a total impact to general revenue ranging from $0 up to $28,640,000. They may be required to fund this mandated cost under Article X, Section 21 of the Missouri Constitution.

Since these elections would not include a primary, it may be that the state does not have anything on the ballot for an August primary election (the exception would be if any special elections were ordered for candidates or ballot measures). In this case the state would not be responsible for paying proportional costs of such an election, making for a possible cost savings of up to $7 million each odd-numbered fiscal year starting in FY 2027, based on the actual cost of holding the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

However, this may be partially offset by additional costs for ballot printing and machine programming at the general elections. With all candidates appearing on the general election ballot, it is possible that large slates of candidates in enough races would require the use of oversize ballots or possibly even a multiple-page ballot (which may require further machine programming to handle such ballots). The cost of such measures is unknown at this time.

Each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In fiscal year (FY) 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. The SOS estimates $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition 24-012 will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated they estimate the following additional costs as a result of this petition:

- ~$25,000 one-time outlay to update the voter machine counting software and ballot layout fields.
- ~$12,000 in additional ballots for all parties to vote on all State and Federal (except President) level candidates, per General even-year elections.

In sum, one-time estimate of $25,000 and ongoing costs of $12,000 per every even year.

Officials from St. Louis County indicated this measure would require a $50,000 software update for the St. Louis County Board of Elections.

Officials from Greene County indicated that in reviewing initiative petition 24-012 it has been determined there will be an increased cost to their county if voters vote to amend Article VIII with the proposed language in this initiative petition.

There will continue to be a primary election at the county level for county offices. The state now pays its share of proportional cost for statewide primary and general elections. The additional primary cost at the county level will not include additional cost for a ranked-choice primary. However, since there will be no statewide primary, if this initiative petition were to become law, the county will bear the full cost of the primary election.

Primary: $431,634.47 - $215,817.23 = -$215,817.24

General: $450,665.80 - $455,804.63 = - $5,138.83

Total Cost Increase for both Elections: $220,956.07

The county will have an estimated increased cost of $220,956.07 for both the primary and general election.

The cost difference to administer the general election is in the coding cost to tabulate a ranked-choice election. In addition, the November 2020 General Election costs were used, due to the final cost of November 2022 not being finalized at this time.

Officials from the City of Jefferson City indicated they see no immediate fiscal impact on the local level as a result of this initiative petition due to the fact that local elections are not covered by the legislation. There might be indirect costs if a local jurisdiction is responsible for prosecuting an old offender or if there is a need for an offender to serve jail time.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this proposed amendment would have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact to their college.

Officials from the St. Louis Community College indicated this initiative will not have a significant specific cost or cost savings to their College. Indirect cost considerations have not been determined.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated they believe this will have a fiscal impact of anywhere from $0 - 50,000 because it is unknown if they would need to pay for new software or to use open-sourced software to adapt to ranked-choice voting.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners indicated if this initiative petition becomes law, new software would need to be purchased at $25,000 and staff would need to be retrained at $10,000 (one-time costs). The election day ballot would go to two pages due to the increased length of the ballot (200,000 times 50 cents a ballot) $100,000 (costs for every general election). Legal Notices would be placed in all Kansas City area newspapers $30,000 (one-time costs). Literature explaining rank choice voting would be printed and mailed to all voters at $100,000 (one-time costs). Also election day judges would need to be trained at $30,000 (one-time costs). Total cost to implement this new law would be roughly $195,000 for one-time costs and $100,000 ongoing costs for every general election.

Officials from the Board of Election Commissioners City of St. Louis indicated this petition would require the City Election Board to have the capability to conduct ranked choice voting. While their current voting system does not have this capability, they have been given funding to purchase a new system. Any system they would acquire would have this capability (though one vendor's current system allows three candidates; another vendor's standard software package does not include ranked choice but allows for the separate purchase of a license for an additional fee which they would not acquire unless forced to do so).

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated this should have no hard financial costs as their existing equipment can handle ranked choice voting. There would be some unknown costs for initial setup and training.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated the current version of their tabulation software does not support rank choice voting for five selections.

There is currently no software certified by the Election Assistance Commission (EAC) to support a five-candidate selection. If the software were approved by the EAC an upgrade would need to be purchased by the their Election Board.

There is currently no funding source available for this purchase.

Be it enacted by the people of the state of Missouri:

Two new sections of the Missouri Revised Statutes are hereby enacted, to be known as sections 286.131 and 143.012, to read as follows:

286.131. 1. A program to be known as “The Renewable Energy Project” is hereby created to be administered by the Missouri Department of Labor and Industrial Relations.

2. Funding for The Renewable Energy Project will be provided through revenues from a tax on long-term capital gains and qualified dividends, as provided for in Section 143.012. Additional funds may be solicited and accepted through grants from the federal government or other sources and from voluntary contributions.

3. The Missouri Department of Labor and Industrial Relations shall, within one (1) calendar year of the effective date of this section, promulgate rules necessary for the administration of this section, including methods for the expenditure of the funds collected pursuant to section 143.012 and other sources in a manner that increases the percentage of electricity generated by wind and solar sources within the state of Missouri as rapidly as possible.

4. Workers hired through this program may form or join a union to negotiate pay and benefits and may be employed directly by the state of Missouri or by privately-owned businesses through contracts with the state of Missouri.

5. The locations of any facilities leased or constructed as part of, or in support of, The Renewable Energy Project will be selected with an emphasis on creating jobs in economically depressed areas of the state of Missouri.

6. Until such time as at least 90 percent of the electricity generated in Missouri is generated from clean, renewable sources, funds collected pursuant to this section and section 143.012 shall be used solely for the purposes of employing workers, purchasing or leasing the resources and capital equipment, and leasing, constructing, and/or renovating the facilities necessary, to manufacture, sell, and/or install solar panels, wind turbines, and/or their component parts.

7. Once the state of Missouri is producing 90% or more of its electricity from clean, renewable sources, the funds generated by the tax on long-term capital gains and qualified dividends and from other sources may be used, as directed by appropriate legislation, for the construction and maintenance of state-owned highways and bridges or other infrastructure projects.

8. All subsections and all clauses of this Section, and the phrases, and the words within them, are severable. If any of the provisions within them are found by a court of competent jurisdiction to be unconstitutional or unconstitutionally enacted or invalid, the remainder of those provisions shall remain valid and the application of such provisions shall not be affected thereby.

143.012. 1. Beginning with the 2025 calendar year, a tax on capital gains and qualified dividends will be imposed, with the funds collected dedicated to providing funding for The Renewable Energy Project. The amount of the tax will be the difference between the dollar amount of taxes paid to the federal government by each taxpayer on long-term capital gains and qualified dividends earned, and the dollar amount of the taxes that would have been paid had the capital gains or qualified dividends been taxed as marginal ordinary income, based on each taxpayer’s federal tax bracket.

2. Any taxpayer whose total family income is less than 110 percent of the dollar amount of the poverty threshold, based on the poverty guidelines published by the Department of Health and Human Services, is exempt from this tax.

3. All subsections and all clauses of this Section, and the phrases, and the words within them, are severable. If any of the provisions within them are found by a court of competent jurisdiction to be unconstitutional or unconstitutionally enacted or invalid, the remainder of those provisions shall remain valid and the application of such provisions shall not be affected thereby.

Description

This proposal would amend Chapters 286 and 143 of the Revised Statutes of Missouri.

The amendment is to be voted on in November 2024.

Public comments and other input

The State Auditor's office requested input from the Attorney General's office, the Department of Agriculture, the Department of Economic Development, the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education, the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development, the Department of Health and Senior Services, the Department of Commerce and Insurance, the Department of Mental Health, the Department of Natural Resources, the Department of Corrections, the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations, the Department of Revenue, the Department of Public Safety, the Missouri Department of the National Guard, the Department of Social Services, the Governor's office, the Missouri House of Representatives, the Department of Conservation, the Department of Transportation, the Office of Administration, the Office of State Courts Administrator, the Missouri Senate, the Secretary of State's office, the Office of the State Public Defender, the State Treasurer's office, Adair County, Boone County, Callaway County, Cass County, Clay County, Cole County, Greene County, Jackson County, Jasper County, St. Charles County, St. Louis County, Taney County, the City of Cape Girardeau, the City of Columbia, the City of Jefferson, the City of Joplin, the City of Kansas City, the City of Kirksville, the City of Mexico, the City of Raymore, the City of St. Joseph, the City of St. Louis, the City of Springfield, the City of Union, the City of Wentzville, the City of West Plains, Cape Girardeau 63 School District, Hannibal 60 School District, Malta Bend R-V School District, Mehlville School District, Wellsville-Middletown R-1 School District, State Technical College of Missouri, Metropolitan Community College, University of Missouri, St. Louis Community College, and the Missouri Joint Municipal Electric Utility Commission.

Assumptions

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated no fiscal impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact as a result of this legislation.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated they have determined there is no fiscal impact upon their department.

Officials the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated this initiative petition has no impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated that this petition, if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated this proposal creates no direct obligations or requirements to their department that would result in a fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated they would not anticipate a direct fiscal impact from this proposal.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated there is no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated this petition would create the "The Renewable Energy Project" program which would be administered by their department. The program would increase the percentage of electricity generated by wind and solar sources within the state of Missouri.

Their department estimates it would need additional full-time employees (FTE) and ongoing costs to set up and administer the program. Per discussion with the Office of Administration Information Technology Services Division (OA-ITSD), they do not believe a new computer system would be necessary for administering, monitoring, and reporting on the program created by this petition, however if one were necessary OA-ITSD estimates the cost at $32,422 for initial creation with ongoing support costs of $6,647 in FY25.

REVENUE

They defer to the Department of Revenue regarding the estimated revenue collections if these provisions are implemented.

A tax on long-term capital gains and qualified dividends additional funds may be solicited and accepted through grants from the federal government or other sources and from voluntary contributions. Their department defers to the Department of Revenue regarding the estimated amount of revenue to be collected from this capital gains tax.

COST

They estimate the total known cost to develop, administer, and maintain the "The Renewable Energy Project" program to be over $548,000 per year with the initial start-up year costing $573,000 (of which, $52,000 is initial/onetime costs). In estimating, the total costs of the program, they made the following assumptions and estimates.

The program would require 3 full-time specialist and 1 supervisor to facilitate the duties of employing workers, purchasing or leasing resources and capital equipment, and oversight of leasing, constructing, and/or installation of solar panels, wind turbines, and/or their component parts, 1 Attorney for review of contracts and leasing or other legal duties as necessary for the program, and 1 part-time paralegal to assist the attorney. Total salaries for staffing are estimated at $255,500 for fiscal year (FY) 2025 with benefits estimated at $164,642. For FY 2027, these salaries are estimated a $260,363, with benefits estimated at $180,803.

Telecom, computer, and office equipment and telecomm-mobile devices are estimated to cost $51,622 for FY 2025 and are initial/onetime costs. Ongoing expenses for operation of services is estimated to total $101,193 including building lease cost, janitorial services, fuel and utilities, general supplies, and other services for FY 2025 and $106,317 by FY 2027. Their estimates do not include the cost for the development of a system to administer, monitor, and report on the program. Per discussion with OA-ITSD, the data available by the United States Energy Information Administration would be duplicative if they were to create a system. However, if it were determined a separate system would be necessary the cost would be $32,422 with ongoing costs beginning at $6,647.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated this initiative petition (IP) would create The Renewable Energy Project (TREP) to be administered by the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations (DOLIR), to be generally used in employing workers and purchasing or leasing the equipment/facilities necessary to produce, sell, or install solar panels, wind turbines, or their component parts. TREP would be funded by a new tax on individuals (and estates/trusts) on long-term capital gains and qualified dividends.

The IP will materially impact their department by requiring that it administer the new tax on long-term capital gains and qualified dividends.

They estimate that using 2020 tax year data, the most recent complete year available, this proposal could have generated an additional $839,481,551 in revenues. They also note that actual revenues generated could fluctuate significantly from year to year depending on the amount of capital gains distributed.

In order to aid in the collection of the new tax, they would need to add a new worksheet in the MO-1040 instructions and line on the MO 1040 form. It should be noted that there is a separate schedule that is added to the federal 1040 in order for taxpayers to calculate the amount of tax owed on capital gains. This proposal would require those same taxpayers to recalculate their capital gains tax a second time. Adding this information to the forms, computer programs, and website is estimated to cost $20,000 (one-time costs).

This proposal requires their department to collect this new tax but the proposal did not delineate a fund to deposit the revenue into. Therefore, they will assume this additional tax will be deposited into general revenue.

They note there are several concerns with this proposal. Those concerns are delineated below:

Section 143.012.1 – Tax Imposed at Annual Intervals?

Section 143.012 states that a tax is imposed on capital gains and qualified dividends, and suggests that it is an annual tax, but does not expressly specify this. It would be preferable to clarify that this tax is imposed "[f]or all tax years beginning on or after January 1, 2025" or something similar.

Section 143.012.1 – Tax Imposed on Who?

Section 143.012 states that a tax is imposed on capital gains and qualified dividends, but does not substantially specify which taxpayers are subject to this tax other than to set a threshold by reference to total family income and by referring to them as "taxpayer[s]". It appears the intent is to impose this on all resident and nonresident individuals (and estates/trusts) who Missouri is constitutionally able to tax. It would promote clarity and administrability to further specify to whom this new tax applies.

Section 143.012.1 – Tax Based on Federal Taxes Paid:

The IP specifies that the amount of tax newly imposed on a taxpayer is equal to "the difference between the dollar amount of taxes paid to the federal government [...] on long term capital gains and qualified dividends earned, and the dollar amount of the taxes that would have been paid [had they been federally taxed as marginal ordinary income.]" (Emphasis added). In other words, the calculation of the new Missouri tax depends on federal taxes paid, not just federal tax imposed.

Therefore, if a taxpayer fails to pay any taxes on capital gains and qualified dividends to the federal government, despite owing federal taxes on them, then, by its terms, this provision appears to require a Missouri tax payment equal to the full amount of federal income tax that would have been imposed upon the long term capital gains and qualified dividends earned, at the rate for ordinary income.

Section 143.012.2 – "total family income"

The IP refers to "total family income", but does not define that term or give any state or federal statutory reference to assist in defining that term. If this term is ambiguous and does not have a meaning in the Internal Revenue Code, then Missouri case law generally interprets tax exemptions narrowly against the taxpayer.

If the intent is to allow the DHSS to determine what constitutes "total family income" in its publications, this would ideally be expressed as an authorization for DHSS to make such a determination of total family income instead of merely publishing poverty guidelines.

Section 286.131.6 & 286.131.7 – "clean, renewable sources"

The IP refers elsewhere in Section 286.131 to solar and wind sources of electricity, but in Sections 286.131.6 and 286.131.7, it refers to "clean, renewable sources" of electricity. A different meaning could be suggested by the use of different terms within the same statute. It is unclear what exactly would qualify as "clean, renewable sources" for this purpose, if this phrase is meant to be broader than solar and wind energy, and further specificity would be appropriate. Alternatively, if this phrase is meant to refer only to solar and wind energy, it would be preferable for that to be clarified – perhaps by the inclusion of a definition.

Section 143.012 – Constitutional Concern – Foreign Commerce Clause, Dormant Commerce Clause, and/or Privileges & Immunities Clause:

If challenged, the new tax under Section 143.012 is likely to be found unconstitutional, at least in part, on the basis of the U.S. Constitution's Foreign Commerce Clause and the U.S. Supreme Court's Dormant Commerce Clause jurisprudence, the Privileges & Immunities Clause of the U.S. Constitution, and perhaps some other grounds.

This is because, by its terms, the new tax is based on the capital gains and qualified dividends of nonresident individuals without apportioning or otherwise limiting the nonresident individual's capital gains or qualified dividends to Missouri sources, and nonresidents may argue that it is therefore discriminatory against nonresident Missouri taxpayers. (By contrast, Missouri residents at least receive an income tax credit for income tax imposed by another state.) Cf. S. Dakota v. Wayfair, Inc., 138 S. Ct. 2080, 2091 (2018) (Dormant Commerce Clause doctrine prohibits taxes from discriminating against interstate commerce, and taxes must be fairly related to the services the state provides); Lunding v. N.Y. Tax Appeals Tribune, 522 U.S. 287 (1998) (alimony deduction for residents, but not for nonresidents, was found unconstitutional); Comptroller of Treasury of Maryland v. Wynne, 575 U.S. 542 (2015) (applying Dormant Commerce Clause analysis to Maryland's personal income tax scheme).

Officials from the Department of Public Safety - Office of the Director indicated no impact for their department, Director's Office.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated no impact for their department.

Officials from the Governor's office indicated this proposal does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Missouri House of Representatives indicated no direct fiscal impact to their office.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated no adverse fiscal impact to their department would be expected because of this proposal.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated this initiative petition is not projected to have a fiscal impact to their department/Missouri Highways and Transportation Commission.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to renewable energy projects does not financially impact their office.

This proposal would create a new program to be called the "Renewable Energy Project." Funding for this program is to be used to increase renewable energy generation in Missouri. Once 90 percent of the energy generated in Missouri comes from renewable sources, the newly created tax revenues in Section 143.012 are to be used by MoDOT for infrastructure projects.

Section 143.012 would levy a new tax on capital gains beginning with calendar year 2025. The Office of Administration Division of Budget and Planning (OABP) notes that this proposal does not specify whether the capital gains tax would be levied on individuals, businesses, and/or corporations. The OABP assumes that the new tax would be levied on all Missouri taxpayers.

The newly created tax is to be the difference between federal taxes paid on capital gains and the amount of federal taxes that would have been paid, had the capital gains been taxed as ordinary income. The OABP notes that capital gains held for less than a year are already taxed as ordinary income. Therefore, the new tax would only apply to long-term capital gains.

OABP further notes that this proposal does not state where the additional revenues are to be deposited for use by the newly created program. Therefore, OABP assumes that all revenues generated under this proposal will be deposited into the state general revenue fund.

Using 2020 tax year data, the most recent complete year available, OABP estimates that this proposal could have generated an additional $839,481,551 in revenues. OABP notes that actual revenues generated could fluctuate significantly from year to year depending on the amount of capital gains claimed.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated there is no fiscal impact on the courts.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In fiscal year (FY) 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. They estimate $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no fiscal impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated they estimate no costs or savings from this petition.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county for this initiative petition.

Officials from St. Louis County indicated this initiative proposal has no known cost impact on their county.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this proposed amendment would have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact to their college.

The State Auditor's office did not receive a response from the Attorney General's office, Adair County, Boone County, Callaway County, Cass County, Cole County, Jackson County, Jasper County, St. Charles County, Taney County, the City of Cape Girardeau, the City of Columbia, the City of Jefferson, the City of Joplin, the City of Kirksville, the City of Mexico, the City of Raymore, the City of St. Joseph, the City of St. Louis, the City of Springfield, the City of Union, the City of Wentzville, the City of West Plains, Cape Girardeau 63 School District, Hannibal 60 School District, Malta Bend R-V School District, Mehlville School District, Wellsville Middletown R-1 School District, State Technical College of Missouri, University of Missouri, St. Louis Community College, and the Missouri Joint Municipal Electric Utility Commission.

Fiscal Note Summary

State governmental entities estimate initial costs of $72,000, ongoing costs of at least $548,000 annually, and ongoing revenues of $839 million annually. Local governmental entities estimate no costs or savings.

Be it enacted by the people of the state of Missouri:

One new section of the Revised Missouri Statutes is enacted, to be known as section 192.012, to read as follows:

192.012. 1. "The Missouri Health Care Cooperative" (hereinafter referred to as "MHCC") is hereby created within the department of health and senior services to cover the cost of health care for citizens of Missouri who choose to become members of the cooperative.

2. The MHCC shall be administered by the Director of the Department of Health and Senior Services. The department of health and senior services shall promulgate rules necessary for the administration of this section.

3. The state of Missouri is authorized to issue bonds, if necessary, to cover start-up costs for the MHCC.

4. Memberships in the MHCC shall be available to take effect on January 1, 2026.

5. Enrollment in the MHCC shall be voluntary and limited to citizens of the state of Missouri. Any member who removes her or his primary residence shall have the option of remaining a member through the end of that calendar year.

6. Membership dues shall be based on a percentage of the "taxable income" of each member as shown on federal tax returns. The percentage shall be the same for all members. Separate membership dues shall be collected for spouses when filing a combined return. Any dependents claimed on a member's federal tax return shall also be members of the MHCC.

7. The percentage to be applied to the taxable income of members in determining the amount of membership dues shall be set by the Director of the Department of Health and Senior Services.

8. The MHCC shall be revenue neutral. The percentage of incomes established for determining the amount of membership dues shall be set at a level that will ensure that revenues are sufficient to cover all costs, including amounts paid out for the health care expenses of members; all administrative expenses; and any funds needed to pay the interest, and repay the principal when due, on any bonds issued to fund start-up costs for MHCC. The percentage of incomes used to determine membership dues shall be set no higher than necessary to maintain the revenue neutral status of the MHCC and to maintain a reserve fund sufficient to ensure that health care providers will be reimbursed promptly for services provided.

9. Membership dues shall be paid or collected monthly. Dues shall be based on each member's income from their most recent tax return, or on the estimated income for that year, if a member's income is expected to vary significantly from the previous year.

10. After a member has filed a federal tax return for each calendar year, the amount they paid in membership dues shall be adjusted based on their actual taxable income for that year. Amounts due from each member, or to be refunded to each member, after that adjustment is calculated shall be due from, or paid to, each member on or before June 15th of each year.

11. All treatments and procedures covered by Medicare or Medicaid shall be covered through the MHCC. Only those treatments and procedures covered by Medicare or Medicaid shall be covered through the MHCC.

12. The amounts paid to health care providers for procedures and services to members shall be equal to the amounts paid to health care providers by Medicare and/or Medicaid.

13. All subsections and all clauses of this statute, and the phrases, and the words within them, are severable. If any of the provisions within them are found by a court of competent jurisdiction to be unconstitutional or invalid, the remainder of those provisions shall remain valid and the application of such provisions shall not be affected thereby.

Description

This proposal would amend Chapter 192 of the Revised Statutes of Missouri.

Public comments and other input

The State Auditor's office requested input from the Attorney General's office, the Department of Agriculture, the Department of Economic Development, the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education, the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development, the Department of Health and Senior Services, the Department of Commerce and Insurance, the Department of Mental Health, the Department of Natural Resources, the Department of Corrections, the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations, the Department of Revenue, the Department of Public Safety, the Missouri Department of the National Guard, the Department of Social Services, the Governor's office, the Missouri House of Representatives, the Department of Conservation, the Department of Transportation, the Office of Administration, the Office of State Courts Administrator, the Missouri Senate, the Secretary of State's office, the Office of the State Public Defender, the State Treasurer's office, Adair County, Boone County, Callaway County, Cass County, Clay County, Cole County, Greene County, Jackson County, Jasper County, St. Charles County, St. Louis County, Taney County, the City of Cape Girardeau, the City of Columbia, the City of Jefferson, the City of Joplin, the City of Kansas City, the City of Kirksville, the City of Mexico, the City of Raymore, the City of St. Joseph, the City of St. Louis, the City of Springfield, the City of Union, the City of Wentzville, the City of West Plains, Cape Girardeau 63 School District, Hannibal 60 School District, Malta Bend R-V School District, Mehlville School District, Wellsville-Middletown R-1 School District, State Technical College of Missouri, Metropolitan Community College, University of Missouri, and St. Louis Community College.

Assumptions

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact as a result of this legislation.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated they have determined there is no fiscal impact upon their department.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated Section 192.012 of the proposed initiative creates a new health insurance program, The Missouri Health Care Cooperative (MHCC), with oversight by the Department of Health and Senior Services (DHSS). MHCC is to be available by January 1, 2026, which is six months of fiscal year (FY) 2026.

Their department is unable to determine the number of individuals who would participate in The Missouri Health Care Cooperative (MHCC). In addition, the premium rates charged by MHCC could be affected by items such as: (1) costs for covered services, (2) the scope of benefits that are included, (3) the plan's cost-sharing requirements, and (4) the health status of the plan's enrollees. Also, the MHCC program oversight responsibilities and costs would be directly impacted by the size of the program (i.e., number of participants, list of covered services, etc.). The Office of Administration could issue bonds for startup costs and to cover initial shortages. Their department is not able to determine the amount of startup cost, premium rates, etc. They do not administer a similar program of any kind, so significant unknown staffing or contractual costs would be necessary. Due to the numerous unknown factors, they are submitting an Unknown Expense equal to Unknown Revenue (Revenue Neutral-zero impact) fiscal note.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated this petition, if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated this proposal creates no direct obligations or requirements to their department that would result in a fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated they would not anticipate a direct fiscal impact from this proposal.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact for the Initiative petition 24-010 proposing to amend Chapter 192, RSMo.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated this initiative petition (IP) would create the Missouri Health Care Cooperative (MHCC), to be administered by the Department of Health and Senior Services (DHSS). The MHCC would be funded by membership dues paid by members, and the amount of membership dues would be determined by a percentage (set by the Director of DHSS) of a taxpayer's taxable income shown on their federal income tax return.

So long as this program is exclusively administered by the MHCC, this proposal would not materially impact their department.

They note there are several concerns with this proposal. Those concerns are delineated below:

Section 192.012.6 – membership dues based on taxable income as shown on federal tax returns:

This proposal does not require any citizen to provide a copy of their "taxable income" to DHSS for the calculation. They note that due to the confidentiality laws in Missouri, their department would be unable to provide this information to the DHSS.

This proposal requires the "taxable income" as shown on federal tax returns. However, it does not specify which federal tax returns. Is it the member's individual income tax return, their corporate return, their partnership or S Corp return? Additionally, which year's return is DHSS to use to determine the percentage? Is it the most recent?

It should be noted that while individual income tax returns are due annually by April 15th, taxpayers are allowed to request an extension until October 15th. Therefore it is unclear how the DHSS would be able to set the new percentage rates each year by the June 15th deadline.

This proposal says that the calculation is to be based on "taxable income" and not "adjusted gross income." Adjusted gross income is the total amount of reportable income. Taxable income is the amount of adjusted gross income left after all allowable federal deductions (including the standard deduction, child tax credits, etc.). Many taxpayers are able to significantly reduce their taxable income through the deductions they claim. Using Missouri's 2020 individual income tax data, their department notes that at least 25% of all filers had taxable income between $0 and $20.

The proposal provides that membership dues will be based on a percentage set by the DHSS multiplied by the taxable income "of each member as shown on federal tax returns." This does not address situations in which a taxpayer does not file a federal tax return (for example, because they are not required to file a federal tax return).

Presumably, so long as a member has a $0 taxable income, their membership for that year is free, and the costs of that membership must be covered by an increase in the percentage applied to others who have opted in to the MHCC. If all members of the MHCC in a given year have $0 taxable income and the reserve fund in Section 192.012.8 is exhausted, no provision is made for how the treatments and procedures covered by this program shall be paid.

In extreme circumstances (e.g., the majority of members have $0 taxable income but a few members have low taxable income), it is possible that the percentage that must be set by DHSS to ensure coverage of all costs can exceed 100%. For example, if there is no reserve fund left and costs for a year will be $100,000, there are 99 members of the MHCC with $0 taxable income, and 1 member with $1 in taxable income, the percentage will need to be set at least 10,000,000% of that 1 member's taxable income.

Section 192.012.10 – non-calendar year filers:

The proposal appears to assume that individual taxpayers necessarily file a federal tax return on the basis of a calendar year, but this is not always the case. Some individuals may have a tax year, for which they file a federal tax return, which does not match the calendar year. Consider rephrasing Section 192.01.10's reference to "each calendar year", and potentially changing the June 15th deadline in that subsection to something more general (e.g., the 15th day of the sixth month following the close of that member's federal tax year).

Section 192.012.10 – membership dues adjustment:

The proposal provides that the amount of membership dues shall be adjusted based on a member's actual taxable income after a federal return has been filed. This does not specifically address situations in which a member's federal return has been filed late or never filed.

- For example, if a member has a tax year that matches calendar year 2027, but does not file the federal return for 2027 until 2031, shall the membership adjustment still be made and – if so – does the deadline become June 15, 2031 for the 2027 membership dues?

It would also be preferable to specify which state agency (namely, the DHSS, not the Department of Revenue) shall administer the membership dues adjustments and refunds.

Finally, no provision expressly specifies what shall occur if a member has underpaid their dues for a particular year and refuses to pay any increased amount due – in each such situation, may the DHSS bring a civil lawsuit against the member and be represented by the Attorney General's Office? Is the membership in the MHCC automatically terminated?

Summary:

Their department notes that participation in this program is strictly voluntary. Their department has no way to determine how many citizens would choose to participate in such a program so is unable to estimate an impact on the amount that may be paid in membership dues annually. As written this will not administratively impact their department.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety - Office of the Director indicated no impact for their department, Director's Office.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated there is no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated that MO HealthNet defers to DHSS for estimated cost for this IP. Any impacts to MHD would result in a fiscal impact of $0 to unknown. No other impact to their department.

Officials from the Governor's office indicated this proposal relating to health care cooperatives does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Missouri House of Representatives indicated no direct fiscal impact to their office.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated no adverse fiscal impact to their department would be expected because of this proposal.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact to their department/Missouri Highways and Transportation Commission.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to health care cooperatives does not financially impact their office. They defer to the Department of Revenue for tax impacts.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated there is no fiscal impact on the courts.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In fiscal year (FY) 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. They estimate $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no fiscal impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated they estimate no costs or savings from this petition.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county for this initiative petition.

Officials from St. Louis County indicated this initiative petition would cause no known cost to their county.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this proposed amendment will have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact to their college.

Officials from the St. Louis Community College indicated this initiative will not have a significant specific cost or cost savings to their college. However, their college does work and provide limited services to the community that have not been evaluated against the proposed initiative. Indirect cost considerations have not been determined.

The State Auditor's office did not receive a response from the Attorney General's office, Adair County, Boone County, Callaway County, Cass County, Cole County, Jackson County, Jasper County, St. Charles County, Taney County, the City of Cape Girardeau, the City of Columbia, the City of Jefferson, the City of Joplin, the City of Kirksville, the City of Mexico, the City of Raymore, the City of St. Joseph, the City of St. Louis, the City of Springfield, the City of Union, the City of Wentzville, the City of

Fiscal Note Summary

State governmental entities expect any costs to equal any savings. Local governmental entities expect no costs or savings from this proposal.

Be it enacted by the people of the state of Missouri:

Two new sections of the Missouri Revised Statutes, to be known as sections 130.030 and 143.990, are enacted to read as follows:

130.030. 1. "The Missouri Elections Trust Fund" is hereby created, as a dedicated fund within the Missouri Department of Revenue, to provide public financing in the form of matching funds for candidates for office in Missouri who agree to, accept, and subsequently meet, the following conditions:

(1) Not to accept contributions from corporations or political action committees that accept corporate contributions; and
(2) That at least one-half of the total money raised, including in-kind contributions, by the candidate will come from individual contributors who contribute a total of $200.00 or less to the candidate during an election cycle. Primary elections and general elections constitute separate election cycles.

2. Candidates must indicate at time of filing to run for office that they intend to meet and comply with the conditions for receiving matching funds. A candidate electing to receive matching funds for the primary election cycle must also agree to comply with the conditions for receiving matching funds during the general election.

3. If it is determined at any time that a candidate who received matching funds was not in compliance with the conditions required for receiving matching funds or fell out of compliance at a later date, said candidate must return any matching funds received within 45 days of the date that it was determined that she or he failed to comply with the conditions for receiving matching funds.

4. A candidate failing to meet the conditions for the primary election cycle, may not receive matching funds as part of the general election cycle.

5. The ratio of the match relative to the amount of money raised by candidates will be determined by the Department of Revenue based on the total amount of money raised during the designated periods by all candidates who have elected to accept matching funds and the designated amount of money available from the fund during each election cycle.

6. Only contributions made during the designated periods by individual contributors, totaling $200 or less per contributor per election cycle, will be eligible for matching funds. Contributions from businesses other than sole proprietorships, political action committees and other organizations, including other campaign committees, are not eligible for matching funds. Anonymous contributions are not eligible for matching funds. In-kind contributions are not eligible for matching funds.

7. For purposes of qualifying for matching funds and determining the amount of matching funds to be distributed to each candidate the primary election cycle will begin with the date each non-incumbent candidate officially formed a campaign finance committee through the Missouri Ethics Commission; an incumbent candidate with an ongoing campaign finance committee filed for re-election with the Missouri Secretary of State; or an incumbent candidate amended her or his campaign committee by notifying the Missouri Ethics Commission of her or his intention to seek an office other than the office currently held by that candidate. The primary election cycle for purposes of distributing matching funds will end on June 30 of each election year.

8. One-third of the balance of funds in the Missouri Elections Trust Fund will be distributed as expeditiously as possible after each candidate files the required campaign finance report with the Missouri Ethics Commission for the period ending on June 30 of each election year, but no later than seven business days after the date each candidate's report was filed with the Missouri Ethics Commission.

9. Candidates losing a primary election will not receive matching funds for otherwise qualified contributions made between July 1 and the date of the primary election and must return any unused matching funds no later than 45 days after the date of the primary election.

10. For purposes of qualifying for matching funds and determining the amount of matching funds to be distributed to each candidate, the general election cycle will begin on July 1 of each election year and end on September 30 of each election year. Contributions made after September 30 of each election year will not be eligible for matching funds.

11. The full remaining balance of funds in the Missouri Elections Trust Fund will be distributed during the general election cycle to qualified candidates. This distribution of matching funds will be made as expeditiously as possible after a candidate files a campaign finance report with the Missouri Ethics Commission for the period ending on September 30 of each election year, but no later than seven business days after the date each report was filed with the Missouri Ethics Commission.

12. Candidates will not receive matching funds for otherwise qualified contributions made between October 1 and the date of the general election.

13. When a candidate losing a general election files a termination statement and disclosure report with the Missouri Ethics Commission, any and all funds remaining after repaying any debts owed by the campaign committee are to be paid over to the Missouri Elections Trust Fund, up to and including an amount equal to the full amounts of matching funds received by said candidate.

14. The Missouri Elections Trust Fund will be administered by the Missouri Department of Revenue based on reports filed with the Missouri Ethics Commission.

15. All subsections and all clauses of this Section, and the phrases, and the words within them, are severable. If any of the provisions within them are found by a court of competent jurisdiction to be unconstitutional or unconstitutionally enacted or invalid, the remainder of those provisions shall remain valid and the application of such provisions shall not be affected thereby.

143.990. 1. In each taxable year beginning on or after January 1, 2025, each individual or corporation having paid state income taxes in the amount of twenty-five dollars or more may designate that five dollars of the tax paid shall be paid over to the Missouri elections trust fund as provided in section 130.030. In the case of a husband and wife with a filing status of married filing combined having paid state income tax in the amount of fifty dollars or more, each spouse may separately designate that five dollars shall be paid to the fund.

2. The option to contribute to this fund, as authorized by this section, shall be clearly and unambiguously printed on the same page of each income tax return form provided by the state upon which the amount of the amount of tax owed is indicated, and shall include the following statement: "Contributing to the Missouri Elections Trust Fund will not increase the amount of tax owed or reduce the amount of overpayment to be refunded."

3. The department of revenue shall deposit the contributions made pursuant to this statute into the Missouri Election Trust Fund as created in section 130.030.

4. All subsections and all clauses of this Section, and the phrases, and the words within them, are severable. Assumptions

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated no fiscal impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated no fiscal impact as a result of this legislation.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated they have determined there is no fiscal impact upon their department.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated this initiative petition has no impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated this petition, if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated this proposal creates no direct obligations or requirements to their department that would result in a fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated they would not anticipate a direct fiscal impact from this proposal.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated they anticipated no fiscal impact for this initiative petition.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated the following:

This initiative petition ("IP") would create a Missouri Elections Trust Fund (Fun) within the Missouri Department of Revenue (DOR). The IP would give DOR the authority to distribute money to certain candidates for elective office to provide a percentage match to individual campaign contributions (depending on the circumstances, it appears that his matching percentage could exceed 100% of a contribution). Candidates who lose a primary or general election must return any unused funds. The Missouri Elections Trust Fund would be funded by taxpayers designating $5 of their tax paid (not their refund) to go to that fund. This proposal would significantly impact DOR by requiring that it administer the Missouri Elections Trust Fund, as well as the designation of tax paid going to that fund.

When participating taxpayers choose to make the contribution to the Fund they will be reducing general revenue by an equal amount. This will result in a loss to general revenue.

Due to several concerns with this proposal, outlined below, DOR is unable to determine a full fiscal impact. Those concerns are delineated below:

Section 130.030.1 – "candidates for office in Missouri":

The proposal refers to "candidates for office in Missouri", but does not further specify which offices qualify for this funding (except that Section 130.030.7 limits this to those offices which must file with the MEC or Secretary of State). Offices that file with the Missouri Ethics Commission include county and statewide elective offices as well as at least Missouri's U.S. Senate and U.S. House seats. It is unclear from the language exactly which candidates would be allowed the matching funds. DOR is unable to determine if this would have a fiscal impact.

Section 130.031.1(2) – "primary and general elections"

This proposal says that it is for primary and general elections but does not limit the elections to only the statewide primary and general elections. However, DOR is to use the filings of candidates with the Missouri Ethics Commission to determine the matching funds. It should be noted that while all statewide candidates and county candidates file campaign finance reports at the Missouri Ethics Commission not all city or local political subdivision candidates do. It is unclear from the language as to which candidates, statewide only or local political subdivision also would qualify for this matching fund.

If the intent was to include local political subdivision elections then this proposal did not establish a method for those elections. Therefore, DOR is unclear how they would administer local primary and general elections and is unsure of the fiscal impact of doing so.

Section 130.030.8 & .11– Distribution of matching funds

This proposal requires that DOR distribute one-third of the balance of the Missouri Elections Trust Fund upon the filing of the candidate's campaign finance report for the period ending June 30th. Additionally it requires the remaining funds be distributed during the general election cycle. However, this proposal does not establish any guidance for DOR should the balance of the Fund be lower than the amount that candidates qualify for in matching funds.

Additionally, this proposal requires DOR to provide certain matching campaign funds to certain candidates based on individual contributions and the money available in the Fund, but no limitation is expressed on the amount that may be provided by DOR. Meanwhile, 100% of the balance of the Fund must be disbursed over the course of a primary and general election cycle.

MO Const. Art. VIII, Section 23 sets campaign contribution limits per person to candidates for certain offices, and a "department" or any "other entity of the state" are specifically included in that constitutional section's definition of "person". Depending on the number of candidates who accept the conditions of this program, the terms of this proposal may require DOR to disburse more than campaign contribution limit to a particular candidate, which may be inconsistent with MO Const. Art. VIII, Section 23. (This may depend on whether the payment from this fund is for the purpose of supporting or electing that candidate, which is not entirely clear). As an example: Candidate running for a Missouri House of Representative seat are subject to a contribution limit of $2,000 per person.

Section 130.030.5 – Ratio of Matching Determined by DOR

The IP requires DOR to determine "the ratio of the match" relative to the amount of money raised by candidates, based on both the total amount of money raised by all candidates who have opted in to this program and the money available from the Missouri Elections Trust Fund during each election cycle. It would be helpful if the IP expressly specified that DOR must provide an equal ratio of match to each and every candidate who opted in to this program, regardless of the office for which the candidate is running. Notably, this language and surrounding provisions imply that the ratio of money from DOR to individual small campaign contributions may exceed 100%.

- For example, if one-third of the amount in the Missouri Elections Trust Fund is $10,000, and it must be disbursed in a primary election, and only one candidate opts into this program and that candidate receives only one individual donation for $50, DOR would apparently be required to disburse 20,000% of that donation's value to the candidate.

Section 130.030.9 – Potential Unintended Consequence – Unopposed Candidates Eligible: Political candidates who run unopposed in their primary and general election are not excluded from receiving money from this section, and DOR would be required to provide funds to them under this IP.

This could provide a significant opportunity for abuse: candidates running unopposed may solicit individual contributions with a primary purpose being to obtain matching funds from DOR, and then to have a large share of their campaign funds available after they win their (unopposed) race. Section 130.030 itself does not require unused funds to be returned by a winning candidate, so the candidate may then attempt to divert these funds to some other purpose to which unused political campaign contributions may be put.

Section 130.030.3, 130.030.9, & 130.030.13 – Matching Funds Clawback and Required Return of Funds, How Enforced:

The IP requires a candidate who receives funds under Section 130.030 but who fails to comply with the requirements of that section to "return any matching funds received within 45 days of the date that it was determined that she or he failed to comply with the conditions for receiving matching funds". Candidates who lose a primary or general election are also obligated to return their unused matching funds. The proposal does not clarify how this shall be enforced if, for example, a candidate simply refuses or fails to return the funds. DOR is unsure how this would be administered.

Section 130.030.1 & 130.030.14 – Generally, Funds to be held by Treasurer rather than DOR:

Under MO Const. Art. IV, Section 15, the state treasurer must be the custodian of all state funds, and the Fund may involve state funds rather than a nonstate funds. The IP does not expressly designate these funds as nonstate funds, and they are likely not funds resulting from taxes imposed by the state that get distributed to political subdivisions, so these funds might be found to be state funds that must be held by the state treasurer. This would appear contrary to Sections 130.030.1 and 130.030.14, which requires DOR to administer the Missouri Elections Trust Fund and creates that fund "within" DOR.

Section 143.990 – Constitutional Concerns – Appropriation By Initiative Without New Revenues – Appropriation Without Appropriations Bill:

This proposal starting January 1, 2025 allows individuals and corporations that paid state income taxes in the amount of $25 or more to designate that $5 of the tax paid be deposited into the Fund. It requires that DOR add a statement to the tax return that this will not reduce the amount of overpayment refunded. Therefore, this proposal is not creating a checkoff program where their refund is sent to the Fund but is redirecting their tax paid to the Fund.

Unlike some designations made on the Missouri income tax form, Section 143.990 is not a designation for how a taxpayer may choose to donate or contribute a tax refund. Instead, Section 143.990 allows taxpayers to specify that $5 of their tax paid shall go into the Missouri Election Trust Fund. Put differently, if a taxpayer makes this designation, Section 143.990 diverts a portion of the state's tax revenue to a particular fund.

This IP very well may violate MO Const. Art. III, Section 51, which prohibits an initiative from being used to appropriate money "other than of new revenues created and provided for thereby[.]" This IP does not create new revenues, it diverts tax revenue that would have existed regardless of whether the IP takes effect.

This IP also might arguably be inconsistent with MO Const. Art. IV, Section 23, which requires that every appropriation law distinctly specify the amount and purpose of the appropriation without reference to any other law to fix the amount of purpose. It also might arguably be inconsistent with MO Const. Art. III, Section 36, which requires that all revenue collected shall go into the treasury and that the General Assembly shall not divert that revenue except "in pursuance of appropriations made by law."

Summary

They are unable to estimate the number of people that would choose to have their tax paid put into this FUND rather than into general revenue. Therefore they are unable to estimate the amount of funding that would be collected from this proposal.

In order to allow for the trust fund to be designated on the tax return, they would need to add a check box to the MO-1040 form, update their instructions and update their website. These changes are estimated at $7,193.

If adding this check box to the form generates additional correspondence or errors they may need additional FTE. Their department needs one Associate Customer Service Representative ($31,200) for every 14,700 errors created and one Associate customer Service Representative ($31,200) for every 5,700 pieces of generated correspondence. At this time, they do not estimate they will reach those numbers based on this proposal but should multiple proposals pass that would justify these numbers of errors and correspondence they would seek the additional FTE through the appropriation process.

For the issues raised above, they are not sure how they will be handled and what additional resources would be needed to implement this proposal. Therefore they are also unable to determine what the full administrative impact would be.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety - Office of the Director indicated no impact for their department.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated this will have no impact for their department.

Officials from the Governor's office indicated this proposal relating to public funding of elections does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Missouri House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated no adverse fiscal impact to their department would be expected because of this proposal.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated this initiative petition would not have a fiscal impact to their department/Missouri Highways and Transportation Commission.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated the following:

This proposal relating to public funding of elections does not financially impact their office.

This provision would create an income tax check-off, where a taxpayer may contribute $5 (or $10 for married filing joint) to the newly created "Missouri Elections Trust Fund". OA Budget and Planning notes that this check-off would redistribute income taxes from GR to the new fund. Therefore, this proposal may have an unknown negative impact on GR, depending on the number of taxpayers that choose to participate.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated there is no fiscal impact on the courts.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In fiscal year (FY) 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. Their office estimates $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no fiscal impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated they estimate no costs or savings from this petition.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county for this initiative petition.

Officials from St. Louis County indicated this initiative petition has no known cost to their county.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this proposed amendment would have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact to their college.

Officials from the St. Louis Community College indicated this initiative will not have a significant specific cost or cost savings to their College. Indirect cost considerations have not been determined.

Officials from the Missouri Ethics Commission indicated their office does not have fiscal impact resulting from this initiative petition.

The State Auditor's office did not receive a response from the Attorney General's office, Adair County, Boone County, Callaway County, Cass County, Cole County, Jackson County, Jasper County, St. Charles County, Taney County, the City of Cape Girardeau, the City of Columbia, the City of Jefferson, the City of Joplin, the City of Kirksville, the City of Mexico, the City of Raymore, the City of St. Joseph, the City of St. Louis, the City of Springfield, the City of Union, the City of Wentzville, the City of West Plains, Cape Girardeau 63 School District, Hannibal 60 School District, Malta Bend R-V School District, Mehlville School District, Wellsville-Middletown R-1 School District, State Technical College of Missouri, and University of Missouri.

Fiscal Note Summary

State government entities estimate one-time costs of about $7,000. Also, an unknown amount of revenue will not be available for state General Revenue Fund spending. Local governmental entities estimate no costs or savings from this proposal.

Be it resolved by the people of the state of Missouri that the Constitution be amended:

Article VIII, Section 24 of the Constitution is enacted to read as follows:

Article VIII, Section 24. (a) In general elections for the offices of Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Secretary of State, Attorney General, State Treasurer, State Auditor, and United States Senator, if more than two candidates appear on the ballot at either a primary or general election, voters shall be given the opportunity to rank candidates in order of preference.

(b) For offices elected by this method of ranked-choice voting, the ballot shall be simple and easy to understand and allow a voter to rank up to five candidates for an office in order of preference. A voter may include no more than one write-in candidate among that voter's ranked choices for each office.

(c) For all offices elected by ranked-choice voting, the Secretary of State shall tabulate the votes according to the following method: Tabulation proceeds in sequential rounds. In the first round, only first-choice votes are tabulated. If a candidate receives a majority of the first-choice votes (fifty percent of the total votes cast, plus one vote) that candidate is elected. If no candidate receives a majority of the first-choice votes cast, the candidate with the lowest number of first-choice votes is eliminated and the candidates listed as the second choice on ballots cast for the candidate being eliminated are distributed among the "continuing candidates". In each subsequent round, the candidate who has the fewest "cumulative votes" is eliminated. In each subsequent round, the highest remaining choice for a continuing candidate on each ballot for the eliminated candidate shall be redistributed, in ranked order, as needed, among the continuing candidates. Ballots that do not rank any continuing candidate, that contain votes for more than one candidate at the same ranking, or in which a voter has left a ranking blank once that ranking would have been utilized, will be "exhausted ballots" and will not be counted in that round or subsequent rounds. This process is repeated in as many rounds as needed until one candidate wins election by receiving at least fifty percent plus one of the total cumulative votes.

(d) Election officials shall determine a random selection algorithm, prior to tabulation, to resolve ties between candidates. If a tie occurs at any point in the tabulation procedure and tabulation cannot proceed until the tie is resolved, then the random selection algorithm shall resolve the tie.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated this petition would institute a policy of ranked-choice voting to elect United States Senators and all statewide officers. This would require all voting machines statewide to either be coded to accept ranked-choice voting (which may require reprogramming) or to be replaced with new machines which do allow ranked-choice voting.

As of the 2020 voting systems survey conducted by their office, local election authorities reported that they possessed 5728 machines. The estimated cost for each new voting machine is $5,000. The total cost to the state will vary depending on the number of machines which are ready to accept ranked-choice votes or can be reprogrammed to do so. However, using total replacement of all machines as a maximum cost, ranked-choice voting may result in a total impact to general revenue ranging from $0 up to $28,640,000. Their office may be required to fund this mandated cost under Article X, Section 21 of the Missouri Constitution.

Each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In fiscal year (FY) 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. They estimate $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no fiscal impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated they estimate the following additional costs as a result of this petition:

- ~$25,000 one-time outlay to update the voter machine counting software and ballot layout fields.
- ~$6,000 in additional ballots for all parties to vote on all statewide candidates, per Primary and General even-year elections.

In sum, one-time estimate of $25,000 and ongoing costs of $12,000 per every even year.

Officials from Greene County indicated that in reviewing initiative petition 24-008 it has been determined there will be an increased cost to their county if voters vote to amend Article VIII with the proposed language in this initiative petition.

The sums of those cost estimates respectively to implement for a future election are as follows.

Primary Election Estimated Total Cost: $440,021.69
General Election Estimated Total Cost: $455,804.63

The actual costs of the 2022 Primary and the 2020 General Elections are as follows:

August 2022: $431,634.47
November 2020: $450,665.80

The difference would be the following for each:

Primary: $431,634.47 - $440,021.69 = -$8,387.22

General: $450,665.80 - $455,804.63 = -$5,138.83

Total Cost Increase for both Elections: $13,526.05

The cost difference to administer the election is in the coding cost to tabulate a ranked-choice election. In addition, the November 2020 General Election costs were used, due to the final cost of November 2022 not being finalized at this time.

Officials from St. Louis County indicated this initiative petition will require a $50,000 software update for the St. Louis County Board of Elections.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this proposed amendment would have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact to their college.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated they believe this will have a fiscal impact of anywhere from $0 - 50,000 because it is unknown if they would need to pay for new software or to use open-sourced software to adapt to ranked-choice voting.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners indicated if this initiative petition becomes law, new software would need to be purchased at $25,000 and staff would need to be retrained at $10,000 (one-time costs). The election day ballot would go to two pages due to the increased length of the ballot (200,000 times 50 cents a ballot) $100,000 (costs for every primary and general election). Legal Notices would be placed in all K.C. area newspapers $30,000 (one-time costs). Literature explaining rank choice voting would be printed and mailed to all voters at $100,000 (one-time costs). Also election day judges would need to be trained at $30,000 (one-time costs). Total cost to implement this new law would be roughly $195,000 for one-time costs and $100,000 ongoing costs for every primary and general election.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated there would be no fiscal impact. Their existing equipment is technically capable of tallying ranked-choice voting (RCV). The only issue would be time to learn.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated the current version of their tabulation software does not support rank choice voting for five selections.

There is currently no software certified by the Election Assistance Commission (EAC) to support a five-candidate selection. If the software were approved by the EAC an upgrade would need to be purchased by their board.

There is currently no funding source available for this purchase.

Fiscal Note Estimate

Assumptions

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated no fiscal impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact as a result of this legislation.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated they have determined there is no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated this initiative petition has no impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated Section 39, subsection 11 of the proposed initiative position (IP) is estimated to cost between $0 and $50,000 in General Revenue. The IP would allow municipalities and counties to set a minimum wage higher than the state minimum wage. It is unknown what local entities would raise the local minimum wage in accordance with the initiative, to what extent minimum wages would change, or if their department would employ staff in those areas affected by an increase in minimum wage. The estimated cost of this IP is between $0 and $50,000 General Revenue as DHSS would not have additional funding in federal grants or other funds to cover this potential increase.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated this petition, if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated this proposal creates no direct obligations or requirements to their department that would result in a fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated they would not anticipate a direct fiscal impact from this proposal.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated their department is unable to anticipate if any localities in the state in which their employees are located would require a higher minimum wage than their employees are currently paid; nor can they anticipate what that rate would be, should it be higher. Therefore, this change could potentially have an unknown cost to their department.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated they anticipated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated there is no impact for their department regarding this initiative petition.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety - Office of the Director indicated there is no impact for their office.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated no impact for their department.

Officials from the Governor's office indicated this proposal restricting the ability of the General Assembly to interfere with localities' ability to set minimum wage rates or set employment benefits above state or federal law does not impact their office.

Officials from the Missouri House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated that Initiative Petition 24-006 may have a potential negative fiscal impact on their department by creating variable minimum wages across different counties throughout the state. This could result in higher minimum wage requirements than otherwise paid by their department.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated this initiative petition is not projected to have a fiscal impact on their department/Missouri Highways and Transportation Commission.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal restricting the ability of the General Assembly to interfere with localities' ability to set minimum wage rates or set employment benefits above state or federal law does not impact their office.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated there is no fiscal impact on the courts.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In FY 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over 5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. The SOS estimates $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, we reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of our publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no fiscal impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated they estimate no costs or savings.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county for this initiative petition.

Officials from St. Louis County indicated this initiative petition has no known cost to their county.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this will have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Missouri Southern State University indicated that they agree to adding this amendment. Depending on the magnitude of the amounts "that exceeds the requirements of federal or state laws, rules, or regulations" the costs could be very significant and put a strain on resources.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact to their college.

Officials from the St. Louis Community College indicated this initiative does not appear to have any significant specific cost or cost savings to their College. Indirect cost considerations have not been determined. In particular, if the petition delays or inhibits the distribution of budgeted funds to the school district then it would have a potentially negative impact. Such impact cannot be evaluated at this time

Be it resolved by the people of the state of Missouri that the Constitution be amended:

Article III of the Constitution is revised by repealing Sections 6, 7, 9, 10, 11, and 14 and amending Sections 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 8, 12, 13, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 20(a), 20(b), 20(d), 21, 22, and 32 to read as follows:

Section 1. (a) The legislative power shall be vested in a legislative body [senate and house of representatives] to be styled "The General Assembly of the State of Missouri."

(b) To ensure that all political power in Missouri is vested in and derived from the people and founded upon the will of the people only, from January 2, 2025 until January 5, 2027, each citizen of Missouri who is eligible to vote shall be able to assign one proxy to any member of the Missouri senate, authorizing that senator to cast votes on their behalf, and one proxy to any member of the Missouri house of representatives, authorizing that representative to cast votes on their behalf. Members of the General Assembly shall cast a number of votes equal to the number of proxies they hold, plus one vote for themselves, on all matters that are voted on in their respective houses, including votes taken in committees and on procedural matters.

(c) Citizens of Missouri may assign their proxies either electronically, through a system of Online Accounts for Politically Active Citizens, or by means of a written (paper) proxy. Citizens may reassign a proxy at any time.

(d) The governor shall establish and maintain a system of Online Accounts for Politically Active Citizens to facilitate the assigning and reassigning of proxies electronically. The governor shall be responsible for ensuring the security of that system and for ensuring the privacy of citizens utilizing the system.

(e) On or before January 2, 2025, the Secretary of State shall create and make available to citizens of Missouri, both electronic and paper versions of a proxy form, a form for citizens to use to reassign their proxies, and a form for citizens to submit to notify the secretary of state if they move out of the state of Missouri or are no longer eligible to vote. When so notified, the Secretary of State shall void their proxies. The Secretary of State shall be responsible for promptly voiding the proxies of citizens who are no longer eligible to vote in Missouri due to being incarcerated or deceased. The Secretary of State shall be responsible for notifying citizens, in the manner in which they have indicated they prefer to be notified, when a legislator to whom they have assigned a proxy vacates her or his office for any reason.

(f) The General Assembly shall pass legislation providing penalties for forging or falsifying proxies, for offering money, or any other thing of value, to influence a citizen with regard to the assignment of their proxies, and for accepting money, or any other thing of value, in exchange for the assignment of a proxy.

(g) Effective with the election to be held on November 3, 2026, and at all subsequent general elections of members of the general assembly, the proxy forms on file with the secretary of state shall be treated as a "ballot" for purposes of electing members of the general assembly.

(h) Senators who were elected at the general election in 2022, shall continue in office until such time as the term of office to which they were elected has expired regardless of the number of proxies they have been assigned.

(i) Effective with the election to be held on November 3, 2026, and at all subsequent general elections for members of the general assembly, members of the general assembly shall be elected at-large. The eighty-three candidates who have been assigned the most as of 7 p.m. on November 3, 2026, shall be elected to the general assembly.

(j) Effective January 6, 2027, the general assembly shall be a unicameral legislature, consisting of the seventeen senators elected at the general election on November 5, 2024 and the eighty-three candidates who had been assigned the most proxies by the citizens of Missouri as of 7 p.m. on November 3, 2026.

(k) Effective on and from January 3, 2029, the general assembly shall consist of the one hundred candidates who have been assigned the most proxies by the citizens of Missouri as of 7 p.m. on November 7, 2028 and at subsequent general elections.

(l) From and after January 6, 2027, each citizen of Missouri who is eligible to vote shall be able to assign one proxy to any member of the general assembly authorizing that member to cast votes on their behalf. Members of the general assembly shall cast a number of votes equal to the number of proxies they hold, plus one vote for themselves, on all matters that are voted on in the general assembly, including votes taken in committees and on procedural matters.

Section 2. (a) After December 6, 2018, no person serving as a member of or employed by the general assembly shall act or serve as a paid lobbyist, register as a paid lobbyist, or solicit prospective employers or clients to represent as a paid lobbyist during the time of such service until the expiration of two calendar years after the conclusion of the session of the general assembly in which the member or employee last served and where such service was after December 6, 2018.

(b) No person serving as a member of or employed by the general assembly shall accept directly or indirectly a gift of any tangible or intangible item, service, or thing of value from any paid lobbyist or lobbyist principal. This Article shall not prevent candidates for the general assembly, including candidates for reelection, or candidates for offices within the general assembly [senate or house] from accepting campaign contributions consistent with this Article and applicable campaign finance law. Nothing in this section shall prevent individuals from receiving gifts, family support or anything of value from those related to them within the fourth degree by blood or marriage.

(c) The general assembly shall make no law authorizing unlimited campaign contributions to candidates for the general assembly, nor any law that circumvents the contribution limits contained in this Constitution. In addition to other campaign contribution limitations or restrictions provided for by law, the amount of contributions made to or accepted by any candidate or candidate committee from any person other than the candidate in any one election to the general assembly [to the office of state representative or state senator] shall not exceed [the following:

(1) To elect an individual to the office of state senator,] two thousand four hundred dollars, [; and

(2) To elect an individual to the office of state representative, two thousand dollars.]

The contribution limits and other restrictions of this section shall also apply to any person exploring a candidacy for election to the general assembly. [the office of state representative or state senator.]

(d) No contribution to a candidate for the general assembly [legislative office] shall be made or accepted, directly or indirectly, in a fictitious name, in the name of another person, or by or through another person in such a manner as to, or with the intent to, conceal the identity of the actual source of the contribution. There shall be a rebuttable presumption that a contribution to a candidate for public office is made or accepted with the intent to circumvent the limitations on contributions imposed in this section when a contribution is received from a committee or organization that is primarily funded by a single person, individual, or other committee that has already reached its contribution limit under any law relating to contribution limitations. A committee or organization shall be deemed to be primarily funded by a single person, individual, or other committee when the committee or organization receives more than fifty percent of its annual funding from that single person, individual, or other committee.

(e) In no circumstance shall a candidate be found to have violated limits on acceptance of contributions if the Missouri ethics commission, its successor agency, or a court determines that a candidate has taken no action to indicate acceptance of or acquiescence to the making of an expenditure that is deemed a contribution pursuant to this section.

(f) No candidate shall accept contributions from any federal political action committee unless the committee has filed the same financial disclosure reports that would be required of a Missouri political action committee.

Section 3. [(a)] The house of representatives shall consist of one hundred sixty-three members until January 6, 2027. On and from January 6, 2027, the general assembly shall be a unicameral legislature consisting of one hundred members elected at each general election [and redistricted as provided in this section].

[(b) The house independent bipartisan citizens commission shall redistrict the house of representatives using the following methods, listed in order of priority:

(1) Districts shall be as nearly equal as practicable in population, and shall be drawn on the basis of one person, one vote. Districts are as nearly equal as practicable in population if no district deviates by more than one percent from the ideal population of the district, as measured by dividing the number of districts into the statewide population data being used, except that a district may deviate by up to three percent if necessary to follow political subdivision lines consistent with subdivision (4) of this subsection; (2) Districts shall be established in a manner so as to comply with all requirements of the United States Constitution and applicable federal laws, including, but not limited to, the Voting Rights Act of 1965 (as amended). The following principles shall take precedence over any other part of this constitution: no district shall be drawn in a manner which results in a denial or abridgment of the right of any citizen of the United States to vote on account of race or color; and no district shall be drawn such that members of any community of citizens protected by the preceding clause have less opportunity than other members of the electorate to participate in the political process and to elect representatives of their choice;

(3) Subject to the requirements of subdivisions (1) and (2) of this subsection, districts shall be composed of contiguous territory as compact as may be. Areas which meet only at the points of adjoining corners are not contiguous. In general, compact districts are those which are square, rectangular, or hexagonal in shape to the extent permitted by natural or political boundaries;

(4) To the extent consistent with subdivisions (1) to (3) of this subsection, communities shall be preserved. Districts shall satisfy this requirement if district lines follow political subdivision lines to the extent possible, using the following criteria, in order of priority. First, each county shall wholly contain as many districts as its population allows. Second, if a county wholly contains one or more districts, the remaining population shall be wholly joined in a single district made up of population from outside the county. If a county does not wholly contain a district, then no more than two segments of a county shall be combined with an adjoining county. Third, split counties and county segments, defined as any part of the county that is in a district not wholly within that county, shall each be as few as possible. Fourth, as few municipal lines shall be crossed as possible;

(5) Districts shall be drawn in a manner that achieves both partisan fairness and, secondarily, competitiveness, but the standards established by subdivisions (1) to (4) of this subsection shall take precedence over partisan fairness and competitiveness. "Partisan fairness" means that parties shall be able to translate their popular support into legislative representation with approximately equal efficiency. "Competitiveness" means that parties' legislative representation shall be substantially and similarly responsive to shifts in the electorate's preferences.

To this end, the average electoral performance of the two political parties receiving the most votes in the three preceding general elections for governor, for United States Senate, and for President of the United States shall be calculated. This index shall be defined as the total votes received by each party in the three preceding general elections for governor, for United States Senate, and for President of the United States, divided by the total votes cast for both parties in these elections. Using this index, the total number of wasted votes for each party, summing across all of the districts in the plan shall be calculated. "Wasted votes" are votes cast for a losing candidate or for a winning candidate in excess of the threshold needed for victory. In any redistricting plan and map of the proposed districts, the difference between the two parties' total wasted votes, divided by the total votes cast for the two parties, shall not exceed fifteen percent.

To promote competitiveness, the electoral performance index shall be used to simulate elections in which the hypothetical statewide vote shifts by one percent, two percent, three percent, four percent, and five percent in favor of each party. The vote in each individual district shall be assumed to shift by the same amount as the state-wide vote. In each of these simulated elections, the difference between the two parties' total wasted votes, divided by the total votes cast for the two parties, shall not exceed fifteen percent.

(c) Within sixty days after the population of this state is reported to the President for each decennial census of the United States or, in the event that a redistricting plan has been invalidated by a court of competent jurisdiction, within sixty days that such a ruling has been made, the state committee and the congressional district committees of each of the two political parties casting the highest vote for governor at the last preceding general election shall meet and the members of each committee shall nominate, by a majority vote of the elected members of the committee present, provided that a majority of the elected members is present, members of their party, residents in that district, in the case of a congressional district committee, as nominees for the house independent bipartisan citizens commission. No party shall select more than one nominee from any one state legislative district. The congressional district committees shall each submit to the governor their list of two elected nominees. The state committees shall each submit to the governor their list of five elected nominees. Within thirty days thereafter, the governor shall appoint a house independent bipartisan citizens commission consisting of one nominee from each list submitted by each congressional district committee and two nominees from each list submitted by each state committee to redistrict the state into one hundred and sixty-three representative districts and to establish the numbers and boundaries of said districts. No person shall be appointed to both the house independent bipartisan citizens commission and the senate independent bipartisan citizens commission during the same redistricting cycle.

If any committee fails to submit a list within such time, the governor shall appoint a member of his or her own choice from the political party of the committee failing to submit a list, provided that in the case of a congressional district committee failing to submit a list, the person appointed to the commission by the governor shall reside in the congressional district of such committee.

Members of the commission shall be disqualified from holding office as members of the general assembly for four years following the date of the filing by the commission of its final redistricting plan.

For the purposes of this Article, the term congressional district committee or congressional district refers to the congressional district committee or the congressional district from which a congressman was last elected, or, in the event members of congress from this state have been elected at large, the term congressional district committee refers to those persons who last served as the congressional district committee for those districts from which congressmen were last elected, and the term congressional district refers to those districts from which congressmen were last elected. Any action pursuant to this section by the congressional district committee shall take place only at duly called meetings, shall be recorded in their official minutes and only members present in person shall be permitted to vote.

(d) The commissioners so selected shall, on the fifteenth day, excluding Sundays and state holidays, after all members have been appointed, meet in the capitol building and proceed to organize by electing from their number a chairman, vice chairman and secretary. The commission shall adopt an agenda establishing at least three hearing dates on which hearings open to the public shall be held to hear objections or testimony from interested persons. A copy of the agenda shall be filed with the clerk of the house of representatives within twenty-four hours after its adoption. Executive meetings may be scheduled and held as often as the commission deems advisable.

(e) Not later than five months after the appointment of the commission, the commission shall file with the secretary of state a tentative redistricting plan and map of the proposed districts and during the ensuing fifteen days shall hold such public hearings as may be necessary to hear objections or testimony of interested persons. The commission shall make public the tentative redistricting plan and map of the proposed districts, as well as all demographic and partisan data used in the creation of the plan and map.

(f) Not later than six months after the appointment of the commission, the commission shall file with the secretary of state a final statement of the numbers and the boundaries of the districts together with a map of the districts, and no statement shall be valid unless approved by at least seven-tenths of the members.

(g) After the final statement is filed, members of the house of representatives shall be elected according to such districts until a new redistricting plan is made as provided in this section, except that if the final statement is not filed within six months of the time fixed for the appointment of the commission, the commission shall stand discharged and the house of representatives shall be redistricted using the same methods and criteria as described in subsection (b) of this section by a commission of six members appointed from among the judges of the appellate courts of the state of Missouri by the state supreme court, a majority of whom shall sign and file its redistricting plan and map with the secretary of state within ninety days of the date of the discharge of the house independent bipartisan citizens commission. The judicial commission shall make public the tentative redistricting plan and map of the proposed districts, as well as all demographic and partisan data used in the creation of the plan and map. Thereafter, members of the house of representatives shall be elected according to such districts until a redistricting plan is made as provided in this section.

(h) Each member of the commission shall receive as compensation fifteen dollars a day for each day the commission is in session but not more than one thousand dollars, and, in addition, shall be reimbursed for his or her actual and necessary expenses incurred while serving as a member of the commission.

(j) Any action expressly or implicitly alleging that a redistricting plan violates this Constitution, federal law, or the United States Constitution shall be filed in the circuit court of Cole County and shall name the body that approved the challenged redistricting plan as a defendant. Only an eligible Missouri voter who sustains an individual injury by virtue of residing in a district that exhibits the alleged violation, and whose injury is remedied by a differently drawn district, shall have standing. If the court renders a judgment in which it finds that a completed redistricting plan exhibits the alleged violation, its judgment shall adjust only those districts, and only those parts of district boundaries, necessary to bring the map into compliance. The supreme court shall have exclusive appellate jurisdiction upon the filing of a notice of appeal within ten days after the judgment has become final.]

Section 4. Each member of the general assembly [representative] shall be twenty-four years of age, and next before the day of her or his election, shall have been a qualified voter for two years and a resident of the [county or district which he is chosen to represent] state of Missouri for one year, [if such county or district shall have been so long established, and if not, then of the county or district from which the same shall have been taken.]

Section 5. The senate shall consist of thirty-four members elected by the qualified voters of the senatorial districts for a term of four years until January 6, 2027. On and from January 6, 2027, the general assembly shall be a unicameral legislature consisting of one hundred members. [Senatorial districts shall be apportioned as provided for in Article III, Section 7.]

[Section 6. Each senator shall be thirty years of age, and next before the day of his election shall have been a qualified voter of the state for three years and a resident of the district which he is chosen to represent for one year, if such district shall have been so long established, and if not, then of the district or districts from which the same shall have been taken.]

[Section 7. (a) Within sixty days after the population of this state is reported to the President for each decennial census of the United States, or within sixty days after a redistricting plan has been invalidated by a court of competent jurisdiction, the state committee and the congressional district committees of each of the two political parties casting the highest vote for governor at the last preceding general election shall meet and the members of each committee shall nominate, by a majority vote of the elected members of the committee present, provided that a majority of the elected members is present, members of their party, residents in that district, in the case of a congressional district committee, as nominees for the senate independent bipartisan citizens commission. No party shall select more than one nominee from any one state legislative district. The congressional district committees shall each submit to the governor their list of two elected nominees. The state committees shall each submit to the governor their list of five elected nominees. Within thirty days thereafter the governor shall appoint a senate independent bipartisan citizens commission consisting of two nominees from each list submitted by each state committee and one nominee from each list submitted by each congressional district committee, to redistrict the thirty-four senatorial districts and to establish the numbers and boundaries of said districts. No person shall be appointed to both the house independent bipartisan citizens commission and the senate independent bipartisan citizens commission during the same redistricting cycle.

If any committee fails to submit a list within such time, the governor shall appoint a member of his or her own choice from the political party of the committee failing to submit a list, provided that in the case of a congressional district committee failing to submit a list, the person appointed to the commission by the governor shall reside in the congressional district of such committee.

Members of the commission shall be disqualified from holding office as members of the general assembly for four years following the date of the filing by the commission of its final redistricting plan.

(b) The commissioners so selected shall, on the fifteenth day, excluding Sundays and state holidays, after all members have been appointed, meet in the capitol building and proceed to organize by electing from their number a chairman, vice chairman and secretary. The commission shall adopt an agenda establishing at least three hearing dates on which hearings open to the public shall be held to hear objections or testimony from interested persons. A copy of the agenda shall be filed with the secretary of the senate within twenty-four hours after its adoption. Executive meetings may be scheduled and held as often as the commission deems advisable.

(c) The senate independent bipartisan citizens commission shall redistrict the senate using the same methods and criteria as those required by subsection (b), section 3 of this Article for the redistricting of the house of representatives.

(d) Not later than five months after the appointment of the senate independent bipartisan citizens commission, the commission shall file with the secretary of state a tentative redistricting plan and map of the proposed districts and during the ensuing fifteen days shall hold such public hearings as may be necessary to hear objections or testimony of interested persons. The commission shall make public the tentative redistricting plan and map of the proposed districts, as well as all demographic and partisan data used in the creation of the plan and map.

(e) Not later than six months after the appointment of the commission, the commission shall file with the secretary of state a final statement of the numbers and the boundaries of the districts together with a map of the districts, and no statement shall be valid unless approved by at least seven-tenths of the members.

(f) After the final statement is filed, senators shall be elected according to such districts until a new redistricting plan is made as provided in this section, except that if the final statement is not filed within six months of the time fixed for the appointment of the commission, the commission shall stand discharged and the senate shall be redistricted using the same methods and criteria as described in subsection (b) of section 3 of this Article by a commission of six members appointed from among the judges of the appellate courts of the state of Missouri by the state supreme court, a majority of whom shall sign and file its redistricting plan and map with the secretary of state within ninety days of the date of the discharge of the senate independent bipartisan citizens commission. The judicial commission shall make public the tentative redistricting plan and map of the proposed districts, as well as all demographic and partisan data used in the creation of the plan and map. Thereafter, senators shall be elected according to such districts until a redistricting plan is made as provided in this section.

(g) Each member of the commission shall receive as compensation fifteen dollars a day for each day the commission is in session, but not more than one thousand dollars, and, in addition, shall be reimbursed for his or her actual and necessary expenses incurred while serving as a member of the commission.

(i) Any action expressly or implicitly alleging that a redistricting plan violates this Constitution, federal law, or the United States Constitution shall be filed in the circuit court of Cole County and shall name the body that approved the challenged redistricting plan as a defendant. Only an eligible Missouri voter who sustains an individual injury by virtue of residing in a district that exhibits the alleged violation, and whose injury is remedied by a differently drawn district, shall have standing. If the court renders a judgment in which it finds that a completed redistricting plan exhibits the alleged violation, its judgment shall adjust only those districts, and only those parts of district boundaries, necessary to bring the map into compliance. The supreme court shall have exclusive appellate jurisdiction upon the filing of a notice of appeal within ten days after the judgment has become final.]

Section 8. No one shall be elected to serve more than [eight years total in any one house of the General Assembly nor more than] sixteen years total in [both houses of] the General Assembly. [In applying this section, service in the General Assembly resulting from an election prior to December 3, 1992, or service of less than one year, in the case of a member of the house of representatives, or two years, in the case of a member of the senate, by a person elected after the effective date of this section to complete the term of another person, shall not be counted.]

[Section 9. Until the convening of the Seventy-fourth General Assembly the House of Representatives shall consist of one hundred sixty-three members elected from the one hundred sixty-three representative districts, as they existed January 1, 1965.]

[Section 10. The last decennial census of the United States shall be used in apportioning representatives and determining the population of senatorial and representative districts. Such districts may be altered from time to time as public convenience may require.]

[Section 11. The first election of senators and representatives under this constitution, shall be held at the general election in the year one thousand nine hundred and forty-six when the whole number of representatives and the senators from the districts having even numbers, who shall compose the first class, shall be elected, and two years thereafter the whole number of representatives and the senators from districts having odd numbers, who shall compose the second class, shall be elected, and so on at each succeeding general election.]

Section 12. No person holding any lucrative office or employment under the United States, this state or any municipality thereof shall be eligible to serve as a member of the general assembly [hold the office of senator or representative]. When any individual serving as a member of the general assembly [senator or representative] accepts any office or employment under the United States, this state or any municipality thereof, her or his office shall thereby be vacated and she or he shall thereafter perform no duty and receive no salary as a member of the general assembly. [senator or representative.] During the time they serve as a member of the general assembly, [term for which he was elected no senator or representative] no one shall accept any appointive office or employment under this state which is created or the emoluments of which are increased during such term. This section shall not apply to members of the organized militia, of the reserve corps and of school boards, and notaries public.

Section 13. If any person serving as a member of the general assembly [senator or representative remove his residence from the district or county for which he was elected,] removes her or his residence from the state of Missouri, her or his office shall thereby be vacated.

[Section 14. Writs of election to fill vacancies in either house of the general assembly shall be issued by the governor.]

Section 15. Every member of the general assembly [senator or representative elect], before entering upon the duties of her or his office, shall take and subscribe the following oath or affirmation: "I do solemnly swear, or affirm, that I will support the Constitution of the United States and of the state of Missouri, and faithfully perform the duties of my office, and that I will not knowingly receive, directly or indirectly, any money or other valuable thing for the performance or nonperformance of any act or duty pertaining to my office, other than the compensation allowed by law." The oath shall be administered in the halls of the general assembly [respective houses] to the members thereof, by a judge of the supreme court or a circuit court, or after the organization by the presiding officer of the general assembly [either house,] and shall be filed in the office of the secretary of state. Any [senator or representative] member refusing to take said oath or affirmation shall be deemed to have vacated her or his office, and any member convicted of having violated his oath or affirmation shall be deemed guilty of perjury, and be forever disqualified from holding any office of trust or profit in this state.

Section 16. Members of the general assembly [Senators and representatives] shall receive from the state treasury as salary such sums as are provided by law. No law fixing the compensation of members of the general assembly shall become effective until the first day of the regular session of the general assembly next following the session at which the law was enacted. Upon certification by the president and secretary of the [senate and by the speaker and chief clerk of the house of representatives] general assembly as to the respective members thereof, the state comptroller shall audit and the state treasurer shall pay such compensation without legislative enactment. Until otherwise provided by law members of the general assembly [senators and representatives] shall receive one dollar for every ten miles traveled in going to and returning from their place of meeting while the legislature is in session, on the most usual route.

Until otherwise provided by law, each member of the general assembly [senator or representative] shall be reimbursed from the state treasury for the actual and necessary expenses incurred by him in attending sessions of the general assembly in the sum of ten dollars ($10.00) per day for each day on which the journal of the general assembly [senate or house respectively] shows the presence of such member [senator or representative]. Upon certification by the president and secretary of the general assembly [senate and by the speaker and chief clerk of the house of representatives] as to the respective members thereof, the state comptroller shall approve and the state treasurer shall pay monthly such expense allowance without legislative enactment.

Section 17. Until otherwise provided by law, the general assembly [house of representatives shall not employ more than one hundred twenty-five and the senate] shall not employ more than two hundred [seventy-five] employees elective, appointive or any other at any time during any session.

Section 18. The general assembly [Each house] shall appoint its own officers; shall be sole judge of the qualifications, election and returns of its own members; may determine the rules of its own proceedings, except as herein provided; may arrest and punish by fine not exceeding three hundred dollars, or imprisonment in a county jail not exceeding ten days, or both, any person not a member, who shall be guilty of disrespect to the house by any disorderly or contemptuous behavior in its presence during its sessions; may punish its members for disorderly conduct; and, with the concurrence of two-thirds of all members elect, may expel a member; but no member shall be expelled a second time for the same cause.

Section 19. (a) Members of the general assembly [Senators and representatives] shall, in all cases except treason, felony, offenses under this Article, or breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest during the session of the general assembly, and for the fifteen days next before the commencement and after the termination of each session; and they shall not be questioned for any speech or debate in either house in any other place.

(b) Legislative records shall be public records and subject to generally applicable state laws governing public access to public records, including the Sunshine Law. Legislative records include, but are not limited to, all records, in whatever form or format, of the official acts of the general assembly, of the official acts of legislative committees, of the official acts of members of the general assembly, of individual legislators, their employees and staff, of the conduct of legislative business and all records that are created, stored or distributed through legislative branch facilities, equipment or mechanisms, including electronic. Each member of the general assembly is the custodian of legislative records under the custody and control of the member, their employees and staff. The chief clerk of the house or the secretary of the senate are the custodians for all other legislative records relating to the house and the senate, respectively.

(c) Legislative proceedings, including committee proceedings, shall be public meetings subject to generally applicable law governing public access to public meetings, including the Sunshine Law. Open public meetings of legislative proceedings shall be subject to recording by citizens, so long as the proceedings are not materially disrupted.

Section 20. The general assembly shall meet on the first Wednesday after the first Monday in January following each general election. The general assembly may provide by law for the introduction of bills during the period between the first day of December and the first Wednesday after the first Monday of January.

The general assembly shall reconvene on the first Wednesday after the first Monday of January after adjournment at midnight on May thirtieth of the preceding year. [A majority of the elected members of each house] Members of the general assembly holding a majority of the proxies that have been assigned to members of the general assembly shall constitute a quorum to do business, but a smaller number may adjourn from day to day, and may compel the attendance of absent members in such manner and under such penalties as each house may provide. The sessions of the general assembly [each house] shall be held with open doors, except in cases which may require secrecy but not including the final vote on bills, resolutions and confirmations. [Neither house shall, without the consent of the other, adjourn for more than ten days at any one time, nor to any other place than that in which the two houses may be sitting.]

Section 20(a). The general assembly shall adjourn at midnight on May thirtieth until the first Wednesday after the first Monday of January of the following year, unless it has adjourned prior thereto. All bills [in either house] remaining on the calendar after 6:00 p.m. on the first Friday following the second Monday in May are tabled. The period between the first Friday following the second Monday in May and May thirtieth shall be devoted to the enrolling, engrossing, and the signing in open session by officers of the General Assembly [respective houses] of bills passed prior to 6:00 p.m. on the first Friday following the second Monday in May.

The general assembly shall automatically stand adjourned sine die at 6:00 p.m. on the sixtieth calendar day after the date of its convening in special session unless it has adjourned sine die prior thereto.

Section 20(b). Upon the filing with the secretary of state of a petition stating the purpose for which the session is to be called and signed by members of the general assembly holding a cumulative total of proxies constituting a majority of the total number of proxies held by all members of the general assembly [three-fourths of the members of the senate and three-fourths of the members of the house of representatives, the president pro tem of the senate and the speaker of the house shall by joint proclamation] the presiding member of the general assembly shall convene the general assembly in special session. The proclamation shall state specifically each matter contained in the petition on which action is deemed necessary. No appropriation bill shall be considered in a special session convened pursuant to this section if in that year the general assembly has not passed the operating budget in compliance with Section 25 of this article.

The general assembly shall automatically stand adjourned sine die at 6:00 p.m. on the thirtieth calendar day after the date of its convening in special session under this section unless it has adjourned sine die prior thereto.

Section 20(d). If any provision of sections 2, 3, 12, or 13(c) [7, 19, or 20(c)] or the application thereof to anyone or to any circumstance is held invalid, the remainder of those provisions and the application of such provisions to others or other circumstances shall not be affected thereby.

Section 21. The style of the laws of this state shall be: "Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Missouri, as follows." No law shall be passed except by bill, and no bill shall be so amended in its passage through the general assembly [either house] as to change its original purpose. [Bills may originate in either house and may be amended or rejected by the other]. Every bill shall be read by title on three different days in the general assembly [each house].

Section 22. Every bill shall be referred to a committee of the house in which it is pending.

After it has been referred to a committee, [one-third of] the elected members of the respective houses by a vote of one-third or more shall have power to relieve a committee of further consideration of a bill and place it on the calendar for consideration. Each committee shall keep such record of its proceedings as is required by rule of the respective houses and this record and the recorded vote of the members of the committee shall be filed with all reports on bills.

Each house of the general assembly may provide by rule for such committees of that house as it deems necessary to meet to consider bills or to perform any other necessary legislative function during the interim between the session ending on the thirtieth day of May and the session commencing on the first Wednesday after the first Monday of January.

Section 32. Every bill presented to the governor and returned with his objections shall stand as reconsidered in the house to which it is returned. If the governor returns any bill with his objections on or after the fifth day before the last day upon which a session of the general assembly may consider bills, the general assembly shall automatically reconvene on the first Wednesday following the second Monday in September for a period not to exceed ten calendar days for the sole purpose of considering bills returned by the governor. The objections of the governor shall be entered upon the journal and the house shall proceed to consider the question pending, which shall be in this form: "Shall the bill pass, the objections of the governor thereto notwithstanding?" The vote upon this question shall be taken by yeas and nays and if [two-thirds of the elected members of the house vote] a majority of the votes are in the affirmative the presiding officer of the general assembly [that house] shall certify that fact on the roll, attesting the same by her or his signature [, and send the bill with the objections of the governor to the other house, in which like proceedings shall be had in relation thereto]. The bill thus certified shall be deposited in the office of the secretary of state as an authentic act and shall become a law.

Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, they expect that their office could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. However, if the enactment of this proposal were to result in substantial additional litigation, they may be required to request additional appropriations.

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact upon their department.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated this initiative petition has no impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated this petition, if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated this proposal creates no direct obligations or requirements to their department that would result in a fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated they would not anticipate a direct fiscal impact from this proposal.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated subsection (f) indicates "the General Assembly shall pass legislation providing penalties for forging or falsifying proxies". Should this legislation pass, there is a $0 to unknown impact, dependent upon the penalties provided for at that time.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact for this initiative petition proposing to amend Article III, version 4.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety - Office of the Director indicated no impact for their department.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated no impact for their department.

Officials from the Governor's office indicated this proposal relating to establishing citizen representative voting proxies and Online Accounts for Politically Active Citizens will have a fiscal impact of $528,524 with ongoing costs of approximately $110,000 for maintenance.

This proposal also replaces current popular elections with a proxy system to elect members of the General Assembly. Additionally, the General Assembly will become a unicameral body with 100 members after January 6, 2027.

Officials from the Missouri House of Representatives indicated the impact to their agency is as follows:

Fiscal Year (FY) 27-Impact on half the fiscal year.
Cost savings of $3,870,103.96.

FY28-will be the first year they realize the full impact of the reduction in membership.
Cost savings of $5,887,135.25.

The costs savings come from member salaries, per diem, member mileage, member expense accounts, and a reduction in the number of legislative assistant staff needed. They assume the Office of Administration may show the temporary unknown increased cost for any legislative assistants that would have to be laid off and the impact it may have on state unemployment payments.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated no adverse fiscal impact to their department would be expected because of this proposal.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated this initiative petition is not projected to have a fiscal impact on their department/Missouri Highways and Transportation Commission.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to establishing Online Accounts for Politically Active Citizens will impact their Division of Information Technology. The division estimates construction of the website envisioned in this initiative will cost $528,524 with on-going yearly maintenance costs of $110,000.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated there is no fiscal impact on the courts.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate a fiscal savings should this initiative petition pass. They indicated, in summary, year 1 savings will be approximately $1.6 million and year 2 savings will be $7.1 million. They also provided the following information:

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated this petition would establish a system of legislative proxies, with each citizen able to assign a proxy to one senator and one representative, then each legislator casting votes in accordance with the number of proxies held. The governor's office will create and maintain the electronic proxy assignment system, but the Secretary of State will be responsible for voiding proxies of citizens who are no longer eligible voters due to death, incarceration, leaving the state, or otherwise becoming ineligible. Additionally, they will also be required to notify citizens, in a manner of their choosing, when one of their assigned proxies leaves office for any reason. In order to provide up-to-date numbers of proxies per legislator to the General Assembly on a timely basis, they anticipate the need for a new Elections Specialist full-time employee (FTE) to handle this workload beginning in fiscal year (FY) 2025. Depending on the notification methods chosen by citizens, they may also incur significant mailing costs, but the amount of such potential printing and postage is unknown. Furthermore, starting with the November 2026 general election, members of the General Assembly will be "elected" based on the number of proxies held by candidates. It is not clear if primary elections will be affected by this change. For any election which is affected, local election authorities may have some unknown amount of savings due to these races not appearing on their ballots, while the Secretary of State's office expects to commit additional resources to handle candidate proxy assignments in the timeliest possible manner. The scope of these resources and the associated cost are unknown but could be substantial. Also beginning with the 2026 election, the General Assembly will become a unicameral legislature with legislators selected on an at-large basis. They do not expect to require significant resources to accommodate the initial change, however, many of the requirements for quorum and other business will also change from a majority of members to a number of members holding a majority of proxies. This means that proxy updates and transfers must be conducted in a manner as close to real-time as possible in order to ensure the legislature can legally transact business. Depending on the workload required, they may require additional new FTEs beyond the one requested above to meet this provision.

Each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In FY 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. Their office estimates $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no fiscal impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated they estimate converting to a proxy system of electing members of the General Assembly will have the following fiscal impacts on Clay County:

- One-time software expense of ~$2,000 to modify the ballot configuration eliminating the fields for electing State Senators and State Representatives.
- Ongoing savings of ~$500 in mapping every year due to not having to draw and print General Assembly districts on voting maps.
- Ongoing savings every even election year of ~$5,000 between both the primary and general elections due to reduced cost for printed ballots.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county for this initiative petition proposing to amend Article III, version 4.

Officials from St. Louis County indicated there are no expected costs to their county.

Officials from the City of Jefferson indicated they see little to no fiscal impact to their city resulting from this initiative petition proposing to amend Article III, version 4.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this proposed amendment has no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated this proposal would have no fiscal impact on Platte County unless the Secretary of State interprets that removal of proxies for ineligible voters should fall on election authorities.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated:

Assuming the house/senate independent bipartisan citizens commission shall redistrict the house of representatives/senate lines, each election authority would have to incur costs associated with said redistricting and renaming of precincts, redrawing of all jurisdictional lines, mapping adjustments for the website and GIS consultant labor for their respective jurisdictions.
ESTIMATED COST	$50,000.00
Assuming this would be very confusing to the voters of Jackson County Election Board's voting public, an educational process would need to occur.
ESTIMATED COST	$200,000.00
Assuming multiple changes in software related to voting equipment would need to occur.
ESTIMATED COST	$250,000.00
	$500,000.00
This amount is estimated costs by the Jackson County Board of Election Commissioners. More costs might be incurred if more responsibilities of this proposed petition fall to the local jurisdictions.

Officials from the Clay County Board of Election Commissioners indicated as these are written, they cannot see that there would be any cost associated with this petition.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners indicated that if this initiative petition were to become law it would increase the cost of the elections for the reasons listed below.

- The cost to conduct an election is $650,000. The State would be responsible for an increase in its pro-rata share based on the voter registrations.
- Six additional full time staff would be required at $40,000 each, including benefits ($40,000 x 6 = $240,000).
- Six additional seasonal staff of $30,00 per election times two state-wide elections per year ($60,000).
- Additional equipment of $20,000 for permanent staff and seasonal staff in order for them to be able to process the information as required.
- Voter education of $100,000 would be required to inform voters about the new law.

The total potential cost could be $1,070,000.

Additionally, they added security because with this volatile climate, and heightened threats they have already received they believe this will create even more unrest, which would require another $25,000 in security per elections up until the day of certification.

The State Auditor's office did not receive a response from Adair County, Boone County, Callaway County, Cass County, Cole County, Jackson County, Jasper County, St. Charles County, Taney County, the City of Cape Girardeau, the City of Columbia, the City of Joplin, the City of Kirksville, the City of Mexico, the City of Raymore, the City of St. Joseph, the City of St. Louis, the City of Springfield, the City of Union, the City of Wentzville, the City of West Plains, Cape Girardeau 63 School District, Hannibal 60 School District, Malta Bend R-V School District, Mehlville School District, Wellsville-Middletown R-1 School District, State Technical College of Missouri, University of Missouri, St. Louis Community College, and the Board of Election Commissioners City of St. Louis.

Fiscal Note Summary

State governmental entities estimate initial costs of $500,000, ongoing costs of at least $100,000 annually, and savings of $13 million annually. Local governmental entities estimate initial costs of at least $570,000, ongoing costs of at least $240,000 annually, and ongoing savings of at least $5,000 every general election year.

Be it resolved by the people of the state of Missouri that the Constitution be amended:

Article III of the Constitution is revised by amending Sections 1, 14, 22, and 32 to read as follows:

Section 1. (a) The legislative power shall be vested in a senate and house of representatives to be styled "The General Assembly of the State of Missouri."

(b) To ensure that all political power in Missouri is vested in and derived from the people and founded upon the will of the people only, from and after January 2, 2025, each citizen of Missouri who is eligible to vote shall be able to assign one proxy to any member of the Missouri senate, authorizing that senator to cast votes on their behalf, and one proxy to any member of the Missouri house of representatives, authorizing that representative to cast votes on their behalf. Members of the General Assembly shall cast a number of votes equal to the number of proxies they hold, plus one vote for themselves, on all matters that are voted on in their respective houses, including votes taken in committees and on procedural matters.

(c) Citizens of Missouri may assign their proxies either electronically, through a system of Online Accounts for Politically Active Citizens, or by means of a written (paper) proxy. Citizens may reassign a proxy at any time.

(d) The governor shall establish and maintain a system of Online Accounts for Politically Active Citizens to facilitate the assigning and reassigning of proxies electronically. The governor shall be responsible for ensuring the security of that system and for ensuring the privacy of citizens utilizing the system.

(e) On or before January 2, 2025, the Secretary of State shall create and make available to citizens of Missouri, both electronic and paper versions of a proxy form, a form for citizens to use to reassign their proxies, and a form for citizens to submit to notify the secretary of state if they move out of the state of Missouri or are no longer eligible to vote. When so notified, the Secretary of State shall void their proxies. The Secretary of State shall be responsible for promptly voiding the proxies of citizens who are no longer eligible to vote in Missouri due to being incarcerated or deceased. The Secretary of State shall be responsible for notifying citizens, in the manner in which they have indicated they prefer to be notified, when a legislator to whom they have assigned a proxy vacates her or his office for any reason.

(f) The General Assembly shall pass legislation providing penalties for forging or falsifying proxies, for offering money, or any other thing of value, to influence a citizen with regard to the assignment of their proxies, and for accepting money, or any other thing of value, in exchange for the assignment of a proxy.

(g) Effective with the election to be held on November 3, 2026, and at all subsequent general elections for members of the General Assembly, the proxy forms on file with the Secretary of State shall be treated as the "ballot" for purposes of electing members of the General Assembly. The candidate for the senate in each senatorial district who has been assigned the most proxies by citizens residing in the same senatorial district as the candidate, as of 7 p.m. on the date of the election, shall be elected to the Missouri senate, and the candidate for the house of representatives in each legislative (house) district who has been assigned the most proxies by citizens residing in the same legislative (house) district as the candidate, as of 7 p.m. on the date of the election, shall be elected to the Missouri House of Representatives.

Section 14. [Writs of election to fill vacancies] Vacancies in either house of the general assembly shall be [issued by the governor] filled by the individual who is assigned the most proxies, by citizens of the district in which the vacancy occurred, as of 7 p.m. on the thirtieth day after the vacancy occurs.

Section 22. Every bill shall be referred to a committee of the house in which it is pending.

After it has been referred to a committee, [one-third of] the elected members of the respective houses by a vote of one-third or more shall have power to relieve a committee of further consideration of a bill and place it on the calendar for consideration. Each committee shall keep such record of its proceedings as is required by rule of the respective houses and this record and the recorded vote of the members of the committee shall be filed with all reports on bills.

Each house of the general assembly may provide by rule for such committees of that house as it deems necessary to meet to consider bills or to perform any other necessary legislative function during the interim between the session ending on the thirtieth day of May and the session commencing on the first Wednesday after the first Monday of January.

Section 32. Every bill presented to the governor and returned with his objections shall stand as reconsidered in the house to which it is returned. If the governor returns any bill with his objections on or after the fifth day before the last day upon which a session of the general assembly may consider bills, the general assembly shall automatically reconvene on the first Wednesday following the second Monday in September for a period not to exceed ten calendar days for the sole purpose of considering bills returned by the governor. The objections of the governor shall be entered upon the journal and the house shall proceed to consider the question pending, which shall be in this form: "Shall the bill pass, the objections of the governor thereto notwithstanding?" The vote upon this question shall be taken by yeas and nays and if [two-thirds of the elected members of the house vote] a majority of the votes are in the affirmative the presiding officer of that house shall certify that fact on the roll, attesting the same by his signature, and send the bill with the objections of the governor to the other house, in which like proceedings shall be had in relation thereto. The bill thus certified shall be deposited in the office of the secretary of state as an authentic act and shall become a law.

Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, they expect that their office could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. However, if the enactment of this proposal were to result in substantial additional litigation, they may be required to request additional appropriations.

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact upon their department.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated this initiative petition has no impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated this petition, if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated this proposal creates no direct obligations or requirements to their department that would result in a fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated they would not anticipate a direct fiscal impact from this proposal.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated subsection (f) indicates "the General Assembly shall pass legislation providing penalties for forging or falsifying proxies". Should this legislation pass, there is a $0 to unknown impact, dependent upon the penalties provided for at that time.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact for this initiative petition proposing to amend Article III, version 3.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety - Office of the Director indicated no impact for their department.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated no impact for their department.

Officials from the Governor's office indicated this proposal relating to establishing citizen representative voting proxies and Online Accounts for Politically Active Citizens will have a fiscal impact of $528,524 with ongoing costs of approximately $110,000 for maintenance.

This proposal also replaces the Governor's authority to issue writs of election for General Assembly vacancies with a proxy system to fill vacancies.

This proposal also changes the language regarding the ability of the General Assembly to discharge bills from committee from "one-third of" members to "by a vote of one-third or more".

Officials from the Missouri House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated no adverse fiscal impact to their department would be expected because of this proposal.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated this initiative petition is not projected to have a fiscal impact on their department/Missouri Highways and Transportation Commission.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to establishing Online Accounts for Politically Active Citizens will impact their Division of Information Technology. The division estimates construction of the website envisioned in this initiative will cost $528,524 with on-going yearly maintenance costs of $110,000.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated there is no fiscal impact on the courts.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated this petition would establish a system of legislative proxies, with each citizen able to assign a proxy to one senator and one representative, then each legislator casting votes in accordance with the number of proxies held. The governor's office will create and maintain the electronic proxy assignment system, but the Secretary of State will be responsible for voiding proxies of citizens who are no longer eligible voters due to death, incarceration, leaving the state, or otherwise becoming ineligible. Additionally, they will also be required to notify citizens, in a manner of their choosing, when one of their assigned proxies leaves office for any reason. In order to provide up-to-date numbers of proxies per legislator to the General Assembly on a timely basis, they anticipate the need for a new Elections Specialist full-time employee (FTE) to handle this workload beginning in fiscal year (FY) 2025. Depending on the notification methods chosen by citizens, they may also incur significant mailing costs, but the amount of such potential printing and postage is unknown. Furthermore, starting with the November 2026 general election, members of the General Assembly will be "elected" based on the number of proxies held by candidates. It is not clear if primary elections will be affected by this change. For any election which is affected, local election authorities may have some unknown amount of savings due to these races not appearing on their ballots, while the Secretary of State's office expects to commit additional resources to handle candidate proxy assignments in the timeliest possible manner. The scope of these resources and the associated cost are unknown but could be substantial.

Each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In FY 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. Their office estimate $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no fiscal impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated they estimate converting to a proxy system of electing members of the General Assembly will have the following fiscal impacts on Clay County:

- One-time software expense of ~$2,000 to modify the ballot configuration eliminating the fields for electing State Senators and State Representatives.
- Ongoing savings of ~$500 in mapping every year due to not having to draw and print General Assembly districts on voting maps.
- Ongoing savings every even election year of ~$5,000 between both the primary and general elections due to reduced cost for printed ballots.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county for this initiative petition proposing to amend Article III, version 3.

Officials from St. Louis County indicated there are no expected costs to their county.

Officials from the City of Jefferson indicated they see little to no fiscal impact to their city resulting from this initiative petition proposing to amend Article III, version 3.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this proposed amendment has no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated this proposal would have no fiscal impact on Platte County unless the Secretary of State interprets that removal of proxies for ineligible voters should fall on election authorities.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated:

Assuming the house/senate independent bipartisan citizens commission shall redistrict the house of representatives/senate lines, each election authority would have to incur costs associated with said redistricting and renaming of precincts, redrawing of all jurisdictional lines, mapping adjustments for the website and GIS consultant labor for their respective jurisdictions.
ESTIMATED COST	$50,000.00
Assuming this would be very confusing to the voters of Jackson County Election Board's voting public, an educational process would need to occur.

ESTIMATED COST	$200,000.00
Assuming multiple changes in software related to voting equipment would need to occur.
ESTIMATED COST	$250,000.00
	$500,000.00
This amount is estimated costs by the Jackson County Board of Election Commissioners. More costs might be incurred if more responsibilities of this proposed petition fall to the local jurisdictions.

Officials from the Clay County Board of Election Commissioners indicated as these are written, they cannot see that there would be any cost associated with this petition.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners indicated that if this initiative petition were to become law it would increase the cost of the elections for the reasons listed below.

- The cost to conduct an election is $650,000. The State would be responsible for an increase in its pro-rata share based on the voter registrations.
- Six additional full time staff would be required at $40,000 each, including benefits ($40,000 x 6 = $240,000).
- Six additional seasonal staff of $30,000 per election times two state-wide elections per year ($60,000).
- Additional equipment of $20,000 for permanent staff and seasonal staff in order for them to be able to process the information as required.
- Voter education of $100,000 would be required to inform voters about the new law.

The total potential cost could be $1,070,000.

Additionally, they added security because with this volatile climate, and heightened threats they have already received they believe this will create even more unrest, which would require another $25,000 in security per elections up until the day of certification.

The State Auditor's office did not receive a response from Adair County, Boone County, Callaway County, Cass County, Cole County, Jackson County, Jasper County, St. Charles County, Taney County, the City of Cape Girardeau, the City of Columbia, the City of Joplin, the City of Kirksville, the City of Mexico, the City of Raymore, the City of St. Joseph, the City of St. Louis, the City of Springfield, the City of Union, the City of Wentzville, the City of West Plains, Cape Girardeau 63 School District, Hannibal 60 School District, Malta Bend R-V School District, Mehlville School District, Wellsville-Middletown R-1 School District, State Technical College of Missouri, University of Missouri, St. Louis Community College, and the Board of Election Commissioners City of St. Louis.

Fiscal Note Summary

State governmental entities estimate initial costs of $500,000 and ongoing costs of at least $100,000 annually. Local governmental entities estimate initial costs of at least $570,000, ongoing costs of at least $240,000 annually, and ongoing savings of at least $500 annually and $5,000 every general election year.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated this initiative petition is not projected to have a fiscal impact on their department/Missouri Highways and Transportation Commission.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to establishing Online Accounts for Politically Active Citizens will impact their Division of Information Technology. The division estimates construction of the website envisioned in this initiative will cost $528,524 with on-going yearly maintenance costs of $110,000.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated there is no fiscal impact on the courts.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated this petition would establish a system of legislative proxies, with each citizen able to assign a proxy to one senator and one representative, then each legislator casting votes in accordance with the number of proxies held. The governor's office will create and maintain the electronic proxy assignment system, but the Secretary of State will be responsible for voiding proxies of citizens who are no longer eligible voters due to death, incarceration, leaving the state, or otherwise becoming ineligible. Additionally, their office will also be required to notify citizens, in a manner of their choosing, when one of their assigned proxies leaves office for any reason. In order to provide up-to-date numbers of proxies per legislator to the General Assembly on a timely basis, they anticipate the need for a new Elections Specialist full-time employee (FTE) to handle this workload beginning in fiscal year (FY) 2025. Depending on the notification methods chosen by citizens, they may also incur significant mailing costs, but the amount of such potential printing and postage is unknown.

Each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In FY 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. Their office estimates $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no fiscal impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated we estimate this petition would have no additional costs or savings for their county.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county for this initiative petition proposing to amend Article III, version 2.

Officials from St. Louis County indicated there are no expected costs to their county.

Officials from the City of Jefferson indicated they see little to no fiscal impact to their city resulting from this initiative petition proposing to amend Article III, version 2.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this proposed amendment has no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated this proposal would have no fiscal impact on Platte County unless the Secretary of State interprets that removal of proxies for ineligible voters should fall on election authorities.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated:

Assuming the house/senate independent bipartisan citizens commission shall redistrict the house of representatives/senate lines, each election authority would have to incur costs associated with said redistricting and renaming of precincts, redrawing of all jurisdictional lines, mapping adjustments for the website and GIS consultant labor for their respective jurisdictions.
ESTIMATED COST	$50,000.00
Assuming this would be very confusing to the voters of Jackson County Election Board's voting public, an educational process would need to occur.
ESTIMATED COST	$200,000.00
Assuming multiple changes in software related to voting equipment would need to occur.
ESTIMATED COST	$250,000.00
	$500,000.00

This amount is estimated costs by the Jackson County Board of Election Commissioners. More costs might be incurred if more responsibilities of this proposed petition fall to the local jurisdictions.

Officials from the Clay County Board of Election Commissioners indicated as these are written, they can't see that there would be any cost associated with this petition.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners indicated that if this initiative petitions were to become law it would increase the cost of the elections for the reasons listed below.

- The cost to conduct an election is $650,000. The State would be responsible for an increase in its pro-rata share based on the voter registrations.
- Six additional full time staff would be required at $40,000 each, including benefits ($40,000 x 6 = $240,000).
- Six additional seasonal staff of $30,00 per election times two state-wide elections per year ($60,000).
- Additional equipment of $20,000 for permanent staff and seasonal staff in order for them to be able to process the information as required.
- Voter education of $100,000 would be required to inform voters about the new law.

The total potential cost could be $1,070,000.

Additionally, they added security because with this volatile climate, and heightened threats they have already received they believe this will create even more unrest, which would require another $25,000 in security per elections up until the day of certification.

The State Auditor's office did not receive a response from Adair County, Boone County, Callaway County, Cass County, Cole County, Jackson County, Jasper County, St. Charles County, Taney County, the City of Cape Girardeau, the City of Columbia, the City of Joplin, the City of Kirksville, the City of Mexico, the City of Raymore, the City of St. Joseph, the City of St. Louis, the City of Springfield, the City of Union, the City of Wentzville, the City of West Plains, Cape Girardeau 63 School District, Hannibal 60 School District, Malta Bend R-V School District, Mehlville School District, Wellsville-Middletown R-1 School District, State Technical College of Missouri, University of Missouri, St. Louis Community College, and the Board of Election Commissioners City of St. Louis.

Fiscal Note Summary

State governmental entities estimate initial costs of $500,000 and ongoing costs of at least $100,000 annually. Local governmental entities estimate initial costs of at least $300,000.

Article III of the Constitution is revised by amending Sections 1 and 22 to read as follows:

Section 1. (a) The legislative power shall be vested in a senate and house of representatives to be styled "The General Assembly of the State of Missouri."

(b) To ensure that all political power in Missouri is vested in and derived from the people and founded upon the will of the people only, from and after January 2, 2025, each citizen of Missouri who is eligible to vote shall be able to assign one proxy to any member of the Missouri senate, authorizing that senator to cast votes on their behalf, and one proxy to any member of the Missouri house of representatives, authorizing that representative to cast votes on their behalf. (c) Citizens of Missouri may assign their proxies either electronically, through a system of Online Accounts for Politically Active Citizens, or by means of a written (paper) proxy. Citizens may reassign a proxy at any time.

(d) The governor shall establish and maintain a system of Online Accounts for Politically Active Citizens to facilitate the assigning and reassigning of proxies electronically. The governor shall be responsible for ensuring the security of that system and for ensuring the privacy of citizens utilizing the system.

(e) On or before January 2, 2025, the Secretary of State shall create and make available to citizens of Missouri, both electronic and paper versions of a proxy form, a form for citizens to use to reassign their proxies, and a form for citizens to submit to notify the secretary of state if they move out of the state of Missouri or are no longer eligible to vote. When so notified, the Secretary of State shall void their proxies. The Secretary of State shall be responsible for promptly voiding the proxies of citizens who are no longer eligible to vote in Missouri due to being incarcerated or deceased. The Secretary of State shall be responsible for notifying citizens, in the manner in which they have indicated they prefer to be notified, when a legislator to whom they have assigned a proxy vacates her or his office for any reason.

(f) The General Assembly shall pass legislation providing penalties for forging or falsifying proxies, for offering money, or any other thing of value, to influence a citizen with regard to the assignment of their proxies, and for accepting money, or any other thing of value, in exchange for the assignment of a proxy.

Section 22. Every bill shall be referred to a committee of the house in which it is pending.

After it has been referred to a committee, [one-third of] the elected members of the respective houses by a vote of one-third or more shall have power to relieve a committee of further consideration of a bill and place it on the calendar for consideration. Each committee shall keep such record of its proceedings as is required by rule of the respective houses and this record and the recorded vote of the members of the committee shall be filed with all reports on bills.

Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, they expect that their office could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. However, if the enactment of this proposal were to result in substantial additional litigation, they may be required to request additional appropriations.

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated this will result in no fiscal impact for their department.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated this will have no fiscal impact upon their department.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated this initiative petition has no impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated this petition, if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated this proposal creates no direct obligations or requirements to their department that would result in a fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated they would not anticipate a direct fiscal impact from this proposal.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated subsection (f) indicates "the General Assembly shall pass legislation providing penalties for forging or falsifying proxies". Should this legislation pass, there is a $0 to unknown impact, dependent upon the penalties provided for at that time.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact for this initiative petition proposing to amend Article III, version 1.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety - Office of the Director indicated no impact for their department.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated no impact for their department.

Officials from the Governor's office indicated this proposal relating to establishing citizen representative voting proxies and Online Accounts for Politically Active Citizens will have a fiscal impact of $528,524 with ongoing costs of approximately $110,000 for maintenance.

This proposal also changes the language regarding the ability of the General Assembly to discharge bills from committee from "one-third of" members to "by a vote of one-third or more".

Officials from the Missouri House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated no adverse fiscal impact to their department would be expected because of this proposal.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated this initiative petition is not projected to have a fiscal impact on their department/Missouri Highways and Transportation Commission.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to establishing Online Accounts for Politically Active Citizens will impact their Division of Information Technology. The division estimates construction of the website envisioned in this initiative will cost $528,524 with on-going yearly maintenance costs of $110,000.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated there is no fiscal impact on the courts.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated this petition would establish a system of legislative proxies, with each citizen able to assign a proxy to one senator and one representative, then each legislator casting votes in accordance with the number of proxies held. The governor's office will create and maintain the electronic proxy assignment system, but the Secretary of State will be responsible for voiding proxies of citizens who are no longer eligible voters due to death, incarceration, leaving the state, or otherwise becoming ineligible. Additionally, their office will also be required to notify citizens, in a manner of their choosing, when one of their assigned proxies leaves office for any reason. In order to provide up-to-date numbers of proxies per legislator to the General Assembly on a timely basis, they anticipate the need for a new Elections Specialist full-time employee to handle this workload beginning in fiscal year (FY) 2025. Depending on the notification methods chosen by citizens, they may also incur significant mailing costs, but the amount of such potential printing and postage is unknown.

Each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In FY 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. Their office estimates $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no fiscal impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated they estimate this petition would have no additional costs or savings for their county.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county for this initiative petition proposing to amend Article III, version 1.

Officials from St. Louis County indicated there are no expected costs to their county.

Officials from the City of Jefferson City indicated they see little to no fiscal impact to their city resulting from this initiative petition proposing to amend Article III, version 1.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this proposed amendment has no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated this proposal would have no fiscal impact on their county unless the Secretary of State interprets that removal of proxies for ineligible voters should fall on election authorities.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated:

Assuming the house/senate independent bipartisan citizens commission shall redistrict the house of representatives/senate lines, each election authority would have to incur costs associated with said redistricting and renaming of precincts, redrawing of all jurisdictional lines, mapping adjustments for the website and GIS consultant labor for their respective jurisdictions.
ESTIMATED COST	$50,000.00
Assuming this would be very confusing to the voters of Jackson County Election Board's voting public, an educational process would need to occur.
ESTIMATED COST	$200,000.00
Assuming multiple changes in software related to voting equipment would need to occur.
ESTIMATED COST	$250,000.00
	$500,000.00
This amount is estimated costs by the Jackson County Board of Election Commissioners. More costs might be incurred if more responsibilities of this proposed petition fall to the local jurisdictions.

Officials from the Clay County Board of Election Commissioners indicated as these are written, they can't see that there would be any cost associated with this petition.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners indicated that if this initiative petition were to become law it would increase the cost of the elections for the reasons listed below.

- The cost to conduct an election is $650,000. The State would be responsible for an increase in its pro-rata share based on the voter registrations.
- Six additional full time staff would be required at $40,000 each, including benefits ($40,000 x 6 = $240,000).
- Six additional seasonal staff of $30,00 per election times two state-wide elections per year ($60,000).
- Additional equipment of $20,000 for permanent staff and seasonal staff in order for them to be able to process the information as required.
- Voter education of $100,000 would be required to inform voters about the new law.

The total potential cost could be $1,070,000.

Additionally, they added security because with this volatile climate, and heightened threats they have already received, they believe this will create even more unrest, which would require another $25,000 in security per elections up until the day of certification.

The State Auditor's office did not receive a response from Adair County, Boone County, Callaway County, Cass County, Cole County, Jackson County, Jasper County, St. Charles County, Taney County, the City of Cape Girardeau, the City of Columbia, the City of Joplin, the City of Kirksville, the City of Mexico, the City of Raymore, the City of St. Joseph, the City of St. Louis, the City of Springfield, the City of Union, the City of Wentzville, the City of West Plains, Cape Girardeau 63 School District, Hannibal 60 School District, Malta Bend R-V School District, Mehlville School District, Wellsville-Middletown R-1 School District, State Technical College of Missouri, University of Missouri, St. Louis Community College, and the Board of Election Commissioners City of St. Louis.

Fiscal Note Summary

State governmental entities estimate initial costs of $500,000 and ongoing costs of at least $100,000 annually. Local governmental entities estimate initial costs of at least $300,000.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated this petition would create a method for citizens to provide electronic statements of support for ballot initiatives in lieu of signing a paper petition. The governor's office will create and maintain the electronic support system, but the Secretary of State retains responsibility for processing the statements of support and applying them towards the sufficiency of the petition in question. Currently, their office uses an internal petition management system and so any modifications required to interface the two systems would be expected to use existing information technology resources. However, depending on the volume of electronic support statements submitted, it is possible that a new Elections Specialist full-time employee (FTE) may be required to handle the additional workload beginning in fiscal year (FY) 2025.

Each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In FY 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. Their office estimates $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this proposed amendment has no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the St. Louis County Election Board indicated no impact.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners indicated that if this initiative petition were to become law they anticipate this would increase the number of signatures they would verify. This would require that they hire 5-10 seasonal employees at $80,000 plus overtime for both seasonal and permanent staff. Online signatures are already illegible. This would most certainly increase the potential for fraud.
